A LESSON IN TOLERANCE FROM ENGLAND

Usually we think of old countries as toiling along the path of plan. First-class service. All the Latest Modern and forward it to their homeprogress, burdened under precedents, and groaning under the weight of ancient growths. Young countries we think of as free from the FIRST AVENUE, PRINCE RUPER' tyranny of the past. The doctrine that the child is father to the man is held to be good among them.

Great Britain which of late years seems to have discovered the secret of the renewal of youth, upsets that doctrine. She is becoming more radical than her children. An English financier last week was explaining that the inroads of the Lloyd-George budget on the wealth of the British aristocracy was driving a lot of it to British Columbia for safety. Anomaly of anomalies.

Before the British House of Commons is now a bill—the Shops Bill—which because of its domestic character may get little notice abroad, but which is an object lesson in tolerance to the lawmakers in the Dominions over the seas. Some of us who know of the tyranny of the Lord's Day Alliance and its special legislation, might well doff our hats to the men who have drafted the Shops Bill and piloted it through to a Grand Committee of the British House.

In our own Dominion many a shopkeeper has been and is being H. W. Blakely - Electrican the daily doings that tell of the 1-4 mile from railway. convicted of a criminal offence for selling a loaf of bread on a Sunday, Third Ave. usually to some hapless family whose suppertable the previous night had been raided by friends, with the result that the next day the hosts had either to go hungry or break the law and get an extra loaf One poor fellow who took a photograph of his house on the Sabbath was convicted at Toronto. Refreshment dealers are fined for selling ice cream, unless it is part of a full course dinner—as if an icecream appetite on Sunday is sin, and an ice-cream-and-meat-and-potatoes appetite is lawful. Even the purchase of a magazine to read on a Sunday is a criminal offence for which the Lord's Day Alliance hires detectives to work on Sundays to collect evidence and establish cases. To buy a postage stamp is a crime. About the only thing one can safely buy in our sister provinces is a Sunday cigar, it having been decided by an appeal court in Ontario that tobacco being mentioned in the pharmacopaeia it follows that a cigar is a drug. But to keep the transaction free from the taint of crime, the customer must buy his Florfina or his Panatella from a druggist, and not from a cigar dealer.

In the Shops Bill, the British House proposes to throw over the Act of Charles II. under which small traders have been persecuted in some parts of the country, and make it lawful to sell or purchase on Sundays, newspapers, magazines, periodicals, medicine, milk, refreshments, and similar necessities and luxuries. The Bill bases its legislative proposals on the broad fact that certain customs have arisen in the country that involve great economic and industrial interests, and are necessary to the social happiness and education of large masses of the people.

In reply to a large deputation of ministers who waited upon him to urge the prohibition of Sunday papers, the Home Secretary, Mr. Churchill was very frank. "I would sooner leave Parliament than do such a thing," he said.

By removing intolerant interference with the necessities and pleasures of peaceable citizens, who prefer to spend their Sundays as they like, and not as some other folks with different ideas would like, the British Government will best achieve its end, which is to limit as far as possible all Sunday trading that is not necessary to the happiness and welfare of the people of Great Britain.

NOTES DUE

When Mr. D'Arcy Tate left Prince Rupert with the assessment agreement in his pocket he promised the city that a reply would be forthcoming by April 15th. Nearly a month has passed since that date but no reply has been received. Companies have a reputation to maintain for breaking promises.

Last year the private owners of lots in Prince Rupert had to pay taxes on $4,700,822.50. This year they will have to pay taxes on Spring Beds, clean White Sheets 25c $7,820,830. That is a liberal margin for improvements. It is an increase of a fraction over 66 per cent on last year's assessed values.

The news that the Dominion Government will carry out improvements at Naden Harbor, further improvements to the Government coast is good news. Money invested by the Government on this Lot 13, Bl. 11, Sec. 5 ing. coast is as sure of good returns as is the money of the private investor.

But there is one thing the Dominion Government might have done for Prince Rupert, it might have voted $50,000 to build us a wharf. We need it, sure enough. If the Dominion Government were to build us a good substantial steel and concrete wharf, it would probably last us until the other Government wharf is ready—the one that was We have sold the 2 adjoining lots wit started two years ago, and of which the first pile is not yet driven.

Price: Quality

A few large tailoring concerns are able to pay much larger salaries to expert designers than is possible for the small concern to stand, and being able to do this they very naturally get better men. Price is a consideration with about 95 per cent of men. On this the small tailor is absolutely without argument. He buys his piece goods in small cuts and from a jobber who is about three or four times removed from the source of the material. That means 50 per cent. profit every time the geods change hands. Figure the difference in cost as against the purchase by 20th Century tailors direct from the mills in necessarily great quantities. This same rule applies to everything else used in the make-up of a garment. Taking into consideration these two features, does it not appeal to you as reasonable that we are better able to supply your needs? If so, give us a trial, and then you will become one more in the long line of "well pleased."
