WAR INDUSTRY

'Growing foodstuffs in Canada is not an ordinary business at present. It is a war industry and must be so regarded by the Government and the people generally, as well as by the men and women engaged in it. If voluntary workers cannot be secured to carry on the industry, the State must step in and exercise the power of compulsion." Thus the Toronto Globe on the world food question. It says further, "If the Allies fail for lack of food, that failure will be ours as much as theirs, and its consequences will be felt by us and those who come after us for many a long year. If men to grow food are as necessary to the success of the allied cause as men to bear arms, why should the principle of selective conscription not be as applicable to the growing of food as to the raising of arm-

The Globe here raises another aspect of the question which has been at the back of most people's minds, and which only a few have had the temerity to enunciate so far. What is the difference in taking men by compulsion to fight for their other men by compulsion to work for the welfare of the nation, at the same price?

The State needs men to fight it is well served. her battles. The state needs men to build her ships. The diers and for her allies. The destroy the enemy. The state of every description. The one of these things without the other is useless. They must all be utilized in their due proportion together. Yet, the principle of compulsion is applied only to the supply of men. And inches there during Decmeber. after all, the human element is That's nothing! the greatest asset which the state possesses.
