THE BUSINESS OF GOVERNMENT

"Canada, in the most crucial] period of the war," the Toronto Globe says, "is drifting aimlessly like a ship without a rudder. The country is without leadership and without a policy. The Government of the day might as well be located in Timbuctoo so far as the intelligent direction of public affairs is concerned. While Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Robert Rogers are delivering speeches in England and prancing about on Imperial hobby horses, at home the conduct of the war goes from bad to worse. There is no recruiting, no intelligent lead regarding national service, no adequate attempt to face the problems of food production, and no effort to organize the enthusiasm of the nation, which is clamoring for action. The government of Canada, especially at this time of war, is a business that demands the unremitting attention of statesmen fired by a jealous regard! for the honor and good name of their country, and seized of the gravity and magnitude of the world-conflict, in the successful prosecution of which Canada has pledged her last dollar and her last man.

How stands Canada in this third year of war? Recruiting depots might as well be closed up. Outside the aviation branch, recruiting for overseas forces has practically ceased. Had the Militia Act been put into force a stimulus would have been given to overseas recruiting. Thirteen thousand Canadian casualties at Vimy Ridge and after, and no men to fill the gaps! Can men responsible for this collapse in the mobilization of man-power be regarded as safe guides for Canada at this crisis? This is no party issue. It is not a fight between Liberal and Conservative in Canada. The eyes of the people of Canada are not fixed on Ottawa or on the ballot box. The fight is between Germany and the civilized world. The sons of Conservatives and Liberals who are facing death on the battlefront are united by a single purpose and moved by a common will. No lines of party

Who will say that Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues represent the war-spirit of Canada or that they give voice to the true sentiment of the nation?

Becomes the water into which you have stirred a few LUX flakes-pure essence of soap. An exquisite, soothing and refreshing quality is given the bath, or shampoo, and what's more, no further soap will be needed.

It's the modern, quick way of using soap and it's by far the best way for the bath. Use soap in the ordinary way and you rub or force some of it into the pores. Now, the little silken LUX wafers dissolve so completely that not a trace remains to clog the skin—yet it is thoroughly eleansed and toned.

There's a new bath lux-LUX. Try it.
