DOLLY VARDEN MINE Largest on Coast

Is now Shipping Ore Regularly to the Smelter at Anyox and Highgrade to Tacoma; 3,500 feet of Tunnelling

The mine that made Alice Arm famous and that inspires confidence in the future of the mining industry in British Columbia is the famous Dolly Varden silver mine of Alice Arm, B. C. This is the largest silver mine on the coast. It has over four thousand feet of underground workings already and if the lower levels prove as rich as those higher up, the property will prove to be a very valuable one.

The Dolly Varden mine is situated about seventeen and a half miles up the Kitsault River and is 1,700 feet above sea level. It has a series of five tunnels at various levels and these are connected by "raises," the ore being stopped between Number Four Tunnel and the surface. It has installed 3,600 feet of tunnelling and 800 feet of raising.

In July the total output of ore was 5,600 tons, all of which was sent to the smelter at Anyox. In addition to this, however, there was shipped a quantity of high-grade direct to the Tacoma smelter. The shipments, for August have been less than for the previous month owing to the washout on the railway, which held up the work considerably. In spite of that, 4,500 tons have been sent down to tidewater. On good days the mine ships 250 tons of ore.

Corley Declares Evidence In Liquor Case is False

Defense Declares No Liquor was on Premises at Royal Hotel; Chief Vickers is Called

Evidence for the defence and argument of counsel was heard this morning in the Kenneth McKay liquor selling case and adjournment has been made until September 7, to allow the court stenographer to extend the notes. The Miller case was also called this morning, but was adjourned until tomorrow morning, as W. E. Williams, counsel for the defence, had not time to proceed this morning. Tomorrow morning the S. A. Corley selling case will also come up. The evidence in it will be similar to that submitted in the McKay case.

Edward (Slim) Matson was the first witness for the defence in the McKay hearing. His evidence was that he had spent all the evening of Friday, August 20, out "having a time" with the accused who was alleged to have made the sale in question on that night. He and the accused were quite chummy and spent much of their spare time in each other's company. They had made the round of some of the bars and had then gone down the line. They had returned some time in the morning after midnight. Caruso, the other bartender, had been at the Royal Bar that night.

City Solicitor Hooper brought out in cross-examination the evidence that the witness was not clear as to any other time he and accused had spent together since August 20. He was not even sure of what they had done that night but he was sure that McKay had not been on shift at the Royal bar.

He remembered the night in question so well for he had quit two nights before. They had had nothing besides beer to drink in the down town bars and had not had Scotch until later. He was not so very drunk when he returned from "the line."

Corley's Evidence.

S. A. Corley, the proprietor of the Royal bar, was the next witness. "The evidence of Smith and Money is absolutely false," he swore in evidence, "in regard to getting booze at the Royal Bar. Caruso was on shift on Friday night. I remember this on August 17, Zarelli and I dissolved our partnership and on the next day 'Slim' quit. On the morning of August 19 I woke Caruso up and told him to go to work that morning and Kenny worked that night and the next morning. Friday night and the next morning Caruso worked.

My instructions were that there was no booze to be allowed in the Royal Hotel and these detectives are swearing a lie. This Wilson's liquor can be got in many places in town. I remember seeing the detective, Money in Fitz's cigar store, but I cannot swear seeing Smith at any time."

Cross Examined.

Cross examined by Mr. Hooper, Corley stated that he had known Caruso since his return from overseas. He had left the bar in charge of McKay on the Monday night following, when he was away for he felt that McKay was an older and more experienced bartender than Caruso and not because he distrusted Caruso. He had not had a bottle like the one in court in the lane behind his premises on or about August 21.

He had helped Jim Calderone to order about $1,000 worth of liquor and some of it had been Wilson's. He might even have had some of that kind in his own house.

Dick Caruso was also called and he testified to being on shift in the Royal Bar on the Friday night. A good deal of evidence was taken from this witness in regard to the hours of shift at the bar on which the witness remained quite clear in spite of the

NEW SERVICE OF STEAMERS

Masset Gets Weekly Boat and Double Weekly Service to Stewart and Anyox Cut off.

A change is to be made on September 5 in the Grand Trunk Pacific steamship service whereby the double weekly service to Stewart and Anyox will be changed to a weekly service and there will also be changes in the Queen Charlotte Island run.

On September 5 at midnight the Prince John will leave here for the southern Queen Charlottes, proceeding straight to Vancouver from there. Thereafter there will be a boat every second Saturday on the same run. Returning, the Prince John will arrive here every second Tuesday commencing September 14.

The north end of the Queen Charlottes including Masset, Port Clements and Buckley Bay, will get a weekly service with the vessels Prince John and Prince Albert alternating, leaving here Wednesday at 8 o'clock in the evening and returning every Friday.

The Prince Rupert and the Prince George will maintain the southern service with calls to Anyox and Stewart on Wednesday and Saturday respectively.

TAX COLLECTOR

VANCOUVER, Aug. 31.—Norman Lee, Dominion tax collector, is on his way to Prince Rupert. He will collect taxes in the inland towns.

cross examination of the prosecutor.

Chief Vickers.

Chief Vickers testified that he had not heard of the Royal selling liquor since the return of Bud Corley from overseas, although it had been reported that it was being sold there while he was away.

In the argument for the defence Mr. Patmore maintained that the Royal Bar had always maintained a good reputation under the management of "Bud" Corley and even the police officers had not heard of liquor being sold there while he was there.

Incapable of Belief.

"Knowing that 'Bud' Corley has always lived up to the law even before prohibition times, how is the court going to accept the story of these men, Smith and Money? With the good reputation of this house, are we to believe that Corley would openly deal in liquor as they say? They simply add wholesale to any evidence they may have and make the evidence to suit their cases. (Continued on Page Five.)

Next in Preparation for Com-

Last night there was a preliminary meeting of a few people interested in having the prohibition law continued in this province rather than reverting to sale in government liquor stores. Rev.
H. R. Grant presided. It was de-night at a meeting to be held in

be elected and a plan of campaign outlined.

It was left with the secretary,
A. J. Lancaster, to try to secure voters' lists both for local use and for the use of the central committee.

Suitable literature bearing on the campaign is to be secured for local use from the central office.
A discussion in regard to the issues at stake proved most in-
