ARTHUR NOBLE DESCRIBES WORK OF RED CROSS SOCIETY

SPLENDID WORK BEING DONE BY VOLUNTARY WORKERS IN BOTH ENGLAND AND FRANCE—BOYS GREATLY APPRECIATE WHAT OUR CITIZENS ARE DOING FOR THEM

St. Andrew's Hall was comfortably filled last night when Arthur Noble delivered a most interesting address on the work of the Red Cross Society at the front.

In introducing the speaker, Major J. H. McMullin, who presided, in a neat little speech expressed the pride the people of Prince Rupert had in the boys who had gone forth to do their share of the Empire's work, and congratulated Mr. Noble on his being able to return to the city.

At the outset, Mr. Noble expressed the deep appreciation he and his comrades had of the work which had been done, and was still being done, by the people of Prince Rupert, in the name of the Red Cross Society. He said that in no war of the past had the private soldier been so well looked after as in the present struggle. At every corner some branch of the Red Cross Society is ready, at any hour of the day or night, to provide comfort for the soldier.

He described how, when the Prince Rupert boys, after crossing the Channel, arrived at Boulogne at 1 a. m. to find the ladies of the Red Cross waiting to provide them with hot tea or coffee, while at every railroad station they produced tea or coffee and sandwiches. He went on to show how useful were the bandages and little bottles of iodine given each soldier by the Red Cross Society, and explained how, when a man gets wounded, he has often to remain in the trench for a whole day before being reached by the stretcher bearers. The immediate application of iodine is a safeguard against infection.

The stretcher bearers can only work at night, as during the day they would be at once picked off by German snipers.

The wounded are first taken to a dressing station near the trench where wounds are examined and if need be re-dressed. The next move is to a clearing hospital, where urgent cases are dealt with, as many as 1,000 cases in one day being handled by four doctors. The next stage is to a concentration hospital, in which the more serious cases are treated until the patients are well enough to be moved to the coast and to England.

Mr. Noble was sent to Treport, which was a tent hospital of 1,000 beds. This place he described as very similar to Prince Rupert in the early days. Here he was delighted to find in Major Goldsmith, a doctor from his home town of Peterboro, Ont. The matron in charge of his part of the hospital did everything possible to give the boys a good time, after their hard time in the trenches. When they had partially recovered she arranged short auto spins for them, and in every way took a motherly interest in their welfare.

From Treport he was moved to Lincoln, via Dover, where he entered a Red Cross hospital, which had formerly been a large public school and which held over 2,000 beds. In Lincoln, as in every town in England, the Red Cross Society is doing magnificent work, whether in taking care of the serious cases or in entertaining the convalescents. Recreation rooms are provided in which concerts are given, and automobile trips for a few miles out into the country are frequent. One thing which struck Mr. Noble was the kindness displayed by all towards the wounded. When convalescent they were allowed to walk down town in the

PARAMOUNT COMEDY AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

The Westholme Theatre tonight presents the famous movie star Hazel Dawn in "Niobe," a charming comedy. This is one of the most beautiful Paramount productions, in which the staging is perfect and the acting superb.

The story is hinged on the insuring of a precious statue of Niobe. For safe keeping, Peter Amos Dunn, the president of the insurance company takes the statue to his home for safe keeping. Peter falls asleep in the room where the statue is, and then things begin to happen, and deliciously funny situations ensue. The president has the experience of his life in explaining to his shocked wife and family the presence of a scantily-clad maid in the room. In the long run his misery is ended when he finds the statue in its former condition.

"Twins and Trouble," a good comedy, completes a show well worth seeing.

AUSTRO-GERMAN DEFENSIVE COLLAPSES ON STRIPA RIVER

THREE GERMAN ARMY DIVISIONS DISORGANIZED—ENEMY IS SURPRISED AT RUSSIAN SUPERIORITY—FRENCH GUNS TEARING UP GERMAN DEFENCES—SUBMARINE SUCCESSES

(Special to The Daily News.)
London, Oct. 14.—There is a heavy artillery engagement raging around Artois. The French artillery is tearing the German salients to pieces, preparatory to a great infantry attack.

German Collapse.

The collapse of the Austro-German defensive along the Stripa river has disorganized three army divisions, forcing them to re-group. The Russian success is hailed as a tactical, military and political victory. The superiority of the Russian artillery and the ample supply of ammunition has taken the enemy completely by surprise.

Submarine Success.

A British submarine yesterday torpedoed the Hamburg-American liner Comda, of 4,390 tons, to the north of the Frisian Islands. Thirty-three of the crew were saved. Submarines are active in Heligoland Bay.

German Vessels Missing.

Stockholm, Oct. 14.—Seventeen German ore steamers are missing in the Baltic. It is believed that they have been sunk by British submarines.

Monteagle Little Damaged.

Vancouver, Oct. 14.—The Monteagle sails for the Orient on Wednesday. Her hull has been little damaged by the fire.

Major H. Swinford, general agent for the Northern Pacific Railroad in Vancouver, passed through on his way east this morning, accompanied by Mrs. Swinford.

INTERESTING NEWS OF PRINCE RUPERT BOYS

Mrs. E. H. Shockley has received a letter from Mr. Shockley, in which he states that he has secured a contract in connection with aviation work. He tells of visiting Donald Yelf, in Rutland Hospital. Donald was badly wounded at Festubert on May 24 and, after five months in hospital, is still an invalid. There are still pieces of shrapnel in his body, which are hindering his wounds from healing. The pieces keep moving around and the surgeons are having great difficulty in locating them. He will shortly undergo another operation in order to have them removed.

Bill Matheson is now convalescent, and Mr. Shockley expected to meet him at the hospital the following day. Mr. Shockley also met a soldier who had been in hospital along with Bradbury and Metcalf, two of the Prince Rupert first contingent.

The one great feature in the hospitals is the splendid cheerfulness of all the patients, no matter how seriously they may be wounded, or how acute their suffering. Mr. Shockley says that everybody he meets over there is convinced that, after the war, "Canada will be the only place."

The depth of water is 6 feet. The shoal is marked by kelp at slack water, but this is drawn under when the tide is running strong.

ADVANCED PRICES

If the value of human life has for the time being been lessened as a result of the war, the cost of many of the necessities of life has appreciably advanced, while some lines have almost ceased to exist. For instance, in the matter of clothing, manufacturers are having the greatest difficulty in meeting the requirements of their customers. Dyes, formerly made almost exclusively in Germany, are not to be had and manufacturers of tweeds are restricted to producing grey and brown materials only. Indigo blue is in the meantime scarcely procurable, with the result that navy blue cloth can not be purchased at any price.

The tweed mills of Scotland and England, which formerly supplied the finer materials for the Canadian and American markets, are working night and day producing khaki for the imperial government, and find it impossible to produce goods for the civilian consumer. The eastern manufacturer will tell you that he is completely sold out of many staple lines which cannot be replaced until things are again normal. The tailor who today places an order in the east for a variety of suitings will find that a large proportion of his order cannot be filled and that the remainder is charged at an advance of anything up to $5 per suit.

Woollen goods of every description have advanced 40 per cent. in price, though probably the Prince Rupert consumer has not yet realized the fact. The woollen mills of Canada and the old country are working overtime producing underclothing for the soldiers in the trenches, and not only for our own men, but also for the French and Russians. Added to the enormously increased demand for woollens is the fact that, as a result of the drought in Australia, sheep have died off in millions. Australia produces about 60 per cent. of the wool used in the British Empire, so that one can readily appreciate the effects of the drought. When your tailor tells you that prices have gone up, you will understand why.

WAR ORDERS

The London correspondent of the Montreal Gazette reports that there is a total want of energy on the part of the Canadian government in the way of securing war orders for Canadian firms. The Gazette is the oldest and most reliable Conservative newspaper in Canada, and cannot, therefore, be accused of any desire to underrepresent the merits of the government where such can be found. The assumption is rather that the case is presented in the least discreditable way possible, in hope that the government may take a hint from a friend before getting kicked by its opponents. When the war came it was fair that the government should ask and be given a reasonable time in which to size up the situation and adapt means to ends that were new and unforeseen. More than a year has now elapsed and still the trade and commerce department has not devised machinery to connect British military requirements with Canadian productive enterprise. Meantime New York is revelling in a stock gamble over the profits from a flood of war orders. It is not time the Canadian trade and commerce department lacks, but gumption.—Edmonton Bulletin.

SILVER STANDARD STRIKES TWO FEET OF SOLID ORE

H. G. Norrie, superintendent of the Silver Standard mine, was in town last Sunday and made a most optimistic report to A. L. McHugh. Last week a man was put to work on one of the lower veins where a 40-foot shaft was sunk a year or so ago and nothing had been encountered but quartz. This year a little surface stripping was done and just a few feet away from the shaft two feet of solid, clean ore was encountered. The length of the shoot has not been determined, but the work is being prosecuted for that purpose.

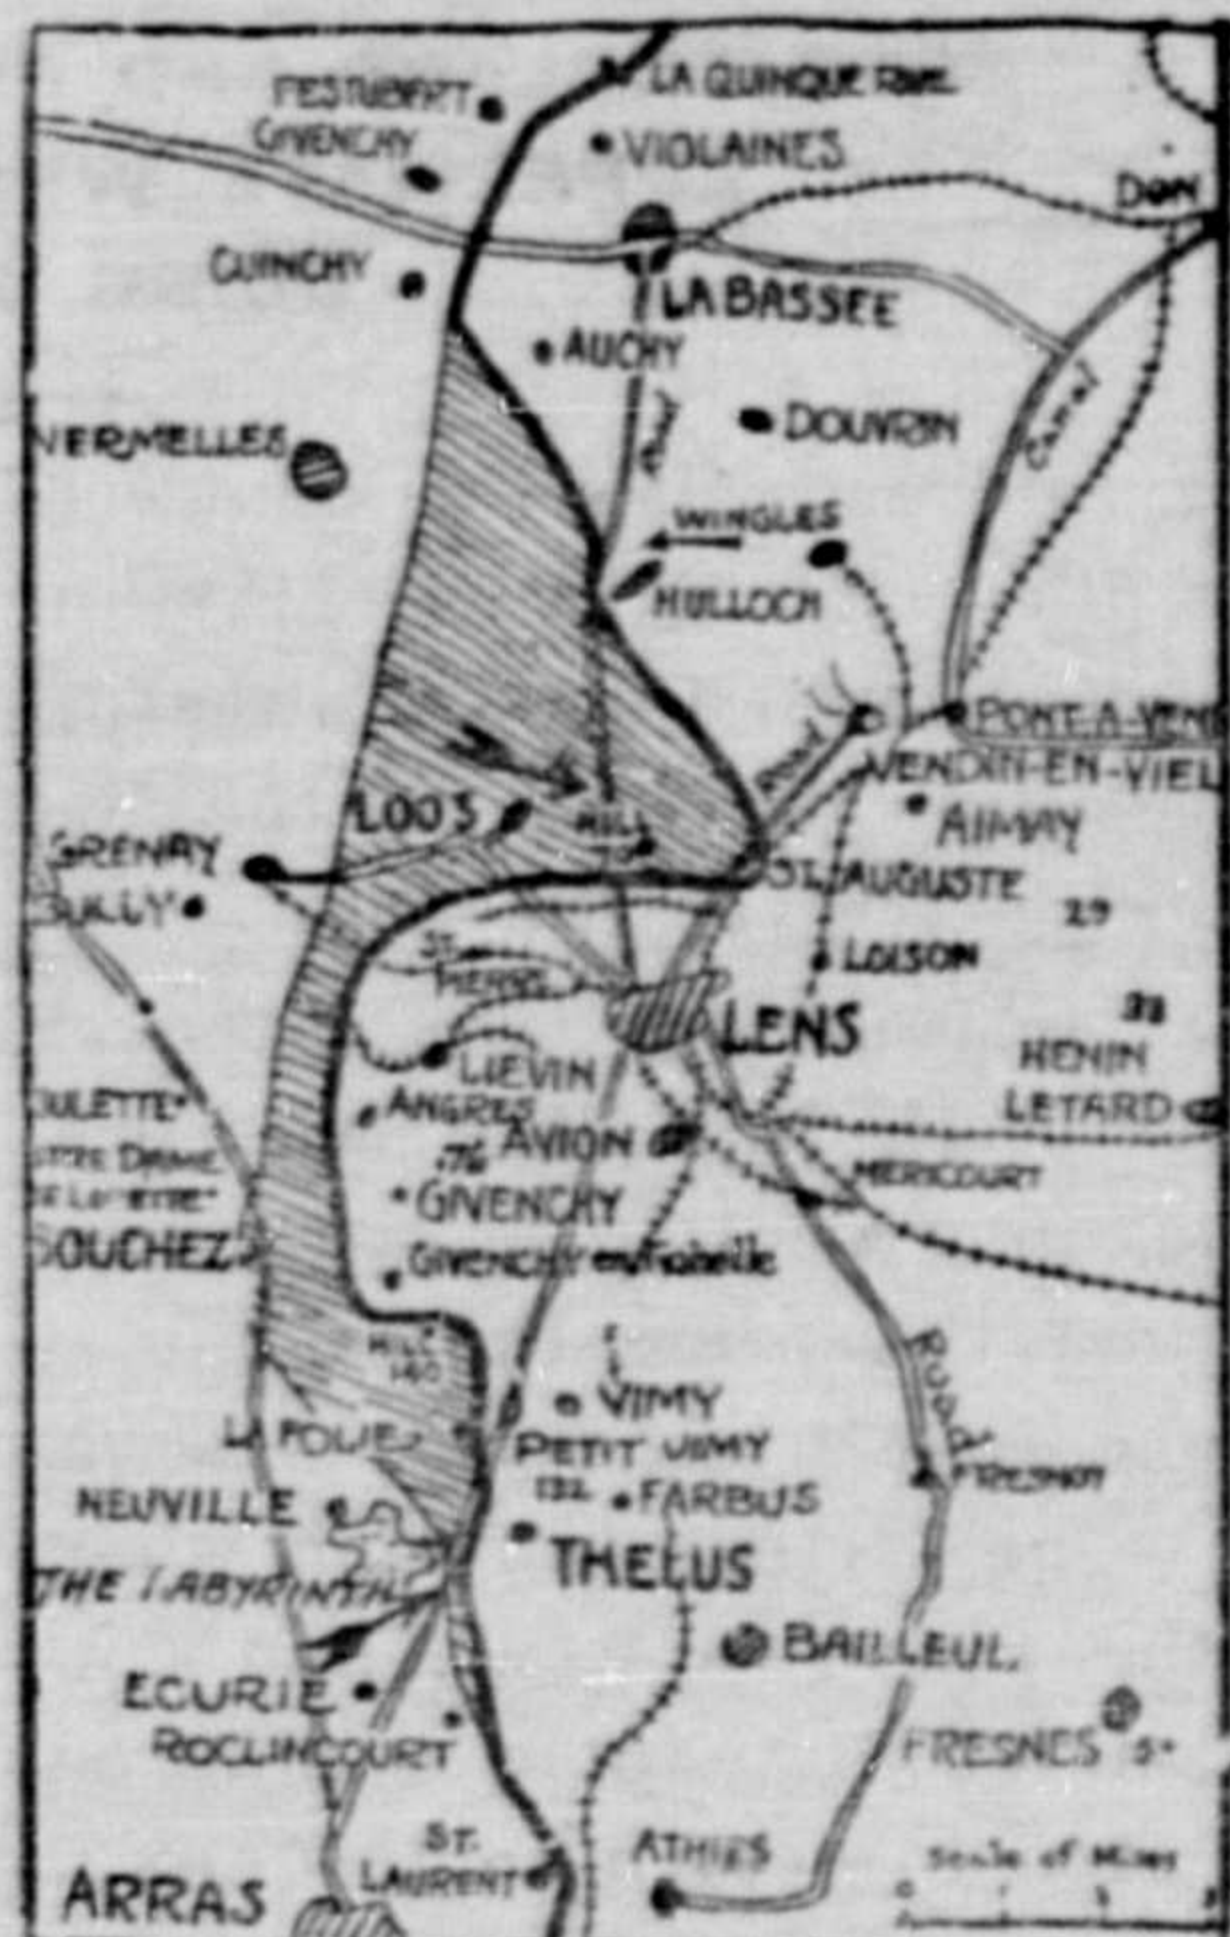

Picking up this ore at the present time is most encouraging to the owners and to the new superintendent. If the snow keeps off for a few weeks the probability is that there will be room for a number of extra miners to work.

Several local miners were engaged to start work the first of the week. They will go to the main workings and start mining on the 150-foot level. The force at the Standard is now eighteen, and every new Hazelton miner is working or can go to work if he wants to.—Omineca Herald.
