REPORT THAT JAPANESE ARE ESTABLISHING A NAVAL BASE ON TURTLE ISLAND--JAPS SAY THEY ARE ONLY TRYING TO RAISE WRECKED WARSHIP.

(Special to The Daily News.)
Washington, April 17.—Considerable excitement has been caused here by the report that Japanese warships are establishing a naval base on Turtle Island, near where the Japanese cruiser Osama was wrecked. The contention of the Japanese is that they are attempting to raise the wrecked warship. It is said, however, that they have mined the harbor and that forces have been landed on Mexican territory.

Admiral Howard, commanding the Pacific fleet, has ordered the cruiser New Orleans to proceed to Turtle Bay and report.

DICK STILL SCARED.

It's a great thing to be able to scare your opponent. Once you have done that the rest is easy. A scared man has no fight in him. He begins to tremble at the knees and soon all his strength is gone. It's in just that place that the Liberals have Sir Richard McBride. A few weeks ago he decided to come and try his strength at the polls, but the Liberals presented such an array that Sir Richard was almost scared out of existence. As a result he has developed a bad chill, which is confirmed by the following despatch from London as published in the Province:

London, April 14.—Sir Richard McBride is confined to his room in his hotel with a bad chill and is unable to fulfil his engagement to see Mr. Lloyd George. His associates here say he certainly intends to stand in the forthcoming British Columbia elections.

POPULAR DANCE.

The Girls' Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire gave a dance last night in St. Andrew's Hall which was the last word in entertaining. The hall was beautifully decorated by a color scheme of pink and green streamers with a mingling of sweet peas and carnations, and was highly creditable to even such excellent taste as is possessed by Prince Rupert young ladies.

The refreshment table was also a dream. Overhead was a canopy of pink and green streamers, while the table itself was a mass of red and white carnations. All the refreshments were made by the young ladies of the chapter and were first-class in every respect.

Everybody, too, was there, and such a display of brilliant costumes one would travel for to see, each one looking just a little better than every other one.

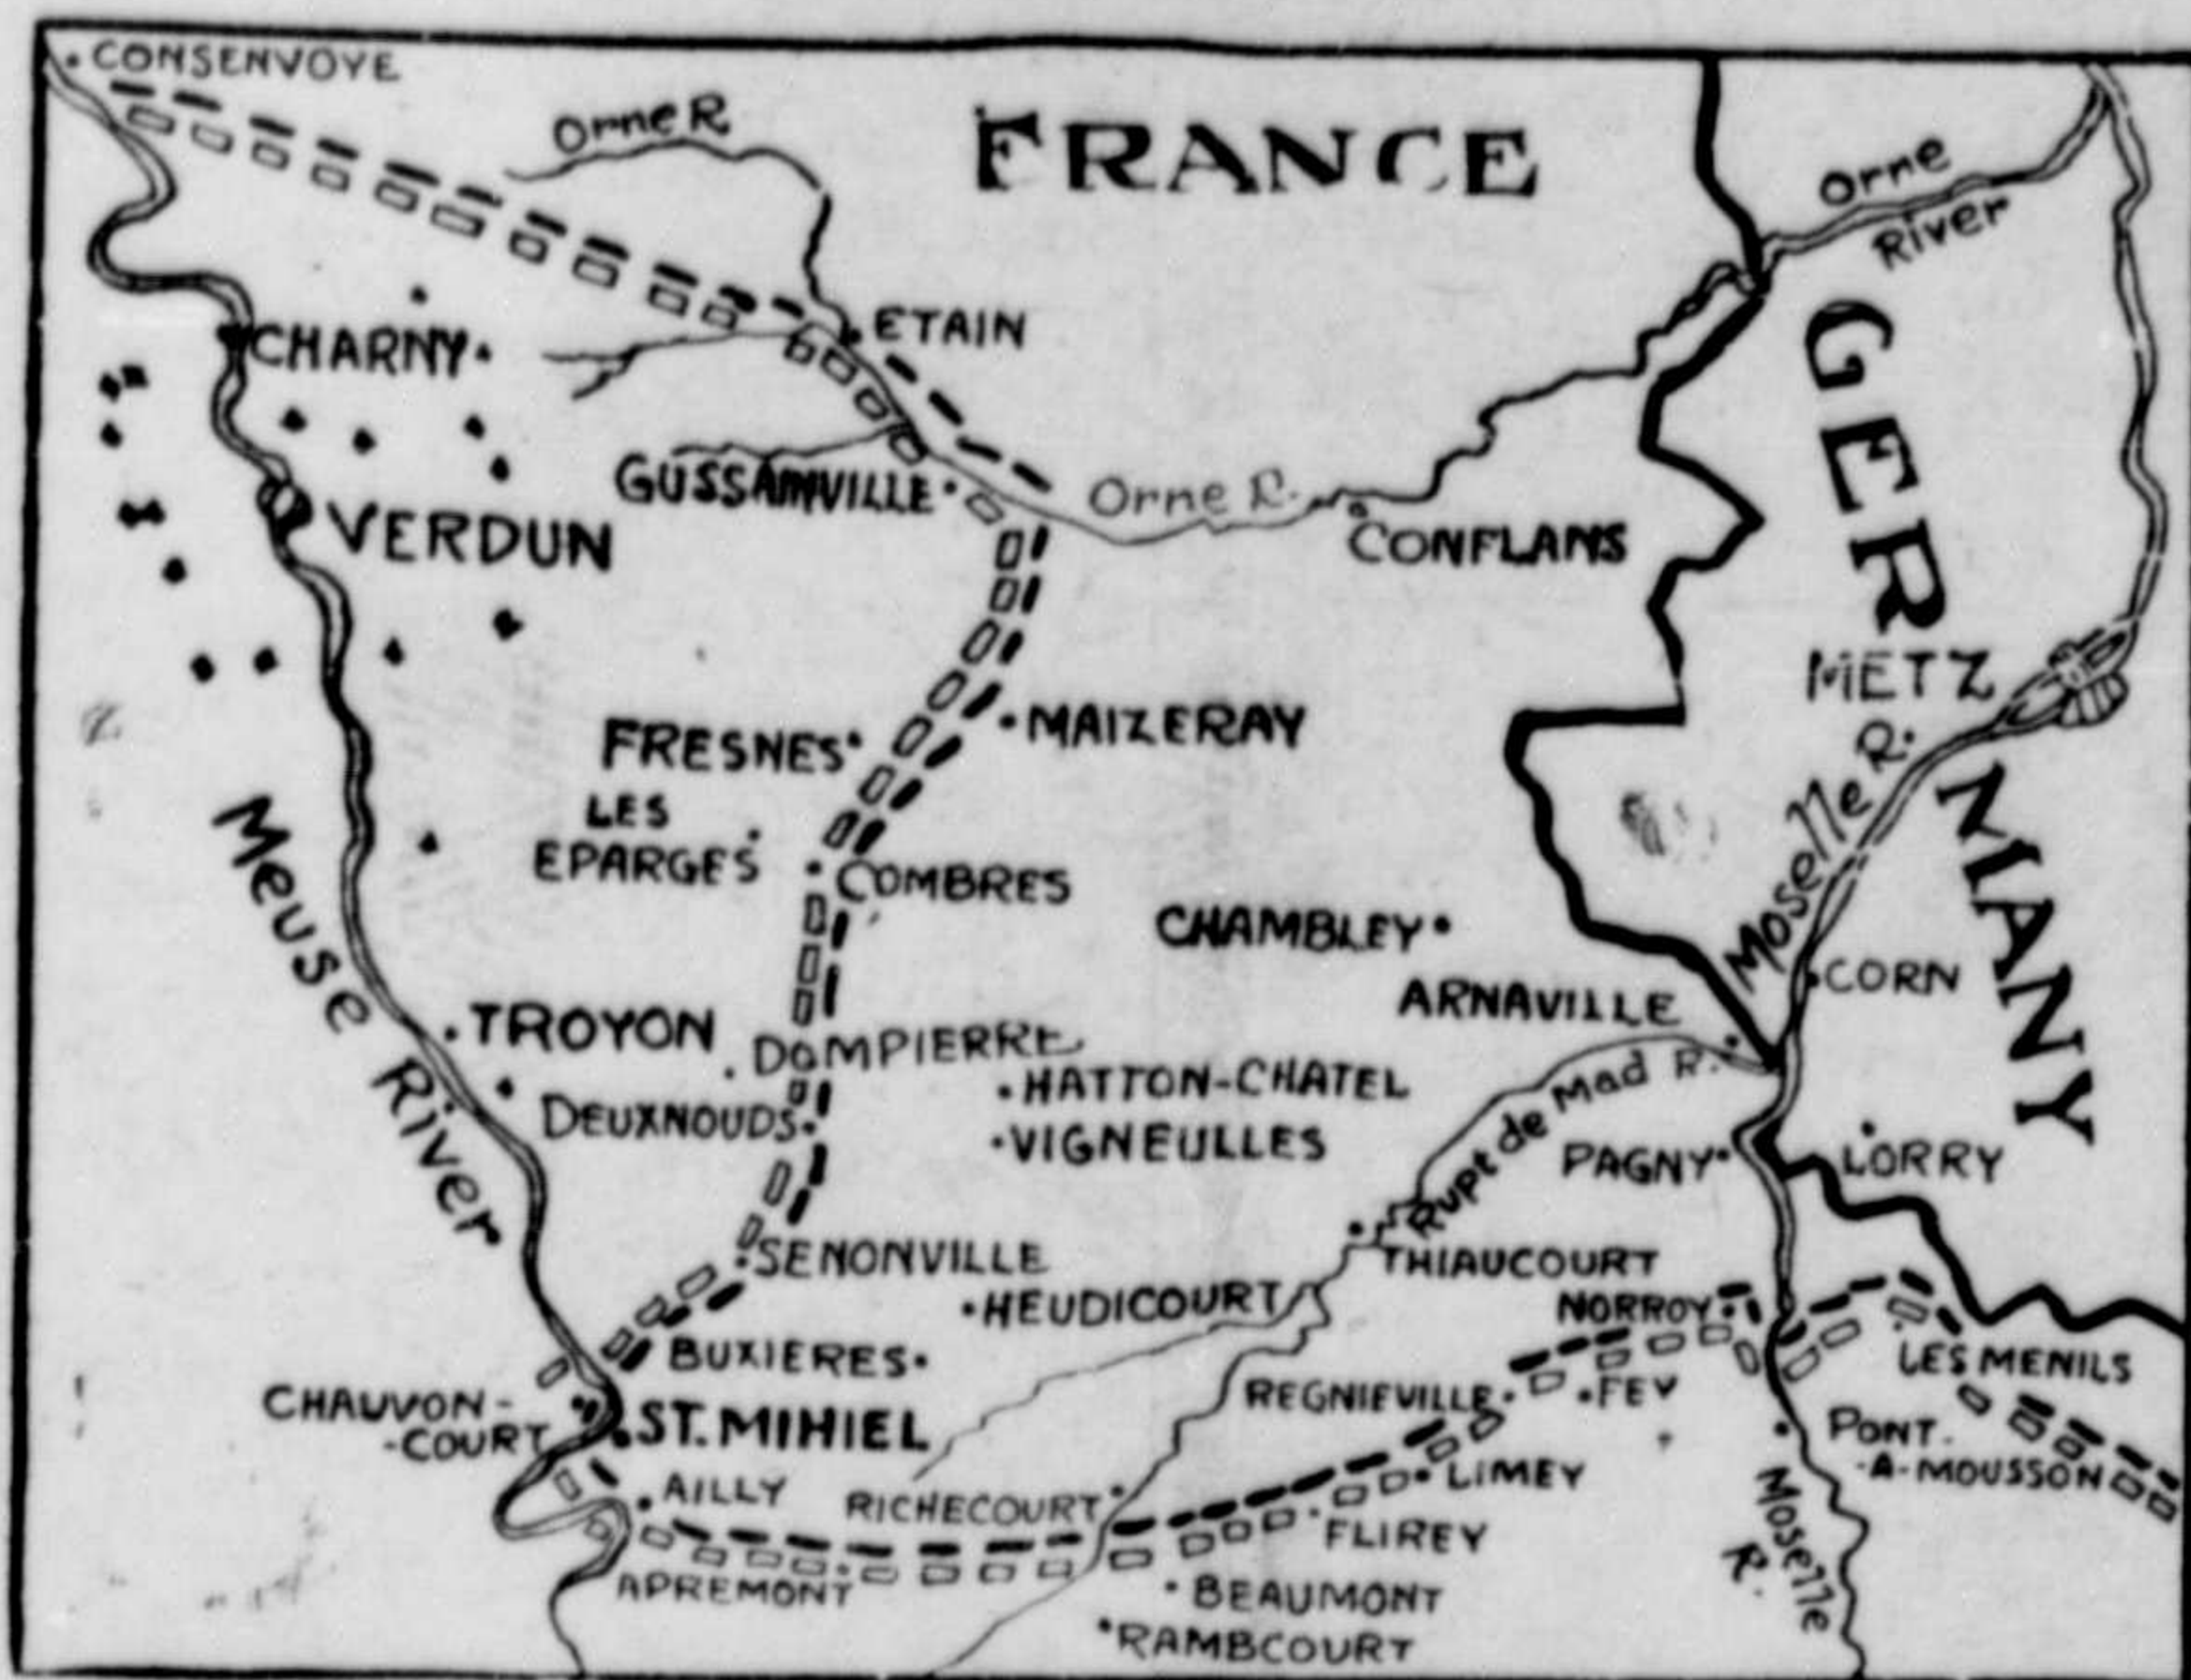

The Westholme Orchestra was there with bells and made the atmosphere tingle with their delightful music. Everybody came away feeling that they had one of the best times of the season.

The members of the Girls' Chapter who were responsible for the dance are as follows: Miss Taylor, regent; Miss Jenns, vice-regent; Miss King, treasurer; Miss M. H. Walker, secretary. Other members are Miss Stewart, Miss Irvine, Miss Brand, Miss Morrissey, Miss Suttaby, Miss Eason, Miss L. Macleod, Miss H. Macleod, Miss McGregor, Miss Barnsley, Miss Enoch, Miss Walker, Miss Carmichael, Miss Nickerson. The honorary regent is Mrs. Eggert.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE AND THE MILITIA SCANDALS

SOME MORE EVIDENCE ABOUT THE WAY THE COUNTRY WAS MILCHED OUT OF HUGE SUMS BY UNPRINCIPLED POLITICIANS — CORVEL ON THEIR TRAIL.

(Copyrighted.)
Somehow or other the public accounts committee resembles one of Cromwell's parliaments these days. Major General Sam's armed men drill under the very windows. The sergeant major barks his commands. "Form fours." "Swing your partners." "Double cross," or words to that effect. The air is tense with military authority. It looks as if the committee might be cut short almost any minute.

Meanwhile Carvell, M.P., ably assisted by his brigadiers, Kyte, Mackenzie and German, goes ahead with his task of unveiling the patriots. Carvell's theory is that when one hundred and fifty million dollars are to be spent on army supplies the occasion gives rise to two classes of patriots—those who pay the bills and those who put bills in to be paid. Those who bleed for their country and those who bleed it. It is with the latter class that the public accounts committee is chiefly concerned.

When the news got abroad that the government at Ottawa would have one hundred and fifty million dollars to redistribute, there was a great flutter among the patriots with things to sell. All over Canada there was anxious scrutiny of the patronage list, and patriots who found themselves not included hurriedly took a good Conservative or two into the game and prepared to receive contracts. Others who happened to be in the United States took measures to repatriate themselves temporarily. Others again tightened up their ranks by taking out charters and incorporating themselves as companies.

Their object as patriots was to stand between the government and the manufacturer to prevent any direct clash between the man who made the goods and the man who bought them, to ease the situation and head off conflict by throwing as many of their bodies as possible between the producer and the ultimate consumer. The government, not to be outdone, added other patriots who should save the country money by taking their ten per cent. off the top before the other fellows got their bit. In this way friction was avoided and all the patriots were satisfied except those who pay the taxes. For the last nine months patriots with a do-or-die light in their eyes have been charging the Capital. What they have been charging the Capital is the subject which the public accounts committee is now investigating.

Patriots as far away as New York sniffed the battle and remembered that they were Canadians again, notably Colonel John Wesley Allison, an old friend of Major General Sam's, who has put him at the job of buying ammunition for the British, Russian and Canadian governments in the United States. The colonel's efforts have met with success and he and his purchasing board have not reason to regret their patriotism. Orders for hundreds of rounds go through every week and in no case have the allies complained that they got their cartridges too cheap. Rumor has it that in some instances the spread between the price paid to the manufacturer and the price paid by the British government was seven dollars per thousand, but this only goes to show that a patriot's place is in the middle where the profits are thickest.

Honorary Major Thomas is another New York patriot with Canadian branches. He is cleaning up the Canadian motor transport problem for next to nothing—only the one and a half per cent. on the savings effected—but he is also a member of the New York purchasing board, which is outside the three-mile limit for Canadian patriotism, and naturally he gets more out of it from that end. The public accounts committee has no fault to find with what Major Thomas has

DARDANELLES BOMBARDMENT HAS BEEN RESUMED BY ALLIES

FAVORABLE CHANGE IN WEATHER IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE RESUMPTION — TEN BATTLESHIPS ENTER GULF OF SAROS AND DESTROY TURKISH CAMP.

(Special to The Daily News.)
London, April 17.—The bombardment of the Dardanelles has been resumed owing to the weather being favorable. Ten battleships have entered the Gulf of Saros and destroyed the Turkish camp. The occupation of the Mytilene Islands by the Allies is imminent. A French cruiser sup-

SAME OLD ARGUMENT.

The only answer the Conservatives can give to the charges of graft that are leveled against them is that some former Liberal Government had also done some things that were not "up and above board." Well, what has that to do with the case in point. If Liberals have done wrong in the past they were made to pay for it. But that doesn't excuse the present Government that has robbed the country through the purchase of military supplies. When a government has been caught at robbery, and that at a time when the Empire is fighting for existence, it is not enough to hurl them from power; they should be put behind the bars. Decent government will never come until terror is driven into the hearts of corrupt politicians. The time for that may soon come. Let every patriotic citizen be ready to strike the vital blow.

EDITORIALS

An unprincipled and unworthy attack was made recently upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier by some of the campaign literature of the Conservative party. Dodgers were sent over the country to the effect that Sir Wilfrid was untrue to the British Empire in her hour of need; that he had refused to stomp Quebec in the interests of recruits; and that he "cared not a whit for the Empire." Sir Wilfrid brought the matter up in the House, and although Premier Borden disclaimed all responsibility and denied the assertion, he did not say that he would have it withdrawn. Such base attacks on a man who has given his life to the Empire and who has on all occasions urged his fellow countrymen to assist in the war, is unworthy of any decent citizen. Sir Wilfrid will live in history as a great patriot long after his mean attackers shall have disappeared in their infamy.

Profiting by the nation's discredit is severely and unconsciously arraigned by an appeal freely displayed in British taverns. It tells the public that the nation gains a half-penny on every half-pint of beer sold, and asks everyone to be patriotic and strengthen the country by drinking the national beverage as usual. The dilemma of politicians who want to get money out of the people without letting them know their loss or by taking advantage of a popular antipathy has promoted national partnership with many nefarious lines of business. As soon as any means of gain becomes unpopular or is held up to popular opprobrium it is regarded as the politician's opportunity for levying taxation. A popular tax is regarded with much greater favor than a stimulating or even a morally defensible tax. As the liquor traffic has fallen more and more into disfavor the opportunity has been eagerly seized to impose heavier and heavier taxation on it.

While the restraining influence of such taxation is disappointing, one certain result has been a national partnership in the discredited business. The appeal issued, and the bald, unpalatable truth on which it is based, go to show that the immoral influence of such taxation greatly outweighs the moral influence. The more persistently it is pointed out that the taxation of the liquor traffic makes every citizen a partner, the less dependence will be placed on this means of suppression. Excessive taxation has had and still has the support of many earnest workers in the cause of temperance. The appeal of the British liquor sellers will no doubt have the effect of diverting effort toward more effective means of restriction. And the British Government may find a means of taking the half-penny or more from the wealth now wasted in each half-pint of beer without subjecting the contributor to the weakening and demoralizing effect of the beverage. The liquor business makes work, but it does not make wages. It is only as work makes wages that it sustains the worker and the nation.—Toronto Globe.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE AND THE MILITIA SCANDALS

(Continued From Page One.) done for Canada. His evidence proves that he was saving his percentage many times over. Major Thomas does it by brushing aside all the middlemen except himself. This is not the Canadian way, which is to let all the lodge members get a look in.

Honorary Major Thomas Russell, formerly secretary to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, now the president of the Russell Motor Company, was one of the first Toronto patriots to come forward with offers to serve his country in any place but the firing line. Major General Sam made him an honorary major on the spot—his idea is to encourage patriots by means of commissions of one sort or another—and told him to go as far as he liked in straightening out the motor problem. Major Russell not only straightened it out in Canada but also in the United States by securing the American agencies for the Russell Motor Company and selling American trucks to the Canadian government at list prices. His company realized $45,000 profit on these transactions. Major Russell told his tale of derring-do to the committee with such smoothness and finish that he was congratulated by the chairman. Major General Sam also handed out a few official words of praise, but did not emphasize the fact that Major Thomas, of New York, had gone over the same ground two months later and had saved $200,000 on the same quantity of motors. Whereupon Major General Sam exchanged the native-born patriot for the New York sample and Major Thomas is now the candy boy with the minister of militia.

Another patriot heard the cry as far away as British Columbia. No sooner had the call to arms sounded than Sir Richard McBride looked around for something to sell his country. The best he could do was two rejected submarines, built for Chile, but laid up on account of kidney trouble at the Seattle dry dock. These two submarines, which had a habit of remaining at the bottom once they ducked, were on the bargain counter for $750,000, but Sir Richard's patriotism was so brisk that he landed them for Canada for $1,450,000, the money being paid in three drafts, two of them going to the Electric Boat Company, of New York, the original builders, and the other draft for $249,961 going to J. B. Patterson, manager of the Seattle dry dock, who negotiated the sale with Premier McBride. When the Auditor General stated these facts to the committee he did not attempt to explain why the money was split three ways nor why $250,000 of it went to the dry pretty stiff commission for one dock man at Seattle. It seems a man to handle all by himself. A possible explanation is that the submarines, being thin skinned, were sensitive to drafts of over a million dollars. Sir Richard made a flying trip to Ottawa recently, but did not appear before the public accounts committee. He was so beset by reporters that he slipped out next day in disguise—that is to say he got his hair cut.

Yes, Major General Sam has his hands full regulating the patriots. So many men have come to him saying they wanted to do something for their country whereas they really wanted to do their country for something that the Minister of Militia has grown peevish and when the auditor general confronts him, as he did the other day, with another patriot at work the Major General retorts, "I know nothing about you, and I care less." Some people have put this remark down to sheer wantonness on the Major General's part, but the truth is that Sam is worried to death with patriots who simply won't keep out of the trough. No wonder his nerves are frazzled.

The patriotism of W. F. Garland, M. P., is well known. According to the evidence before the public accounts committee, the member for Carleton took such a fatherly interest in a fifteen dollar a week drug clerk in his employ, named Powell, that he had him placed on the patronage list, from which point of vantage Powell landed a forty thousand dollar contract for medical supplies, on which the overcharges were nine thousand dollars. Nudged by conscience and the Justice Department, Powell coughed up the money instead of keeping it to put him through college. It is the only conscience money so far, and Garland, M. P. acquires merit among patriots for the spirit of sacrifice his drug clerk develops when caught with the goods. In some quarters there is a disposition to censure Mr. Garland for coarse work and for breaking the eleventh commandment but the protest is not strong enough to cause him to resign his seat in Parliament and throw away his chances of being nominated again.

Brushing aside the patriots who sold horses which they did not deliver, or substituted old skates for the horses they sold, or who bought horses for the government of which they have lost the record, or who palmed off split leather shoes with glued inwards for storm calf—brushing aside, I repeat, all these patriots, of whom the half has never been told, though much has been written, we come to the binoculars for the officers, the most pertinent example of which is the deal put over by Thomas Birkett, of the Keystone Supply Company, of Ottawa. The Keystone Supply Company was organized immediately after the defeat of the Liberals in September, 1911, and has never done business with anybody since except the Conservative Government. PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE AND THE MILITIA SCANDALS

pany was formed with only one customer in view, and to give that customer its due, the demand has always been equal to the Keystone Supply Company.

It was natural, therefore, when the war broke out and the Government was known to have sugar in the barrel that the Keystone Supply Company should be anxious to get its hooks in. It might have been jam or hay or green cheese or anything else, for the Keystone Supply Company manufactures nothing. Its business is to supply things on commission.

But in this case it happened to be binoculars because the goods were easily handled and the prices large. But there were difficulties in the way, the chief of them being the Ellis Brothers, of Toronto, who had a first skimming of ten per cent. off the top, and who were supposed to have twice that much by breaking the ring price for binoculars.

The Keystone Supply Company had to get past the "Ellis boys," as Major-General Sam calls them, before it could load the Militia Department with cheap glasses at a high figure. To make a long story short, the Keystone Supply Company did this by flim-flaming the Ellis brothers and holding back the original invoices, so that a glass costing $9.75 to make was ultimately sold to the Government for $52. As a result of this surprising discrepancy between prime cost and retail price Col. Hurdman has been suspended for "lack of judgment," but that does not make the case any the less interesting.

The Ellis brothers, who were paid ten per cent. to shoo the other patriots off, should have kept closer watch. Perhaps they couldn't. Perhaps the pressure was too great. At any rate, patriots gathered round those binoculars like flies around a cake. How many persons do you suppose intervened between producer and consumer in the case of the binoculars? Just eight—count 'em—eight! Here they are: Manufacturer, New York importer; New York broker; Bilsky, an Ottawa jeweller; Birkett, who bought from Bilsky; Taylor, whose connection with binoculars I don't remember except that, like the little piggie-wiggie, he wanted his too; an official in the Militia Department who had to be greased $2 a glass; the Ellis brothers' 10 per cent. right off the top; the Government of Canada. Some patriots, eh?

Nerve Energy and Eyeglasses.

A constant dropping wears away a stone. A slight eyestrain injures the health because it is constant. The strain which first manifests itself as a slight discomfort should be remedied at once. This we guarantee to do with glasses. Consultation free. Delays are dangerous.

BOARD OF TRADE.
The executive council of the Board of Trade met yesterday and made arrangements to go after part of the army contracts for shells. Mr. Crowell of the Drydock said he could arrange to handle a contract. The other local machine shops approve of the Drydock getting the contract and hope to secure a portion of the work by subletting. Mr. Wright, the commissioner, and Mr. Garde have the matter in hand. The Board also decided to get in touch with Seward and see what could be done in the way of getting trade.
Sufficient applications have not come in to warrant the Frisco trip and it was postponed indefinitely.

ADMIRALTY IGNORES THE REPORTED FIGHT

London, April 15.—Reports that a German squadron escaped the blockade and was engaged by British warships south of Bergen, have been received from a number of Scandinavian ports. The Admiralty refused to comment. Scandinavian captains from Copenhagen reported sighting from fifteen to twenty-five German warships in the North Sea, four hundred and fifty miles from Heligoland on Wednesday and Thursday. Norwegian papers at Bergen printed stories and rumors that a naval battle had been fought off Sartor Island. The stories declared that cannonading was heard, gun fire seen on the horizon and windows in houses on the Island.

KETCHIKAN FISH.

V. A. Cole returned yesterday from Ketchikan, where he made arrangements for a series of baseball games with a local team. The first will be played here on July 1.
Mr. Cole says Ketchikan realizes that Prince Rupert has them beat in the fishing business. They will now try to get a terminal rate for Ketchikan from the G.T.P.

* It is interesting to notice *

* that Sir Wilfrid Laurier *
* is still doing a lot of *
* boosting for Prince Rupert *
* at Ottawa. Not only is he the * * father of the railway, but he * * has given us the drydock, the *
* marine station and hospital, *
* and he is now saying that we *
* ought to have a subsidized *
* steamship service to the * * East. However, it is not the * * intention to make political *
* capital out of this, but rather *
* to show that the present *
* Government has now a *
* splendid opportunity to show *
* that they too are friendly to *
* Prince Rupert. A million dol- *
