THRILLING DESCRIPTION OF GREAT CANADIAN CHARGE

VANCOUVER BOY GIVES THRILLING DESCRIPTION OF CHARGE BY THE CANADIANS WHEN THE GERMANS BROKE THROUGH AT LANGEMARCK.

Through the kindness of Mrs. H. R. Grant, we are able to publish the following very interesting letter. It was written by Wm. Fiddis, of Vancouver, to his brother Bert, who spent two weeks visiting in Prince Rupert last winter.
V. A. D. Hospital, Abbey Lodge, Chislehurst, Kent, England, May 9, 1915.
Dear Bert—You want to know all about the firing line, Bert, do you? Well, I will tell you where the Canadians made their name, and how it was done. I will give you my own experience.
I was billeted at Ypres, and was just finished with my day's work and having a run along the canal bank, when I met the Algerians, running for dear life. They told me the Germans had broken through, and were coming on us. I started back to get my pack, etc. I had a rifle with me. You see, we were just out of the trenches, and that was why we were not in the firing line at the time. Well, on my way back a lively "Jack Johnson" went right the roof of my billet and blew the roof right off. When I got there it was impossible to enter the house, as the stairs had come down. It was then I heard that the Canadians had got the order to stop the German's advance, and to drive them back beyond a certain woods, if possible, which was rather a tall order. Well, to be right, I should have joined the Q. M. stores—that is where we always report to—but I had always said if there was anything like an advance being made, I was going to be in the firing line. So instead of going to the stores I went to Captain Rae and asked to be taken on the strength of his company for the day, or night, I ought to say. Well, that is the way I happened to be in the charge.

We fell in and set off through the town. It was getting dark by this time and the shells were dropping fast and thick, but most of them over our heads. We marched a couple of miles before we got the order to extend, and in extended order the 16th and 10th Battalions were told to make the charge, backed up by some other battalions in the rear. We advanced about 1,000 yards, and then came the charge. We charged about 250 yards. Just before we charged, they opened fire on us. No one could believe what it was like, Bert. They had dozens of Maxims and they made the air hum. It was just like a heavy hail storm. How we ever lived through it is a marvel to me. It seemed to be impossible to

SEVERE TYPHOID EPIDEMIC ATTACKS CONSTANTINOPLE

THREATENED STOPPAGE OF WATER SUPPLY—GERMAN FAMILIES LEAVING—ITALIANS ADVANCING ALONG ISONZO—GOEBEN CAPTAIN RETIRES.

(Special to The Daily News.)
London, June 8.—An epidemic of typhoid has broken out in Constantinople amongst the troops and civilians. Seventy-five physicians have succumbed. The waterworks are threatened with a stoppage owing to a shortage of coal. German families are leaving.

Italians Advance.
Rome, June 8.—The Italian troops continue to advance, taking positions along the Isonzo River beyond the Caparetto Mountains and threatening Tomlino. They are forcing a passage of the Isonzo River.

Goeben Captain Retires.
Athens, June 8.—A quarrel between Captain Von Mueller, of the Goeben, and Admiral Souchon, of the Turco-German fleet, has resulted in the retirement of Von Mueller on the ground that he was responsible for the irreparable damage done to the German cruiser Goeben.

TREASURY CERTIFICATES.

At the City Council last night, J. M. Clancy, local manager for the Bank of Montreal, brought in a telegram he had just received from Montreal stating that it would be impossible to renew all of the treasury certificates, but that they would try to arrange for 75 per cent of the amount, the bank meantime taking care of the interest and discount.

Alderman Montgomery suggested that the figures be made public, so that the people may know what is being done.
Alderman Edge stated that Alderman Montgomery knew all the facts.
Alderman Montgomery replied that the people have a right to know, and asked that the documents be read. He characterized the proceedings as a series of blunders.
The Mayor stated that the Council would discuss matters with Mr. Clancy at a private meeting in his office.

THE BALTIC STRUGGLE.

Perhaps the most welcome of yesterday's encouraging war dispatches was that which reported that the German fleet had left the shelter of the Kiel Canal. To have read that it had engaged the British fleet in the North Sea would have been still more satisfactory; however, it is something to know that it has moved.

The Russians have been making things pretty warm around Libau lately, and, with Italy getting busy to the south, were liable to make things still livelier. If Italy's entrance into the struggle has helped to stir the German fleet into action it has done effective work already. If a few British submarines can worm their way into the Baltic in the next few days, it may become very interesting to the Germans. In the Mediterranean and the Dardanelles, British submarines have shown what they are capable of, and nothing would shake things up in Berlin so much as the loss of a few more battleships. Russia's naval strength in the Baltic is rather an unknown quantity, but it will not be surprising if she is able to regain some of the prestige which she lost in meeting the Japs.

If Holland and Denmark were to enter the lists on the side of the Allies now, it would facilitate matters considerably. Those little nations could do comparatively little fighting, but it would cut off an important source of supply for Germany; allow a close blockade of the River Scheldt; make for a combined land and sea attack on Antwerp, and allow British submarines to be transported over land to the Baltic.

If Holland and Denmark make the move, it will hasten the end of the war by months, and will ultimately be for the benefit of both countries, as anything approaching a Prussianized Europe will spell ruin to these small nations.

SECRET OF THE BOOTS.

Our political paradox, secrecy in public affairs, is roundly and properly condemned by the Toronto Telegram, a staunch Conservative newspaper, in regard to the secret boot specification. There are hundreds of men in Toronto who would know at once whether boot specifications were right or wrong. Hon. A. E. Kemp, head of the Purchasing Commission, is not one of them, unless he has had some experience that has escaped his biographers. Yet he presumes to keep the people who furnish the money, whose interest is as deep as his own, and whose knowledge is far greater, in ignorance as to the specifications. One of the experts at the Parliamentary inquiry swore that leather built up of thin splits gummed together was better than genuine kip. It is not recorded that Hon. A. E. Kemp laughed when he heard or read it. He has given no such evidence of special knowledge. It is well that the vigorous condemnation of his secrecy, when everything is to be gained and nothing lost by publicity, has come from a newspaper politically favorable to his party. It frees criticism of the suspicion of party bias.

An excuse can be found for secrecy after the bogus boots were supplied. It would give an enemy a strategical advantage to know that our troops were poorly equipped in that regard. Such knowledge would have been as valuable as information regarding a shortage or defect in arms or ammunition. The weak spot in an army should always be concealed from the enemy, and if our men had gone at once to the front their weakness would have been an incapacity for marching owing to defective footwear. At the present stage there is no such excuse for secrecy. Publicity will reveal no secret to the enemy, but will avert the danger of developing something to conceal. Hon. A. E. Kemp is a man of recognized business ability. The public expects him to devote that ability to the public interest, and he can do so in this regard only by full publicity. With regard to general secrecy in public affairs, it is the duty of the press to end it by making it intolerable to the public.—Toronto Globe.

City Council Notes

The residents on Donald Street, who want a sidewalk, are to be allowed to construct one, the city supplying the lumber.

The Board of Works reported to the Council last night that they have four unemployed horses. The Council decided that these be sold.

The City Council has decided to employ a salaried manager for the City Market, and that no commission agent will be allowed to sell in the market.

A letter was read at the City Council last night from J. R. Beatty asking for an increased water supply to the Provincial government wharf. The matter was referred to the Fishery Committee for report.

A request by the residents in Section Two for light and phone extensions was referred to the Light Committee at the Council meeting last night.

J. McAleenan has applied to the Council for permission to erect a refreshment stand at the Recreation Park. The Parks Committee agreed to grant permission provided the stand meets with their approval.

Some persons always seem to be groping in the darkness that precedes dawn.

ALD. MONTGOMERY ASKS MORE QUESTIONS

The city clerk reported that he had been asked questions by Alderman Montgomery, and had handed them to the Mayor, who refused to answer them.

Alderman Montgomery pointed out that he did not ask the questions of the Mayor, but of the City Clerk. The questions were in relation to the cost of the Mayor's last trip, and the financial standing of the city.

Alderman Montgomery stated that he asked the questions in the public interest, as he thought the people ought to know how their money was being squandered in these hard times. He pointed out that the financial position of the city had been discussed all over the country, and the people ought to be told exactly how matters stand. If the adverse reports are untrue, the city solicitor should be instructed to take action.

Alderman Maitland remarked that the reports were both good and bad, and that the matter should not be discussed at present.

Alderman Montgomery asked if the Council intended to slide the matter over without making a report. He alleged that the report which appeared in The Empire was misleading and untruthful, and that it was up to the Council to tell the people the truth.

Alderman Edge said that Alderman Montgomery had been present at all the meetings and knew all the facts. The city has nothing to hide, and a public report will be made when the proper time comes.

Alderman Montgomery stated that when $250 of the public funds had been spent, the people were entitled to know why and where it had been spent. He did not feel that he should beg or buy space from the newspapers in order to inform the public on matters which should be made public by the proper officials in the Council chamber. He remarked that if there is nothing to hide, it will serve no good purpose to keep it dark.

In reference to the reason for the Mayor's trip, Alderman Montgomery said that Alderman Edge had distinctly stated that they had got the Mayor out of the way until they put the financial deal through.

Alderman Edge denied having made such a statement.

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-lives"

BRONTE, ONT., OCT. 31st, 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with Lumbago brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-lives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy. My spine suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working, but "Fruit-a-lives" remedied it for me. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from Kidney and Bladder Trouble to use "Fruit-a-lives".

come through it alive. They were entrenched and we were in the open; so you can have an idea of what it was like. Our boys were dropping all over the place. One shot knocked my cap off. Another broke the butt of my rifle, and another ripped my tunic right along the side. They did not move until we were within about ten yards of them. Then they up and ran for it. It was as light as day by this time, with the star shells they put up, which were still floating in the air. I got my first man right in the trench. He was trying to climb over the back and I was standing on the sandbags on the front. I made a pin cushion of him, but he was farther off than I thought he was. The result was that I fell into the trench, bringing him in with me on the end of my rifle, and there I was jammed. It did not take me long, though to get free; only I had to leave my bayonet there as I could not get it out. I got over the back of the trench and into the wood. It was here the Germans found they had made a mistake, and waited too long. The woods were full of creepers and they could hardly get through. We were on them before they had gone any distance. The first one I got here was a big, bull-headed fellow standing about six feet two. When he saw me he threw down his rifle—but he was too late. A dead German is the best German.

I don't know much that happened after that, until I was through the other side of the woods. There, I managed to pick off two of them as they ran for it. The funny thing was, I was as cool as if I was on the range. We advanced about 1,000 yards on the other side, but had to come back again, as our flanks did not come up. We came back as far as the woods and started digging ourselves in. It was while on this job I got my last man. I could hear a couple of them talking in a small fringe of trees on our left. I told the paymaster—he was the only officer I could find, and he was shot later on—but he could not hear them. Then I saw one of them against the skyline, and brought him down. When we went over we found one wounded and one dead. The only German that looks good to me is the dead ones, Bert. It is the same with all our boys after what we have seen.

Just before daylight we got reinforcements and found the best position we could hold was in the trenches the Germans had dug, so we slipped back into them. It was just a little after daylight that I got hit here. They were shelling us all morning, and they had got the range down pat. Nearly every one burst just over us. One of them got me at about 3:30. I stuck it out for about four hours, and then I had to give in. When I made my way to the dressing station, Bert, you should have heard the shots traveling about me. They were firing from three sides, and seemed determined to get me, but the luck was with me. You get so you don't care a rap whether they get you or not. I had a rather rotten experience, though, here. As I was making my way down, one of the boys that was hit the night before asked me to help him. He was lying right out in the open, so the Red Cross men could not get at him, so I helped him to his feet and started off with him. But we had not gone many yards before he had the top of his head blown off. The shot passed the back of my head and got his. I did not see it, but I felt it all over me. I just let him drop, and made the best pace I could. I got to the dressing station, all right, without being hit.

While I was in the dressing station, which was an old barn behind the firing line, being attended to the Germans started shelling it. A shell came through the roof, but all the damage it did was to kill a wounded German that had been taken in the night before.

I left No. 1 dressing station the first chance I got, you may be sure, but had not been long in No. 2 when they started shelling it. No. 2 is about 2,000 yards farther back. I stayed there until dark, but when the Red Cross wagons came, about twenty all together, there were so many stretcher cases that we, myself and two other boys offered to walk to No. 3, which was about two miles farther on. Getting there, we found the place packed to the door, with cases mostly worse than our own. So again I offered to walk to the next station, which was at Popperhinghe, a distance of six miles. You may have an idea of what we felt like. For myself, I had lost a lot of blood, had no sleep for three days, and nothing to eat or drink for over thirty-six hours. I was feeling hardly fit for it, and my nerves were beginning to give way. Anyway, we set off, and had to go through Ypres, right through the square; and I can tell you, it was some test for our nerves. They were planting in the "Jack Johnsons" one after another. Glass was flying through the air from all directions, but we got through all right. One of the boys got his leg cut, but it was nothing much.

We got to Popperhinghe all right, but all in. There they gave us some Oxo, which was very much appreciated. They dressed our wounds and sent us on our way by motor. We stopped at quite a number of places to get dressed, the names of which I could not give. We had an accident on the way; the ambulance ran into a transport wagon, which cost us a couple of hours, but that did not matter much, as no one was hurt. On the following day we reached Boulogne by train, from where, after being dressed, we were sent over the water.

That is about all there is to tell, Bert. I suppose you will think us a lot of brutes, but if you saw some of the sights I have seen, it would harden your heart so you would not care what happened.

Your loving brother,
"BILL."

CANADIAN AVIATOR DESTROYS ZEPPELIN

London, June 8.—For the first time on record, one of the German Zeppelins has been destroyed by an aviator in an aeroplane.

R. J. Warford, a young Canadian sub-lieutenant in the royal navy, is somewhere within the British lines, while the Zeppelin he brought down lies in ruins, sprawled on the roof and the grounds of an orphanage near Ghent. The Zeppelin fell to the ground, a blazing mass, after having been struck.

Its crew, composed of twenty-eight men, were all killed. There were also killed, several occupants of the orphanage building on which the Zeppelin fell when it was brought to the earth.

Real repentance is seldom of the foghorn variety.
