WEST TURNING MOVEMENT OF GERMANS CAUSING CONCERN IN LONDON--FEARED THAT RUSSIANS STAYED TOO LONG IN WARSAW--A BRITISH STEAMER TORPEDOED

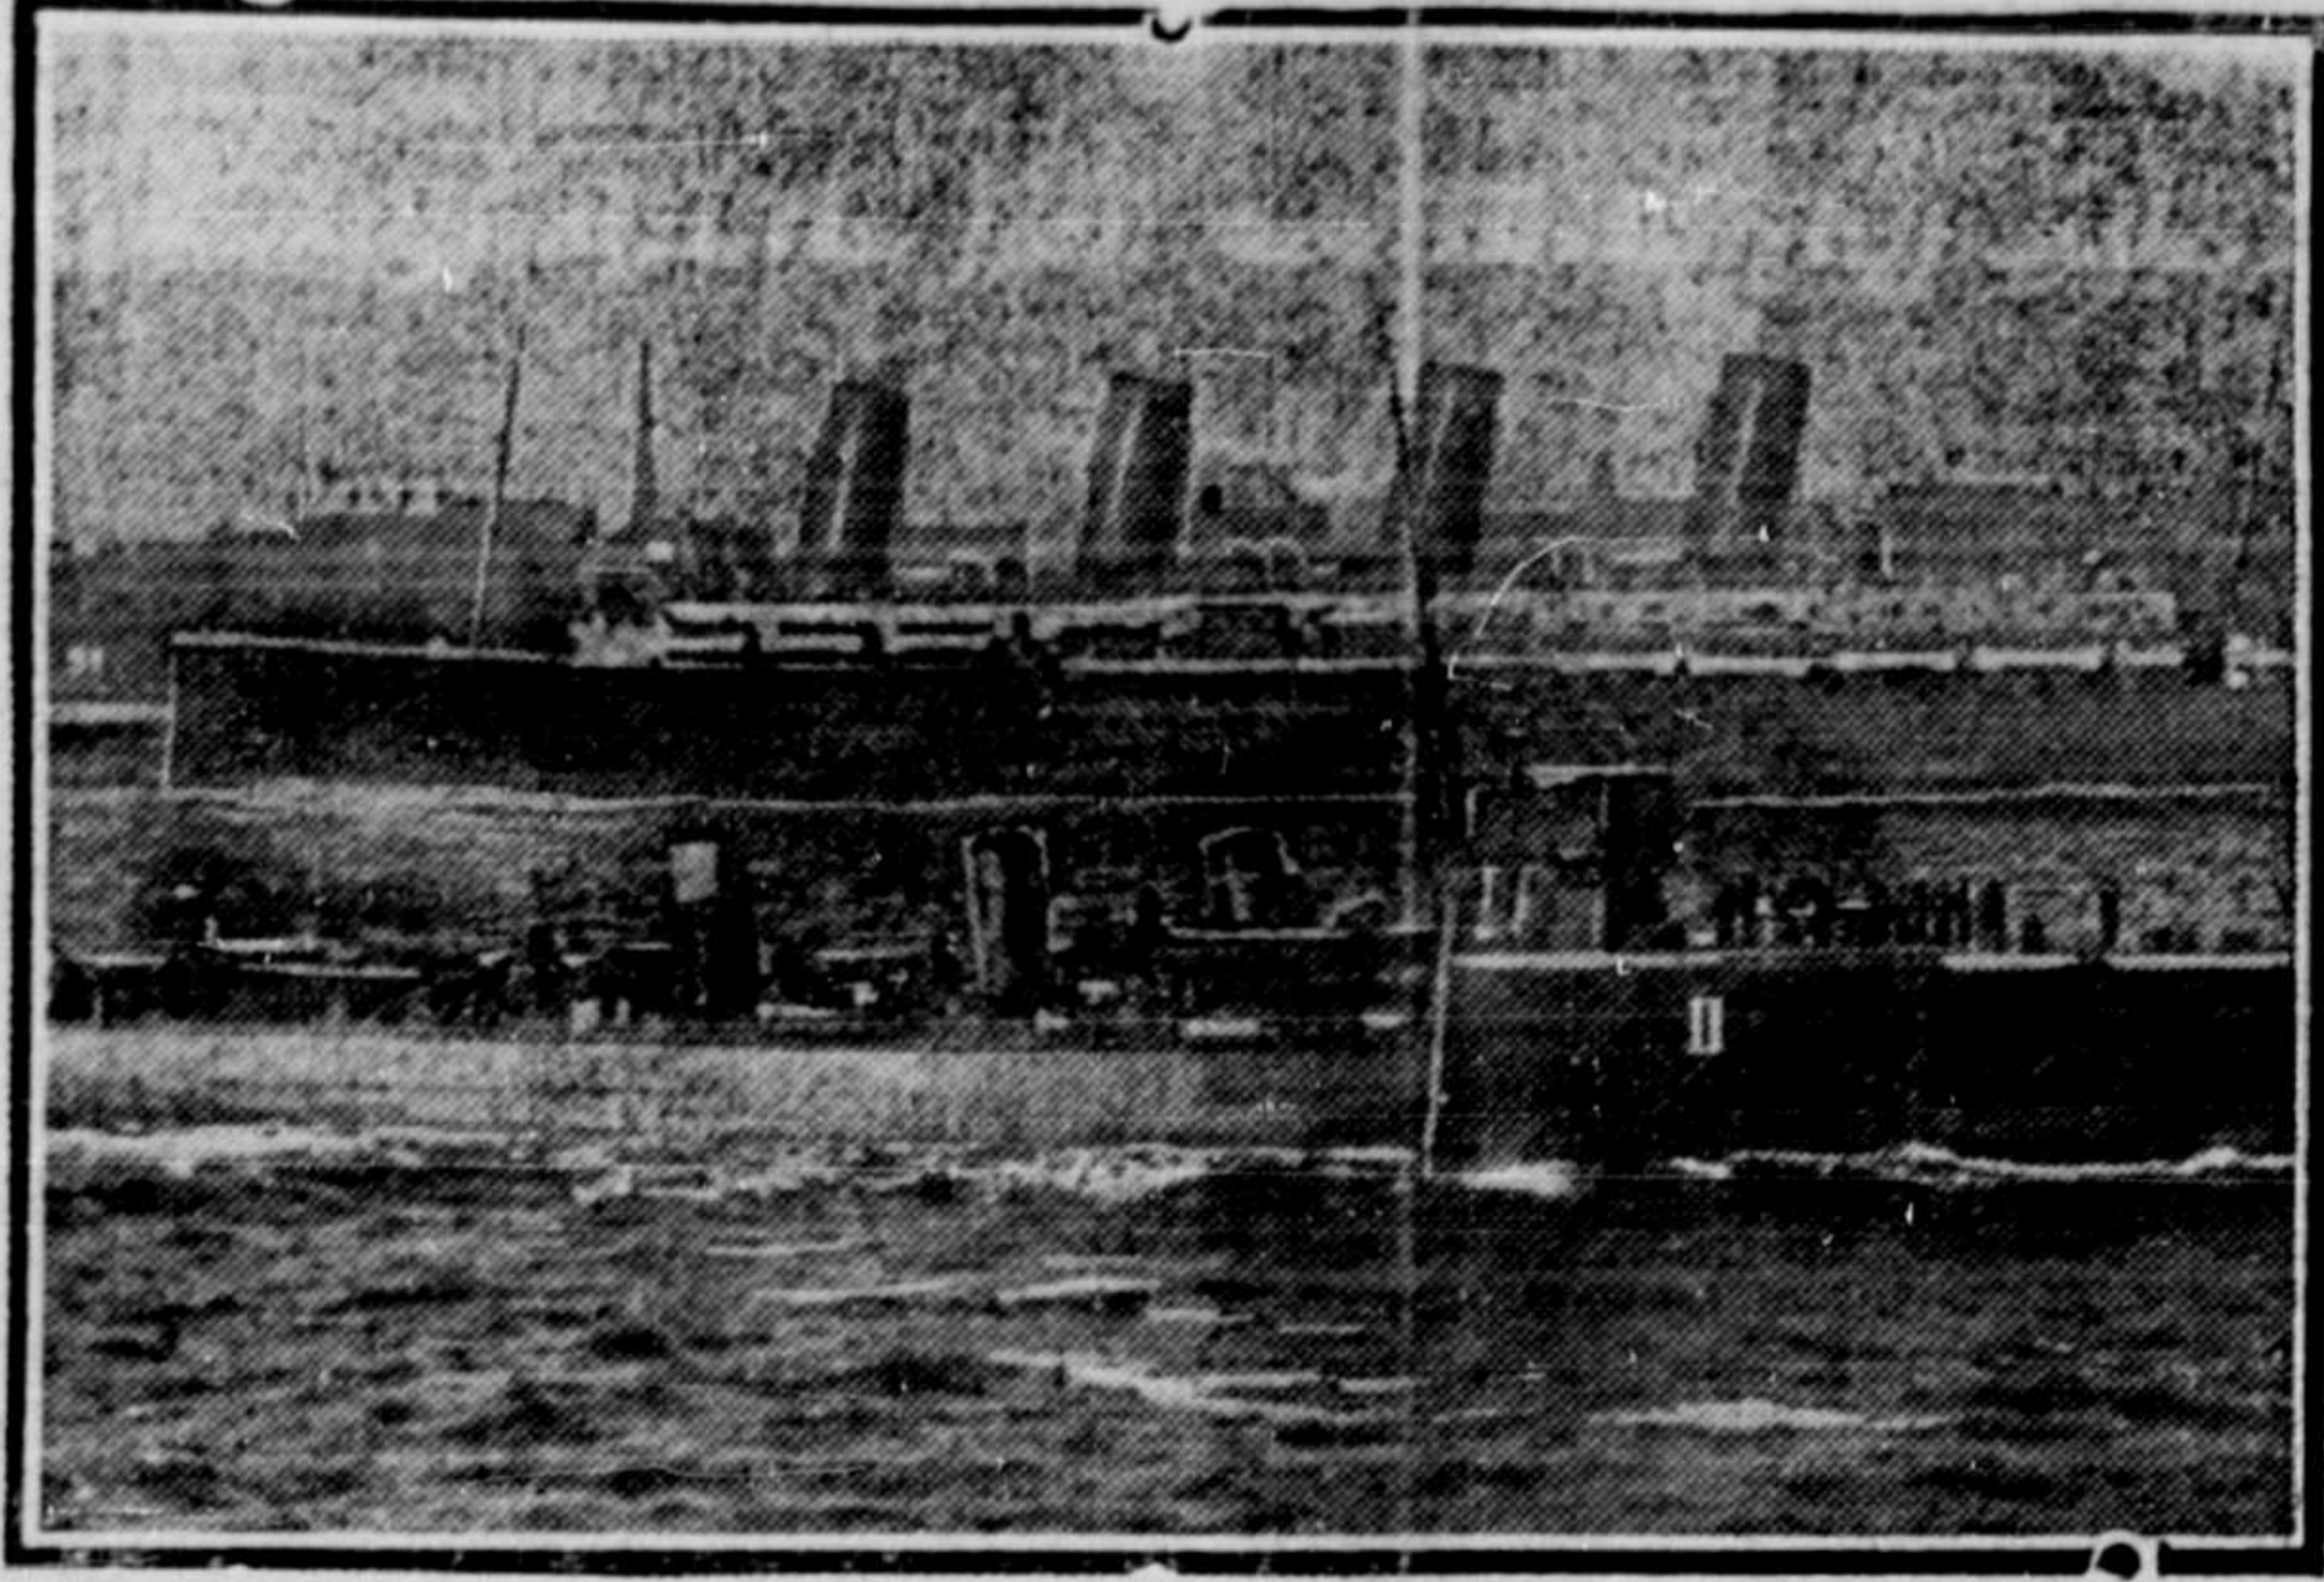

(Special to The Daily News.)
Berlin, August 5.—Warsaw was taken this morning by the German troops. This is an official announcement from army headquarters.

London, August 5.—The west turning movement of the Germans is causing concern to the Allies. It is feared that the evacuation of Warsaw was made too late to save the Russian armies from disaster, if Von Hindenburg should stride the Warsaw-Petrograd railway. Reports indicate that the Russian armies are defending against enormous masses of German cavalry.

The steamer Costello, of 890 tons, has been torpedoed. One man was drowned.

(Special to The Daily News.)
Rome, August 5.—Following the capture of miles of trenches yesterday, the Italian troops with heavy artillery attacked the station of Borgo and shelled Austrian infantry columns at Marcotini and Rupa. The enemy vainly attempted to recapture Mount Seibasi, but was driven off with heavy losses.

Turkish Ships Sunk

London, August 5.—A Russian torpedo flotilla in the Black Sea destroyed 900 Turkish craft carrying supplies, and over 800 sailing vessels. The persistence of the Turks in building craft shows that Constantinople is in desperate need of supplies.

(Special to The Daily News.)
Buffalo, August 5.—Edward J. Dickson, vice-president of the International Railway Co., has been arrested at St. Catharines on a charge of criminal negligence in connection with the trolley wreck on Queenston Heights on July 7, resulting in the death of fifteen people.

AUDITORIUM FILLED TO OVERFLOWING--PEOPLE SHOW A GRIM DETERMINATION TO SEE THE STRUGGLE THROUGH--STIRRING SPEECH BY REV. H. R. GRANT

Headed by the cadets, the citizens of Prince Rupert marched from the City Hall last night to the auditorium, to commemorate the first anniversary of the declaration of war, and what must have been the largest audience ever gathered together in this city, filled the large building to overflowing. The occasion will live long in the annals of the city. The huge audience expressed one thought, one firm determination; the very walls expressed one great patriotic resolve, while the picture of the English bulldog at the rear of the platform typified the attitude of the soldiers of the Empire. On the platform stood Prince Rupert's roll of honor.

In the interval the Mayor called for three cheers for the Prince Rupert boys who had gone to the front, and they were given wholeheartedly.

Rev. H. R. Grant was then called upon to deliver an address on "The Progress and Reasons for the War." After complimenting the Daughters of the Empire on the success attending their efforts Mr. Grant dwelt on the proclamation of undying loyalty throughout the Empire. Before beginning to trace the history of the war, the speaker asked permission to read a few stanzas from "An Imperial Anthem," composed by a Prince Rupert poet, who had been hiding his light under a bushel. With a fine martial ring to every line, the verses were eminently suited to the occasion and brought forth hearty applause.

Mr. Grant then proceeded to (Continued on Page Two)

GREAT POLITICAL PLAY AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

Tonight is Prince Rupert's last opportunity of seeing the Majestic Stock Company, and any who have not yet seen their fine work should not fail to do so.

The play presented is "The Women," by William C. de Mille. It is a story of political graft and intrigue, the scenes being laid in Washington, D. C. With W. W. Craig, as the Hon. Jim Blake, and Miss Vane Calvert, as Wanda Kelly, a girl telegraphist, the heroine of the play, it will be well worth seeing.

THE STRUGGLE

Although it is early yet to declare that Warsaw is safe, it seems certain that the Kaiser must have been sorely disappointed with his war birthday gift. The Russians have commemorated the outbreak of war in real warlike fashion, and the Germans are having quite as much as they can handle along the Narew river. German infantry is notoriously afraid of facing the bayonet, and the Russian birthday gift seems to have taken the form of a particularly vigorous application of this primitive but deadly weapon. From the report that German cavalry had to charge their own infantry in order to force them to return to the attack, it is evident that the Russians must have been delivering the goods in no uncertain fashion.

With the Russians causing so much trouble, Germany must keep on sending reinforcements to the eastern front, and it seems impossible that she can sustain her western forces under this steady drain. The French and British are gradually increasing in strength, and though they are making no rapid advances, they have the situation well in hand and a general forward movement should be only a matter of time.

Though there is still much desperate work to be done in the Dardanelles, the position of the British there has greatly improved. The action on the Gallipoli Peninsula is the most important of the war, and has been the most costly to the Allies, but the opening up of the Black Sea will be worth the price. It is claimed by experts that no troops in the world could have accomplished what the British have done in taking the Gallipoli heights. The Australians and New Zealanders have covered themselves with glory in that region, just as the Canadians did at St. Julien. When Sir Ian Hamilton's full report of the Dardanelles fighting comes to be published, it will make some of the most stirring pages in the history of the war.

"YOU'RE ANOTHER"

The favorite excuse of the discredited politician is that one party is as bad as another. This game is now being played in Manitoba with a variation. The discredited Roblin government disappears and gives place to a band of virtuous men who disclaim all connection with Roblin and his works. An attempt is then made to throw a little of the Roblin mud on the party which opposed Roblin.

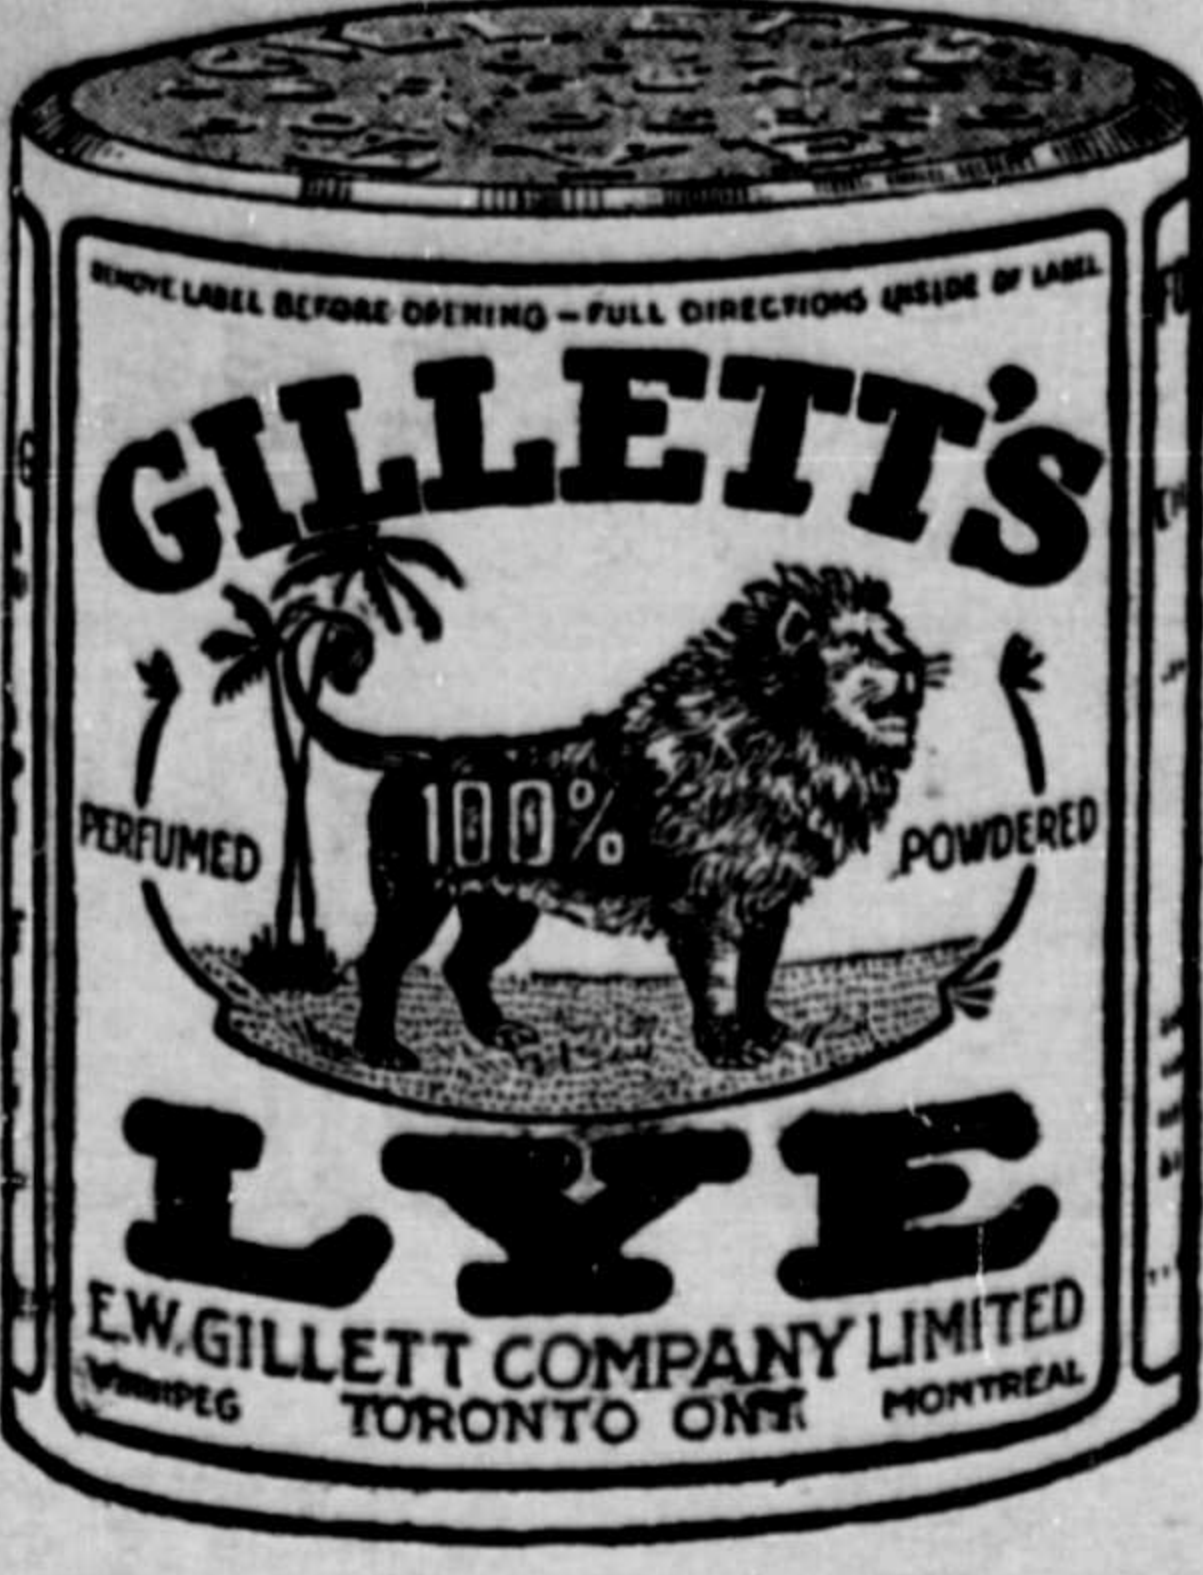

"If the old government was crudely corrupt, the new administration is not above expediency. Mr. Norris himself is a live stock auctioneer, with some skill in politics and in horse trading."

The objection to this plea is that it destroys the safeguard of party responsibility, without which partyism would be an unmixed evil. If it were allowed, party leaders would go on doing wrong until the possibilities of wrong-doing were exhausted. They would then give place to other leaders of the same party, who, while mildly rebuking their predecessors, would declare that the leaders of the other party were "just as bad."

This system would secure bad government in perpetuity. There would be no penalty for bad leadership. A bad leader would be retained so long as he could escape discovery and punishment. Then another would take his place. The party need not trouble about the leadership, because its hold upon power would be secure so long as it changed the leader as soon as he became notorious.

The right system, opposed to

this, is party responsibility. Parties must stand or fall by their leadership and the record of their leaders. If these leaders do well, the party obtains the credit. If these leaders do badly they must go, and the party must share the penalty of loss of power. Personally, the members of that party may be honest, respectable people. Most party men are. But if they have consented to serve under bad leadership they must pay the penalty.

Sir James Aikens cuts a respectable figure, but as the successor of Sir Rodmond Roblin in the party leadership, his place is that of leader of the opposition. In that position he may criticize the new government, and if that government does wrong, Sir James Aikens may be called upon to take its place. Parties must be held to their responsibility, and governments, having had a fair trial, must be judged by their record. There is no other way to good government under our present system.—Toronto Star.

(Continued From Page One.) trace the history of the war, from the murder of the Austrian archduke, going on to show how ready Serbia had been to make all possible concessions, and how the Prussian ultimatum to Russia had fallen like a bolt from the blue. After dealing with the Belgian treaty of 1839 and the subsequent renewal of it, the speaker dwelt on various points in the diplomatic relations between Germany, France and Britain during the last few years, particularly with the Moroccan crisis in 1905, showing that Germany had no good intentions of preserving peace, if war would serve her ends.

Pointing out that German troops were mobilized on the Belgian frontier a week before war was declared, ready to rush through Belgium to France, regardless of treaties, Mr. Grant went on to show that, when Germany broke the Belgian treaty, Britain was in honor bound to rush to her defence. Mr. Grant said some people thought he should preach peace instead of war, but he reminded them that when the Prince of Peace was faced by a power which was breaking down the temple, he took a whip and drove them out.

The speaker went on to trace the progress of the war from the turning point at the Marne up to the holding up of the Germans outside of Warsaw. He expressed the firm belief that Germany had reached the zenith of her military power and was now on the downgrade, while the Allies gathered strength. He dwelt at length on the magnificent work done by the Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders, Indians and South Africans, his references to the work of Louis Botha calling forth great cheering, as also did his request that Canada send 300,000 men instead of 150,000.

Mr. Grant concluded an inspiring and instructive address with the story of the Union Jack and what it stands for, dwelling upon the great fact that no iron bonds gird the Empire, but that the dominions are one in love, for the motherland which bore them, and having reached manhood, her sons were ready to fight for her; live for her, and die for her.

Upon resuming his seat, the speaker was given a great ovation. It was a great speech, worthy of a great occasion, but one which cold print could never do justice to, as it could not reproduce the soldierly spirit and patriotic fervor which fired it. One could just imagine Mr. Grant leading a company of highlanders to the charge.

The following resolution was submitted by the mayor, and, needless to say, carried unanimously:

Resolved—That, on this anniversary of the declaration of a righteous war, the citizens of Prince Rupert in massed meeting assembled, records their inflexible determination to continue to a victorious end the struggle in maintenance of those ideals of liberty and justice, which are the common cause of the Allies.

"God Save the King," followed by three cheers for His Majesty, brought a historic meeting to a close.
