HALIBUT

The following is an extract from an editorial on the halibut industry in Alaska, taken from the Pacific Fisherman. It is of particular local interest, as it outlines the effect of the position of Prince Rupert in regard to the Alaskan branch of the business:

Second in importance of the fisheries of Alaska is the halibut industry. The importance of this fishery may properly be appreciated and better known if it is realized that when halibut is served in the East or anywhere in the United States the chances are in favor of its having come from the waters off the coast of Alaska. To some this may seem a greatly exaggerated statement, but the fact is that approximately 85 per cent of the halibut consumed in this country comes from the Pacific coast, of which Alaska furnishes a large share. Some of these fish are not shipped through Alaskan ports, but their source of supply is nevertheless the rich halibut banks off the coast of the Ter ritory. The long distance from the chief markets of the East does not mean in any way an inferior article, as the utmost care is exercised in handling halibut from Alaskan waters, and this means the highest possible quality to the consumer. Most of the halibut for Eastern markets are frozen and glazed with a sheet of thin ice. which forms a hermetical sealing, and then each fish is wrapped separately in clean parchment paper, around which is an outer covering of smooth manila paper. The fish is then boxed and shipped in cold! storage to the Eastern markets. The recent opening of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from Prince Rupert, British fished perhaps merely in an ex notice.

Three Mighty Forces Close Linked

Have you ever noted how an audience yawns in the face of an uninspired speaker?

On the other hand, have you noted how an audience will lean forward and grasp the chair arms when the speaker reveals enthusiasm?

Enthusiasm is the buoyant expression of truth. To impart belief in anything, a man must believe it deeply himself. We call such a man an enthusiast.

This applies to the written word also --- particularly to advertisements. When the manufacturer really believes in his wares, his enthusiasm will almost inevitably find expression in Advertising. And enthusiasm will be contagious—his audience—the readers of the newspaper-will, figuratively speaking, "lean forward and listen intently."

> To be convincing an advertisement must convey an unmistakable impression of enthusiasm. This it will only do when the article advertised has inherent worth.

Thus we have:

Sincerity -- Enthusiasm -- Advertising: Three mighty forces, close-linked.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper. If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.
