Radical Measures in Interests of Western Grain Growers are Foreshadowed in the Speech from the Throne this Afternoon

TARIFF COMMISSION TO BE APPOINTED

An Eloquent Silence is Observed in Regard to the Navy—Proposals Will be Made However to Co-Operate with the Provinces in Scientific Farming and in Building Model Highways—Dr. Sproule is Formally Appointed to be Speaker of the House

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—It is understood that the speech from the Throne, to be read today by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, foreshadows legislation to enable the government to appoint a commission to take over and operate the terminal elevators at the Great Lakes. Measures providing for government grain inspection are to be consolidated in this legislation. Other bills that will be mentioned will foreshadow greater aids to agriculture. One proposed will be to co-operate with the provinces in building model highways and for the promotion of scientific agriculture. There will be a bill respecting the department of external affairs, and one respecting the archives. The establishment of a tariff commission will be referred to, and negotiations looking for better trade arrangements with West Indies and British Guiana will be announced. It is not likely that any reference will be made to the navy. Today Hon. Dr. Sproule was elected as speaker. The members will be sworn in today.

G. R. T. SAWLE WAS EJECTED.

A Conservative ex-Editor Fell Foul of Secretary at Association Meeting and Was Put Out of Hall.

Indicative of the strained relations existing in certain quarters of the Conservative camp, is the incident of the ejection from McIntyre Hall last night of Mr. G. R. T. Sawle, a prominent Conservative worker and editor of a Conservative newspaper. So strict was the surveillance of those who sought admission through the door with the big "Welcome" motto, that Mr. Sawle, who had not obtained his admission card through some oversight only, entered under strong protest. Secretary Dr. Quinlan upheld the protest of the doorkeepers, and when Mr. Sawle rose to defend his entry, threatened to have him ejected. Mr. Sawle protested vehemently, and, it is said, gave the whole Conservative party a pretty calling down, with the result that he was swiftly ejected from the hall by a police officer summoned by Dr. Quinlan. This action on the part of the executive so incensed W. F. Beak, another prominent Conservative and friend of Mr. Sawle's, that he too rose and, protesting in terms most complimentary to the Conservative organization left to hall after Mr. Sawle.

HONEST MAN FOR MAYOR IS SUCCESSFUL AT LAST

Mr. Frank Ellis After Calmly Announcing That He is Running for His Own Profit is Elected Mayor in Mock Mayoralty Contest—Speeches Were Very Humorous

Honestly announcing that he was running for the sake of any possible graft, Mr. Frank Ellis was elected as Mayor of Prince Rupert last night in the mock mayoralty contest at the Presbyterian Club. His opponent was Mr. W. G. Dennis, who delivered one of the wittiest of speeches in his own support. Both candidates were very severely heckled by the audience. When the vote was taken it was found that every gentleman had voted for Mr. Ellis and every lady for Mr. Dennis. As the gentlemen exceeded the ladies by three, Mr. Ellis was declared elected. For his election he thanked the ladies who had stayed away. Mr. Dennis was able to point with satisfaction to the better class of citizen, from whom he had drawn support. One of the best appreciated of the sly allusions, was that made by Mr. Ellis, when an interruptor demanded to know he intended to finance the projects he had outlined. "I will borrow money from the banks to tide me over the little time I shall be in power, and leave it to my successor to do the financing," replied the honest candidate. Mr. Dennis' schemes of city hall improvement, included a punching bag and a set of gloves in the basement for the use of pugnacious aldermen, who want to fight the reporters.

WARD SYSTEM TO BE ABOLISHED

Union of B. C. Municipalities Want Majority of Ratepayers to Be Given the Power to Act.

Victoria, Nov. 16.—At the session of the Union of B. C. Municipalities held here today a change in the Municipal Clauses Act was recommended whereby the holder of an agreement of sale of land will be given the right to vote on money bylaws the same as the registered owner. Another important recommendation to the legislature provides for government and municipal ownership of telephones. The union favored that power be given to municipalities to abolish the ward system on a majority vote of the ratepayers. They did not sanction that licence commissions be chosen by the people.

CONSERVATIVES HAD HOT TIME

There Were Seven Different Tickets at the Local Conservative Association Elections, But the Old Guard Swept the Boards

MR. GEO. D. TITE IS THE NEW PRESIDENT

Ald. Newton, Ald. Clayton and Ald. Douglas are Numbered Among the Vanquished—All the Civic Employees Were Out in Full Force—Recriminations Were Made Because Prince Rupert Turned Mr. Clements Down at the Elections—Great Precautions for Secrecy—Details of Vote

After a meeting which threatened to be stormy at first, but which later became something of a bean-feast, the executive of the Conservative Association was elected in the McIntyre Hall. Victory for the Conservative "Old Guard" was the result of the ballot. In spite of the fierce volley of criticism fired at them at the outset of the meeting, when they were accused of gross neglect of duty and the loss of Prince Rupert for Conservatism at the last Dominion election, the "Old Guard" charged home in triumph. Among the fallen were Aldermen S. M. Newton, Alderman W. Barratt Clayton, Oiler Besner and Alderman Douglas. All these were nominated for president but didn't make it, not even getting on the executive. Following is the successful "straight ticket": President, Geo. D. Tite; first vice-president, M. M. Stephens; second vice-president Frank E. Cullin; secretary, O. H. Nelson; executive, J. A. Kirkpatrick, J. E. Merryfield, J. G. Scott, J. H. Hilditch, Dr. Quinlan, T. Maitland, W. J. McCutcheon, J. Wynne, Geo. W. Kerr. These appointments were made after a motion by O. H. Nelson that the thirteen should be elected by ballot first, and the office bearers picked from them. This was done in the face of some opposition. Following is the exact result of the ballot, which closely follows the "straight ticket" printed and distributed amongst the members of the inner circle yesterday afternoon: Geo. D. Tite, 214; J. E. Merryfield, 207; J. A. Kirkpatrick, 206; J. G. Scott, 205; George W. Kerr, 203; M. M. Stephens, 192; O. H. Nelson, 186; T. Maitland, 194; J. Wynne, (Continued on page 4.)

WILL OPEN GOVT. OFFICE AT QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY

Mr. E. M. Sandiland is to be Placed in Charge—Will Remove the Mines Record Office from Jedway also—A Boon to the Queen Charlotte Islanders

Arrangements are being made by the Provincial Government to open a government and land registry office at Charlotte City, in which to transact the business for the Queen Charlotte Islands. Mr. Evelyn M. Sandiland, the Government mining recorder at Jedway, is to be placed in charge. The mines record office will also be removed to Charlotte City. An official announcement of the Government's intention will be made shortly. For a long time there has been an outcry on the part of land stakers and settlers at the inconvenience of having to come to the mainland in order to transact business with the Government. In some cases men have been kept travelling backwards and forwards between Prince Rupert and the Islands, trying to get some difficulty straightened out, only to give up in disgust and annoyance at last.

The mines office was located at Jedway some years ago following the discovery of mines in the Ikeda district. Charlotte City has been selected as the place of location for the Government office, owing to its central position, to serve the whole of the Queen Charlotte group. CHANCE FOR H. F. McRAE. GOVERNMENT SALE DELINQUENT LOTS

In the Provincial Court Room this morning, Assessor Arthur Cuthbert sold by auction various lots in Prince Rupert, Stewart, Port Simpson and the Coast District, which are sold by the Government to realize amounts of delinquent taxes. Prices ran from as low as two dollars to twenty or thirty dollars, there being lots in Stewart. One lot on the Hudson's Bay townsite at Port Simpson went for $38.25 to Dr. Kergin after lively bidding between him and Henry Helgerson. Dr. Kergin was bidding well for Simpson lots. Cy Peck, Peter McLachlan, R. A. White, G. Arnold, Chief Vickers, Dr. McNeil, W. E. Fisher and others look in at the sale. Lots went low at the start of the sale but a "dark horse" came in who bid prices up to the twenties. He hurriedly left the hall on hearing that the terms were cash down.

THE HAYS CREEK CESSPOOL SCHEME.

The City Council, which at its last meeting passed the engineer's report on the Hays Creek trunk sewer scheme, would be well advised to re-open the question, or else to honestly label the scheme as the "Hays Creek cesspool scheme," and let the people vote on the matter.

With no wish to hurt the feelings of the City Engineer, the News would point out that the report of the Engineer on the question is not a guarantee that Hays Creek will not become a cesspool when the trunk sewer starts pouring its effluent into that practically land-locked basin. The engineer's report is only an evidence that the City Engineer does not think Hays Creek will become a cesspool.

With no wish to hurt the feelings of the City Engineer, the News reminds the Council, that the Engineer gave it as his opinion that the retaining walls in the city could be built for $8,000—a much more concrete matter than the question of the effect of a sewerage discharge into Hays Creek. The News could recite a whole list of instances where the City Engineer's reports of what he anticipated would happen, differed very materially from what actually did happen.

Has the Council any guarantee that the City Engineer's opinion of what will happen to the sewage after its discharge into Hays Creek, is any sounder than his opinion on the cost of the retaining walls?

The proposal to discharge the sewage of half the town into Hays Creek, at a point 1,600 feet from low water mark, into a bay that runs dry for six hours every day, and the entrance to which is almost entirely blocked by the railway grade, sounds more like a scheme to construct a cesspool, than a scheme of sanitation.

The City Council will show their wisdom and their sense of the gravity of the situation by having the question re-opened, before it is too late.

PASSING COMMENTS.

Having in view his penchant for challenging members of the press to pugilistic encounters with him, it looks like forethought on the part of Alderman Clayton to move that steps be taken to have the cemetery put in order.

It looks like foresight also on the part of Alderman Hilditch to move his residence from Ambrose Avenue, before work is started on the trunk sewer. It would not be pleasant living on the bank of an open cesspool.

THE Pillar of Light

By Louis Tracy

"An idler, eh? You do not strike me as properly classed." "It's the fact, nevertheless. My grandfather was pleased to invest a few dollars in real estate on the sheep farm where Manhattan Avenue now stands. My uncle has half; my mother spares a moment so I sent her a civil message. She told Constance that she thought she knew me."

"Hardly likely," smiled Pyne, "if you have passed nearly the whole of your life in lighthouses." "I did not quite mean to convey that impression. I knew a man of her late husband's name, many years ago."

"She is a nice woman in some ways," said Pyne reflectively. "Not quite my sort, perhaps, but a lady all the same. She is not an American. Came to the States about '90, I think, and lost her hubby on a ranch in California. Anyhow, the old man is dead stuck on her, and they ought to hit it off well together. The Vansittart you knew didn't happen to marry a relative of yours?"

"No. He was a mere acquaintance. You are not wholly unlike him," said Pyne. "Odd thing," mused Pyne. "It has just occurred to me that she resembles your daughter, your elder daughter, not so much in face as in style. Same sort of graceful figure, only a trifle smaller."

"Such coincidences often happen in the human family. For instance, you are not wholly unlike him," said Pyne. "Holy gee!" said Pyne. "I'm too run down to stand flatfooted."

"Likeness is often a matter of environment. Characteristics, mannerisms, the subtle distinctions of class and social rank, soak in through the skin quite as sensibly as they are conferred by heredity. Take the ploughman's son and rear him in a royal palace, turn the infant prince into a peasant, and who shall say, when they reach man's estate, 'This is the true King.' You will remember it was said of the Emperor Augustus: 'Urbsm lateritium invenit, marmoream reliquit.' He found the city brick, he left it marble. The same noble result may be obtained in every healthy child properly educated."

The college-bred youth had not entered into any general conversation with Brand before. He had the tact now to conceal his astonishment at the manner of his friend's speech. "You fling heredity to the winds, then?" he asked.

Brand rose to his feet, as was his way when deeply moved. "Thank God, yes!" he cried.

A faint hoot came to them through the chortling of the wind. "One of our visitors," shouted Brand, "and here we are gossiping as though snugly seated in arm-chairs at the fireside."

He hurried to the gallery, putting on an oil-skin coat. "We must win through, and I guess I'll play ball with my father-in-law," quoth Pyne to himself as he followed.

This time it was the Falcon alone, and she signaled with a lamp that it was deemed best to defer active operations until the following afternoon. The tide at dawn would not suit.

She went off, and the two men returned to the grateful shelter of the service-room.

Brand forbade further talk. Pyne must rest now and relieve him at three o'clock. The youngster needed no feather-bed; he was asleep in amazingly quick time. There is a supple hunger which keeps people awake at night with a full larder in the house. The crude article differs from the cultured one so greatly that the man who hungers of necessity cannot sleep too much.

Thus far, the inhabitants of the lighthouse had been given quite enough nutriment to maintain life. There was no reason why any, even the most delicate, should be in real danger during the next forty-eight hours. But scientific reasoning and the animal instincts of mankind clash at times; in that lay the danger whose sullen shadow was deepening the lines in the corners of Brand's eyes.

Every hour, the officer on duty and some men of the watch visited him to report that all was well below. Some of the less drunken mutineers were pitifully sober now; the others were maudlin. Beyond the few words exchanged on this and kindred topics, he was left alone with his thoughts throughout the silent watch. Pyne slept heavily. Glancing at times at the youngster's stalwart figure and firm, handsome face, Brand found himself reviewing the buried years. He thought of the days when he, too, looked forth on the world with the stern enthusiasm of triumphant youth.

Long-forgotten ghosts were resurrected, shattered ideals built up again. He wondered, if the decades rolled back, would he decide, a second time, to abandon the fine career which lay at his feet and withdraw his grief and his talents to the seclusion of lonely rocks and silent headlands?

He had been happy, as men count happiness, during the decades. No cloud had arisen to mar the complete content of his life. The blossoming of the girls into delightful womanhood was an increasing joy to him, and it was passing strange that his little household should be plunged into a whirlpool of events in the very hour when their domesticity seemed to be the most assured. The changeful moods of the elements found no counterpart in his nature. He, knowing the sea, did not expect it to remain fixed in one aspect. Whether storm or calm the contrary would surely happen ere many days had passed. But life was a different thing. How came it that at the very close of so many years of association with a fleet of ocean-going ships, a man should strike on him and his daughters, and fold them with perils, snatch them from the quiet pleasures of the life they had planned for the future and thrust upon them, even if they escaped with their lives, a publicity which he at any rate, abhorred and even dreaded?

He harbored no delusions on this point. He knew that the drama of the Gulf Rock was now filling the columns of newspapers all over the world. He and his beloved girls would be written about, discussed, described in fulsome language, pictured by black and white artists, and eulogized by wide-awake editors eager to make much of a topic dear to the public mind.

On the rock they were undoubtedly in grave danger. Death confronted them—death at once extraordinary and ghastly. No tyrant of the Middle Ages, with all its paraphernalia of writing truth or lies out of a tinkling wretcher had devised such a fate as threatened if the inconstant sea should choose to render the reef altogether unapproachable for many days. Yet, if help came, he and those dear to him were already steeped in unavoidable notoriety, bringing in its train certain vague disabilities which would striver to avoid for over twenty years.

All at this because one fierce gale, out of the many superstitiously called sprang into being at a moment when his mates were incapacitated and his daughters happened to pay him a surprise visit.

"It is an insane freak of fortune," he muttered, "so incomprehensible, so utterly out of focus with common sense, that even a superstitious man, I should regard it as a tokening the approach of some great epoch in my life. Surely a merciful Providence would not bring my girls here to subject them to the lingering torture of hunger and thirst. I must not think of it further. That way lies madness."

There was at least one other troubled soul on the rock which divided Mrs. Vansittart's attention at this moment, was staring into the black void with questioning eyes.

He resolutely threw back his head as if he would hurl into outer darkness the gibbering phantom which whispered these words of foreboding. Although the lamp needed no attention just then, he climbed to the trimming stage merely to find relief in mechanical action. He carefully adjusted the instrument, and to judge how the weather was shaping, went out into the gallery to look at the distant lights.

The three quick flashes of the Seven Stones Lightship were very clear. That was a good sign. The wind came from that quarter and, blustering though it was, driving gigantic waves before it into the loud embrace of the reef, it maintained the good promise of the last few hours.

Seeking the comparative shelter of the east side, he gazed steadily at the Liard. Its two fixed electric beams, nearly in line with the Gulf Rock, were dull and watery. A local squall of rain was sweeping down from the land. Changeable, threatening, unsettled—the meteorologists might apply any of these terms to the prevalent conditions.

When Brand went out, the sudden rush of cold air through the little door leading to the balcony aroused Pyne. The young gentleman rudely awakened from a seriously vivid dream. He fancied that Constance and he were clinging to the tail of an enormous kite, which had been made to hover over the rock by a green imp seated in an absurdly small boat.

They were solemnly advised by other enemies, imp with sparkling, toad-like eyes, to entrust their lives to this precarious means of escape, but the instant they dropped off the ledge of the gallery their weight caused the kite to swoop downward.

The resultant plunges into the ocean and Constance's farewell shriek were nothing more terrifying than the chill blast and whistle of the air current admitted by Brand. But Pyne did not want to go to sleep again. He did not like emerald-hued spirits which arranged sullenly unpleasant escapades.

He straightened his stiff limbs and sat up. "He was about to feel in a pocket for his pipe—he experienced the worst pangs of hunger after waking in such fashion—when he saw a woman's head and shoulders emerging out of the stairway."

At first he thought it was Constance, and he wondered why she had muffled her face in the deep collar of a cloak, but the visitor paused irresolutely when her waist was on a level with the floor.

"She uttered a little gasp of surprise, 'You, Charlie?' she cried. 'I thought you slept in the kitchen?'" "No, Mrs. Vansittart," he said. "I am an assistant-keeper and I am here most of all the time with Mr. Brand. But what in the name of goodness—?"

"He was restless," explained the lady hurriedly. "If I remained another minute among those women I should have screamed aloud. How peaceful you are here. Where is Mr. Brand?"

"Guess he's gone outside to squint at the weather. But come right in. I can offer you a chair. Mr. Brand wants to see you, and this is a quiet time for a chat."

"How does he know me? What did he say?" "Mrs. Vansittart pressed her left hand to her breast. With the other she indicated the high collar over her mouth and cheeks. Pyne could only see her eyes, and the alarmed light that leaped into them increased his astonishment at her unexpected presence.

"It seems to me," he answered, "that if you just walk up four more steps and sit down you can ask him all those things yourself."

"Where you speaking of me to him?" "I did happen to mention you." "And he said he knew me?" "No, ma'am. He said nothing of the sort. But, for mercy's sake, what mystery is there about it?"

"Mystery! None whatever. I was mistaken. I have never met him. I came now to explain that to him. Oh—"

She dived suddenly as the gallery door opened. Brand caught a fleeting glimpse of her vanishing form. "Who was that?" he asked.

Pyne had found his pipe and was filling it with tobacco. "Mrs. Vansittart," he answered. "Paying her long-deferred visit. I suppose. She chose a curious hour. 'So I thought. But she just popped her head in to tell you that she didn't know you at all.'"

Brand smiled. "Poor lady!" he said. "She, like the rest of us, is perturbed and uneasy. I imagine she is of a somewhat hysterical temperament."

"That's so," agreed Pyne. "There were puzzling discrepancies in Mrs. Vansittart's explanation of her untimely appearance. Evidently, she did not expect to meet him there. She thought she would find the lighthouse-keeper alone. The ready deduction presented itself that when she did encounter Brand she did not wish any third person to be present at the interview."

"That Constance's father had no cause to look at matters in the same light he was quite certain. Anyhow, it was not his affair, and he declined to trouble his head about Mrs. Vansittart's vagaries."

So the young philosopher lit his pipe and delivered a dictum on the subject. "Some women," he said, "are made up of contradictions. She is one. I have known her for some time and I thought nothing could phase her. But there must be a sort of society crust over her emotions, and the wreck broke it. Now, for my part, I like a woman with a clear soul, one in whose eyes you can catch the glint of the inner crystal."

"They are rare," said Brand. "I suppose so. Indeed, it used to be a mere ideal of mine, built up from books. But they exist, and they are worth looking for."

He waited, lest perchance the other man should take the cue thus offered, but Brand, for the twentieth time, was poring over the records of the days which followed the hurricane reported by a former keeper. The American cursed his lips.

"He had had a bad time with a woman once in his life," he mused. "It must have been Constance's mother, and that is why he doesn't believe in heredity. Well, I guess he's right."

Had he seen Mrs. Vansittart cowering on her knees outside her bedroom door, he might have found cause for more disturbing reflections. She was crying softly, with her face hidden in her hands.

CHAPTER XIV. THE WAY THEY HAVE IN THE NAVY

"Some people are never satisfied," said Pyne, whilst he helped the cooks by smashing a ham bone with a hammer. The bone had been picked clean of meat and marrow on the first day after the wreck, but it occurred to him that if it were broken up and eaten, it might procure some sort of nourishment for the two children, who were fast running down in condition.

"What is the matter now?" inquired Constance, whose attentive eyes were hovering between the cooking stove and a distilling kettle.

"All the flour and biscuits, with the exception of two tins reserved for emergencies, had been used. She was striving to concoct cakes of chocolate out of cocoa, an article more plentiful than any other food of its kind in stock, but water could not be spared, and eating dry powder was difficult to parched palates.

"There are two tug-boats, a trawler, and a Trinity service-boat, not far a mile away," said Pyne, "and the cliffs of the End are peppered with people."

"Surely that is satisfactory. Dad told me that the Falcon signaled this morning he was to expect a special effort to be made at high tide on the flow, and not on the ebb, as was arranged yesterday."

"Yes, that is all right as far as it goes," Pyne leaned forward with the air of one about to impart information of great value. "But the extraordinary thing is that whilst every man on board those vessels is thinking like steam how best to get into the lighthouse, we are most desperately anxious to get out of it. So you see, as I said before, some people—"

"Oh, dash!" cried Enid. "I've gone and burnt my finger all through listening to your nonsense."

"Are there really many people on the cliffs?" demanded Constance. "Pyne pounded the bone viciously. 'I go out of my way to inform you of a number of interesting and strictly accurate facts,' he protested, 'and one of you burns her fingers and the other doubts my word. Yet if I called your skepticism unfeeling, Miss Enid would be angry.'"

"I don't know why kettle lids are so cantankerous," said Enid. "They seem to get hot long before the water does."

"The hottest part of any boiler is on top," said Pyne. Enid smiled forgiveness. "I believe you would be cheerful if you were going to be electrocuted," she said, pensively. "Yet, goodness knows, it is hard to keep one's spirits up this morning. The sea is as bad as ever. What will become of us if we get no relief to-day?"

"Mr. Pyne," interrupted Constance suddenly. "Do you think that any of the men can have gained access to the store-room during the night?" "I can't say for sure," he replied. "What has put that into your mind?"

THE COSY CORNER

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

TO CURE NAIL BITING.

Best Way is to Beautify Them—Then You Won't Forget.

Use a little will power and break yourself of that awful habit of biting the nails. If you manicure your nails properly and get them in such shape that you will be proud of them instead of hiding them and being ashamed of letting anyone see them on account of their appearance, I am sure you will not want to bite them. Manicure them once or twice a week and each morning gently push the cuticle back with the blunt end of the orangewood stick, being careful not to injure the nail, and then polish them with a buffer. In a few weeks you will see a vast difference and will be proud of them.

A Cold Weather Hint.

A simple remedy for rough hands is to rub them at night with sweet almond oil and wear loose fitting gloves to protect the bed linen.

CAN YOU MOVE YOUR SCALP?

If You Cannot Your Hair Cannot Be Healthy—Needs Some Massage.

Have you ever tried to move your scalp with your fingers? Is it flexible and does it move easily? If it does not it should, and as a result the hair loses its brilliancy and begins to fall. In this case scalp massage is an important remedy. Keeping the hair healthy, says a famous beauty doctor. It does not require much time or patience and can be done by an amateur. The scalp is loosely attached to the underlying bones, or the skull, and when it becomes adherent to the bones and will not move easily the hair will fall. By keeping the scalp flexible it promotes a flow of blood to the roots of the hair and will properly nourish it and keep the hair from growing dry and brittle.

MAY WEAR THEIR HATS.

Women Jurors in California Have a Special Concession Granted Them.

Women jurors may wear their hats while sitting in the jury box, according to a ruling made by Judge Cassidy in the Superior Court of California last week.

The matter came up during the trial of A. A. King of Watts, who was acquitted by a jury composed entirely of women, on a charge of printing a story in his newspaper in violation of the law. During the examination of the venire of women, one of the prospective jurors asked whether it was permissible to wear her hat in the jury box. The judge answered that it was entirely optional with the jurors. Several women continued to wear their hats, while the others removed them. "I've been converted," said Editor King after the verdict was read. "I fought suffrage, but now I'm a booster."

A DELICIOUS SWEET

Pears peeled and stewed very slowly with a syrup of sugar and water to which two glasses of claret or Burgundy are added, is a delightful sweet served with whipped cream. The wine enhances the flavor of the fruit immensely.

Mathewson is careful. He is a plain liver. He lives in a $600-a-year flat within ten minutes' walk of the polo ground, and it's not a pretentious flat at all.

Bruce Ridpath, the well known professional hockey player, is lying dangerously ill in Toronto, having been knocked down and badly injured by an automobile. Last year he was one of the star performers on the Ottawa team.

Bruce was one of the most popular athletes that ever appeared before the Toronto public. He was a brilliant hockey player, and probably the best all round trick and speed canoeist in the world. He came originally from Lakefield, but he has lived in Toronto for the past ten years and every person was his friend as he was of a most likeable disposition.

Ridpath as a canoeist had no superior. He has been for years a familiar figure on Toronto Bay in his canoe and developed into quite a trick performer. A couple of years ago he toured Europe, giving exhibitions in a large tank, and was well received wherever he performed. Ridpath was slated to manage the Toronto professional hockey team this winter. He was a young man of exemplary habits.

Split Wind, an Eskimo runner of Interior Alaska, said to be as fleet of foot as a deer, is being brought out of the wilds of the North by Mike Swain, an Alaska Marathon runner, who will enter him in contests in Washington and California. The Eskimo is said to have not only distanced all of the runners in Alaska, but is a match for a deer or a hound in a race over the trail.

FIRST: "CATCH YOUR PRINTER"

DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING A HARE:
FIRST—"CATCH YOUR HARE"

To produce good printing you must "first catch your good printer. . . You can't get good printing from a poor printer, even if he work with never so good an equipment. If he lacks the "knack," the trained taste, the single-minded fondness for his work which real printers have, he will do poor printing for you. If he has all of these, and in addition to them adequate modern equipment, your printing will have distinction, salesmanship, the lure of type-beauty.

As this office produces good printing you may infer the presence of a good printer—who is "catchable."

FREE TRIP ROUND THE WORLD

We have just arranged with one of our clients to place forty-two lots on the market under exceptional advantages to the purchasers. The lots are some of the best in Sections 7 and 8. The prices are as low as any on the market, and the terms so easy—monthly—that anyone can buy. Along with this exceptional offer, each lot admits the purchaser to a drawing for a FREE TRIP ROUND THE WORLD. If you hold the lucky ticket the trip is yours; or you can surrender it for a cash consideration. The chances are good—one in forty-two. Come in and investigate.

H.F. McRAE AND COMPANY

AN ARMY "FAREWELL."

Ensign Johnstone and Family Leaving for Moosejaw on Sunday Express Their Good Will to Rupert in Citadel Last Night.

To bid farewell to Ensign Johnstone, whose work for the Salvation Army in this city since January 25 last year, has been so effective and so popular, a bright gathering of his many friends assembled last night in the Salvation Army Citadel. Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone presided, with their little boy, and after a splendid programme had been rendered, including songs by Messrs. Davey, Clapperton, Brown and Russell, expressed their regret at leaving Prince Rupert owing to the ensign's health.

Ensign Johnstone's energies last fall founded the S. A. Citadel and it is with a feeling of great indebtedness to the people of Prince Rupert for exceptionally kind treatment that Ensign Johnstone leaves. He is as popular here as he was in Dawson, where he worked for two years, travelling with a dog team to do his unsparring work, and leaving warm memories behind. It is now nine years since Ensign Johnstone joined the Salvation Army at Great Falls, Mont. He goes now to Moosejaw, where he is certain to make good, as he has done in Prince Rupert.

Besides his connection with the Salvation Army, Ensign Johnstone was a prominent Odd Fellow, and a farewell ceremony to him in his capacity of Junior Past Grand was held the other night in the K. of P. Hall. The ensign expressed his great regret at leaving the lodge of the Prince Rupert Odd Fellows, at that meeting, and last night again addressed all Odd Fellows present at the Citadel "farewell," thanking them particularly for help and friendship during his stay here.

Ten Days Missing

Ten days ago D. McKinnon and Willie Cornish started for Porcher Island from Prince Rupert in a small open pasoline launch belonging to Mr. McKinnon. They have never been seen or heard of since, and growing anxiety has been felt regarding them. Today Chief Owen arranged to send out a launch at once to search for trace of the missing men. It is possible that stress of weather may have driven them to shelter, but as they had no guns or provisions fears are still felt for their safety.

Special Notice

An important meeting of the Prince Rupert Choral Society will be held in the Presbyterian church, 4th ave., on Monday, Nov. 20th, at 8 p.m. All members specially asked to attend, new members heartily invited.

156; Frank E. Cullin, 156; J. H. Hilditch, 144; Dr. Quinlan, 137; W. J. McCutcheon, 134.

There was some confusion at the outset. Mr. Lannic demanded that every candidate for executive position should be allowed five minutes' free speech. It was found that there were fifty-five candidates, so that was refused. The reduction of the time limit to one minute by the mover proved equally futile, and they finally decided to cut out the speeches altogether. Alderman Clayton had been making his voice heard once or twice in defence or explanation of his remarks at a certain other Conservative gathering. Mr. Swift, too, had sharply criticised the retiring executive, and Mr. Lannic was frequently on his feet, talking with some support from his side of the hall, and some derision from a solid central phalanx.

Alderman Newton said never a word, but sat glum in the back rows. The hall doors were guarded stringently, in manner rather belying the cordial "Welcome" motto over the main entrance. Each doorkeeper had a list of "the elect," like assistant recording angels at the gates of Heaven, and all who bore not the cabalistic card of admittance were rejected if their names were not found on the list of the elect.

Two kegs of beer formed an important feature of the evening's entertainment. Almost to a man, the entire city pay-roll was represented, and the staunch Conservative shoulder of the ditch laborer jostled the equally soundly convinced Conservative city hall employee. Many nationalities were there united in the kindly arms of Contented Conservatism, Greek, Montenegrin, Slav, Scandinavian, American. With song and story, and an imitation of telephone conversations in a certain newspaper office (not the Daily News) the time passed merrily during the counting of the ballot, and at midnight the meeting broke up in good order, leaving several empty bottles, and many shattered hopes, behind.

Choicest liquors and cigars at the Savoy.

AT THE THEATRE

There was nothing lonesome about Lonesome Town at the Empress theatre last night. The three hoboes, who decided to lay claim to the ownership of the lonely town of Watts, kept the fun going pretty lively. Their trio "Lonesome Town," was enough to make Port Essington live up.

In a pretty ingenue part, Miss Drena Mack added to the enjoyment. Her song "There's a big cry baby in the moon," explained why it rains sometimes in Rupert, in a way that charmed everybody. Joe Kemper's pleasant tenor voice was heard again to advantage in the song "The world is full of women's eyes," and the chorus of girls on the darkened stage with electric lights concealed in their fans made the hit of the evening. The chorus also distinguished itself in a clever Indian dance and chorus.

Tonight the piece is to be Cupid's Handicap, a story of college life and athletics, which affords scope for some good songs and clever acting.
