SOME GOOD

If the election never did anything else, it certainly did create the impression of busyness on Third Avenue in the vicinity of the polling station yesterday afternoon. It put us very much in mind of what Prince Rupert was years ago, in the construction days, by the number of people on the street all at the one time. That these busy days may return to Prince Rupert, when, as then, everyone will be making lots of money, is doubtless the wish of everyone, and doubtless, everyone voted accordingly.

The claims of Prince Rupert, as the terminus of a great transcontinental railroad and PRINCE GEORGE FLOODED as the centre of an immense potential traffic in fish, logs, of this northern country.
