FEARLESS ADDRESS TO CANADIAN CLUB

Frebendary Gough Handles Irish and Labor Questions Without Gloves at Luncheon in His Honor

"There is nothing to be afraid of but your fears. The heart of labor in Britain is sound, but the heart of the labor movement is rotten to the core," declared Rev. Frebendary Gough, of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, the Vicar of Brompton, in an eloquent and scathing address to the Canadian Club at the St. Regis club-room yesterday. "I know Britain is going to win through. England bears things until it is very late and then she turns in her unconquerableness of race and you catch the first gleams of the sunrise of victory. Be of good cheer.

"This is a land that will never take up that miserable restraining cry 'go slow' for fear of putting out of joint the nose of the under dog. You want the old countryman to come here to put his work and capital into the country. This Dominion is as bound to become, and I say it in the presence of a representative of the United States here, almost as great a country as that to the south."

L. W. Patmore presided and at the head of the table were Rev. Canon Rex, Dr. H. R. Grant and Rev. J. A. Macdonald, Consul Major Geo. Grosby. The speaker, who is well known and fearless, even eloquent at times and very forceful, spoke with precision and precision and even those who did not agree with him, and there were a large number of such, were agreed that they liked to hear a man speak his mind and do it so wholeheartedly. He pitched into the Irish with both hands and feet and then he made straight for the leaders of the labor movement and pulverized them, grinding them to mince-meat and exhorting the remnants.

Troublesome People.

Frebendary Gough said that since the war Britain had not been very comfortable, but the troubles had been exaggerated on this side of the ocean. He was in close touch with labor for he had been chairman of the Democratic Labor Party for London and the Home Counties. Owing to the weakness of the Government, however, an unrest had developed, which was not normal even for a period following a great war, at which time there was always unrest. As a result, the Government had been busy dealing with troublesome people and peoples rather than with a policy of reconstruction. Little had been done for the (Continued on Page 8).

Says De Valera Playing with Phrases and Cannot Prolong Note Exchange

LONDON, August 27.—Replying to De Valera, in alluding to the demand for recognition of Ireland as a foreign power, Premier Lloyd George on behalf of the British Government says De Valera is "playing with phrases to suggest that the principle of government by consent of the governed compels recognition of that demand on our part or that in repudiating it we are straining geographical and historical considerations to justify the claim to ascendancy over the Irish people."

Therefore, while willing to make every allowance, the Premier says he cannot prolong a mere exchange of notes but says he will be happy to meet De Valera and his colleagues again.

Sinn Fein Surprised.

DUBLIN, Aug. 27.—Dail Eireann has been called for today to consider Lloyd George's reply, which is said to have surprised the Sinn Fein. Reports from Belfast say that Sir James Craig has gone to London.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Newspapers here greatly approve Lloyd George's reply to De Valera, which indicated that Ireland cannot be permitted to withdraw from the British Empire and expressed satisfaction that Lloyd George is willing to continue negotiations.

Tom Moore is Re-elected President Labor Congress Would Ban Immigration

WINNIPEG, August 27.—Tom Moore was re-elected president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada at the closing meeting of that organization yesterday. P. M. Draper is secretary, and the British Columbia executive consists of A. W. Walsh, M. Davis, W. Trotter and J. Wright.

The Congress took under consideration a scheme of unemployment insurance and also made the demand that as interim relief until insurance can be established the governments shall immediately proceed with the construction of all public works and bar Oriental immigration altogether. They also asked that the government put a two-year ban on European immigration except for genuine farmers.

Montreal was chosen as the next convention city, the claims of Vancouver being withdrawn on the understanding that the western city be given every consideration as next year's choice. All the officers were re-elected by acclamation.

WINNIPEG, August 27 (noon).—The labor conference adopted the report of the committee on unemployment, but reserved the immigration recommendations for further discussion today.

DAILY EDITION  Saturday, August 27, 1921.

Combine Utility With the Artistic.

In a new community utility is everything and art is a negligible quantity. We build our houses for utility and not for art. Our business places are put up in the same way. We care little for the picturesque, because of the struggle of making a living and the joy we take in achievement. Then as the place increases in age, in stability, and the struggle for a living becomes a little easier, we notice the inartistic and we compare and eventually turn to improving the crude structure of a city which we have already erected. That is how we build cities on this continent. There possibly are exceptions to that general rule, but the exceptions are born of peculiar circumstances.

The people in the new community perhaps have just as keen a conception of the artistic as those of the older, for most of the people come from the older communities. It is lack of opportunity and lack of incentive and engrossment in other things that holds us back. We have so many natural beauties here that it seems foolish to hang pictures in our homes. For a splendid picture step out on any fine evening and look westward across the harbor. There may be seen a hundred pictures in an hour such as no artist can paint.

Should Cultivate Artistic Expression.

Artistic expression should not be neglected even here in Prince Rupert. The art of music is studied here a good deal, the length of the winter evenings giving ample opportunity for such studies. Such organizations as the musical society may do much to encourage this. Little is done in the way of artistic expression in picture, and the artistic speech is much neglected. Yesterday the address of Prebendary Gough was in many respects a model of art. Such sentences as "England bears things until it is very late and then she rises in her unconquerableness of race and you catch the first gleams of the sunrise of victory" are so picturesque that you like to repeat them, especially if you happen to be English. It is just as easy to express a thing elegantly, or in other words artistically, as to do it crudely, once you have acquired the knack. We read Shakespeare today after hundreds of years just to catch his wonderful style and to enjoy his artistic method of expression. He told old stories, but told them so well that they have endured and will endure and will reflect themselves through all the literature of all time.

Catch the Idea, Then Express It.

Not very long since a young man wrote a series of articles for a newspaper and an older man ventured to criticize them, mentioning the lack of continuity and other faults which he noticed. Later the young man was writing to the older and he expressed himself in this wise: "While I am fully aware that I am unable to maintain that continuity of thought which is so necessary to the perfect style, yet perhaps, in my own rough and disjointed way, I may be able to chronicle events with sufficient clarity to at least make it possible for you to keep in touch with affairs, if not to experience that keen delight that comes with a perusal of the best literature." The young man had caught the idea and produced an artistic sentence which was a delight. It would not be suitable for all occasions because the long sentence is ponderous, while the short sentence makes for vivacity. Some of the fine sentences of the great writers are always remembered. They are like the shining diamonds in a tiara, the brightness of which will be remembered long after the tiara and its associations are forgotten.

To do things well is often to do things artistically. To write a letter well is to write it artistically. To set a table well is to do it artistically. To cook a dinner well is to do it so that it may entice the appetite, and such a method is the artistic method. We unconsciously study art in our daily life and we also unconsciously harbor ugly ideas and ideals that make life ugly and sad and gloomy and set the world on edge. Art is harmony with just enough discord to make the harmony apparent. Sourness puckers the mouth, but too much sweet is even more sickening than sourness. The sweet with just a touch of sour is art in taste.

CHAUTAUQUA IS THE UNIVERSITY OF ALL PEOPLE

Chautauqua has been called "The People's University." For while it caters to the child and the youth, it is projected in large measure for those who have passed the educational age and have graduated into the school of life. It is intended to inspire all classes with a "desire for higher thinking, more vigorous living and a complete individual and community success."

Below are given some of the comments of the Canadian press: "Never before has a community project appealed to all sorts and conditions as Chautauqua." "Nothing in recent years has been so conducive to the public good as the week of unalloyed pleasure and entertainment which has just closed."

"It is apparent that our people have come to appreciate what Chautauqua means, and the possibilities it offers for the enjoyment of music, the inspiration that may be gained through the lectures, and the uplift that comes through these and the other forms of entertainment." "The interest caused and the profound impression that the lectures have made have done more than anything else in the history of the town."

Message of Cheer.
 "The music, the lectures, and even the fun presented from the Chautauqua platform, bore the Chautauqua message of cheer and a higher and broader life."

"The bringing together of the people of the town in the common cause of the Chautauqua idea has perhaps been one of the most valuable features connected with it. It has fostered the "get together" spirit as nothing else has done." "It has brought about an intermingling of town and country people that is good for the whole community. It has provided for a 'whole week'."

EMERGENCY OPERATION PERFORMED ON STEAMER. An emergency operation was performed last night at 11 o'clock on the Prince George as the vessel was coming up the coast from Vancouver.

Mrs. W. Jay Brown, who was making the trip in company with her husband, had a sudden attack of blood poisoning of the foot and Dr. H. T. Irvine, Texas, another tourist, performed the necessary operation with such success that Mrs. Brown was able to continue her journey to the Eastern states on the morning train instead of disembarking here to enter the hospital as it was at first feared she would have to do.

Mrs. E. Scherk and child returned this morning on the Prince George from Vancouver.

MARIO TAKES STEPS TO STOP BEER RUNNING

Seize liquor on board their transportation

Aug. 25.—Seizure of liquor on board the cargo ship on the Esquimaut is proposed by the authorities as a means of stopping the beer-runners. A brief lease of life is being granted to the liquor smugglers. Orders were issued the week-end to the police instructing them to seize liquor on board their transportation.

Beer and Owner.

Official sources it was understood that it is proposed by the court's ruling to stop the beer-runners. The court's lack of jurisdiction over exports, to take the owner into court to get the liquor submit proof of its destination. The court says, for that the liquor ship is destined for John Post (Huron, Mich.), and to exempt from seizure, the liquor will see that it is reshipped to Jones, but of some railway—which of course, that it will be of U. S. Customs as con-

Know First.

The Attorney-General's department says that the beer export trade has deluged the border the past few days is practically by a single man. It is said that the beer which they are now actually laid before the Attorney-General by one individual in question, was asked as to what department proposed to do with evasion of the spirit law. The answer said to be given by the department was to the effect that the beer was to be returned to the sender by the department and its preventive

Nothing to Him.

STRAWBERRY CROP OF SOUTH WAS HEAVY AND OTHER BERRIES TOO

VICTORIA, Aug. 25.—This year, 1921, showed the greatest crop of strawberries that ever was produced in Victoria and the various districts of which the Capital City is the central depot. Fifty carloads were shipped to the Prairie markets, 26 from Gordon Head and 24 from Keatons. Never before were these Prairie markets so variable, their prices fluctuating between $2 and $4 per crate, the berries being of various grades.

During the height of the season an average of a hundred crates a day were shipped locally, but as prices did not hold up, dropping from $3.50 to $2 per crate, the markets here were not considered good. The surplus berries were processed by Gordon Head growers, 1/2 lb. of sugar to 1 lb. of berries, and the preserves were packed in barrels and placed in cold storage.

South Saanich district supplied jam berries, sugar and fine to the Victoria Preserving Co., who made jam of the fruit and who will act as jobbers for the growers.

Loganberries. The loganberry crop is also a very good one, but there is little or no outside demand, although some few hundred crates have been sold to the Dominion Canners. Most of this particular fruit, however, is handled locally.

The Lake Hill Cannery is canning and drying some loganberries, but only working on a small scale, although they have plans for the enlargement of their plant next year.

Housewives are preserving far more fruit than usual this season, owing to the low price of berries and the fact that there is at last plenty of sugar, of which commodity there was a bad shortage during and directly after the war.

The raspberry crop is never a large one in this district, most of this fruit being sold locally.

Other Fruits. The cherry crop, on the other hand, is an excellent one, and as many of the orchards of this country are still young, each year will see a large and noticeable increase in the production of this luscious fruit. Five carloads have already been shipped on equal quantity from South Saanich and Gordon Head.

ORANGE LODGE

Presentation to Edward Ross, Who Sails on Canadian Scottish for Australia.

The officers and members of L. O. L. No. 2310 had their regular meeting in K. of P. Hall on Thursday.

During the course of the evening various questions came up for discussion, one of which being the selection of a name for the new school. The lodge passed a resolution favoring the name of the late William Booth, E. A. Woods being deputed to submit the proposal to School Board at its next meeting.

Edward Ross, who sails at an early date on the steamship Canadiana Scottish bound for Australia and New Zealand, was made the recipient of a small gift in token of the high esteem in which he is held by the officers and members of the lodge. J. G. Johnson in making the presentation expressed regret at losing such a valuable member and hoped that he would soon be with us again. Mr. Ross suitably replied.

Refreshments were afterwards served, bringing to a close a very enjoyable evening.

USE ENGLISH AT CONFERENCE

Delegates May Be Selected Who Are Proficient in Language.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(By Canadian Press)—The impending international conference on the limitation of armaments and Far Eastern questions in this city in November likely will undertake a more general use of the English language than any previous international official gathering. There has been no intimation, thus far, that English is to be made the official language of the conference and it is very likely that any such action will be taken.

As at the Paris Peace Conference, both French and English probably will be used, but English the more generally. It seems certain that the use of English, however, will be more marked at the Washington conference than at any conference since English first was used in such international gatherings by Benjamin Disraeli, the British premier, at the international congress in Berlin in 1878 when his was the only address in any language other than the French. Ever since Latin was abandoned as the time-honored and accepted language of diplomacy in 1713 at the international congress at Utrecht, when French first was adopted, French has generally been employed.

Translation Handicap.

English played an important role for the first time in the Paris Peace Conference in 1919. Its use then was mainly as a complimentary concession to President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George. In view of the probable more extensive use of English at the forthcoming disarmament conference it is considered the powers will select as their delegates statesmen who have mastered English, as they will enjoy a distinct advantage with such knowledge. The interchange of opinions and views always is handicapped and even obstructed when it has to pass through the slow, clumsy and wholly unsatisfactory process of translation by interpreters.

Naturally the delegation of Great Britain and the United States will be at ease with their own language. Among statesmen mentioned for membership in the foreign delegations there have been a number who are entirely familiar with the English language. The Ambassador of France resident in Washington, M. Jules Jusserand, who undoubtedly will take a prominent part in the deliberations, has splendid command of the English language and extraordinary knowledge of English and American literature. At present M. Jusserand is in France on leave of absence conferring with French leaders on subjects to be taken up at the disarmament and Far Eastern conference. He will return to Washington in October. Former Premier Viviani and Premier Briand of France have but slight knowledge of English and it is unlikely they will be designated to attend the Washington conference. It has been stated that M. Loucheur, minister of reparations and a dominant force in the French Government and in the business world, is to come to the con-

CHECK YOUR BOWEL TROUBLES BY USING DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY

When you are troubled with diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps and pains in the stomach, cholera, cholera morbus, summer complaint, bloody fluxes, or any looseness of the bowels be sure and obtain a bottle of "Dr. Fowler's" and see how quickly it gives you relief. This wonderful remedy has been on the market for the past 74 years and we wish to warn you against accepting a substitute which may be dangerous to your health. Mr. Samuel Buckler, Tatumgouche, N. S., writes:—"While visiting in Western Canada I had a severe attack of diarrhoea. After trying many proprietary medicines I got no relief, but kept getting worse. I was advised to take Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and I lost no time in doing so. I cannot describe in recomending it, but I can say that when I had not yet taken half the bottle I was relieved. I must say that if 'Dr. Fowler's' is given a fair trial it will show its good qualities." The price of the genuine is low, a bottle put up only by The T. Miller Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Probably Tilted.

Former Premier Tomas Tittoni, president of the Italian Senate and former Italian minister of foreign affairs, who at present is in the United States, has been spoken of as one of Italy's principal delegates. He received his education at Oxford and is a master of English.

Japan has a number of leading statesmen who are graduates of American and English universities and therefore entirely familiar with the English language. One or more of these undoubtedly will come to represent that nation which has so much at stake in the impending conference.

China, too, has a number of English or American educated statesmen on whom she could depend to undertake her mission at the conference.

Versailles Handicap.

It can thus be seen that there will be less probability of difficulties in the way of misunderstandings because of languages as is credited with having to some extent marred the conferences at Paris and Versailles two years ago through President Wilson's and Premier Lloyd George's slight knowledge of French, Premier Orlando's ignorance of English, and the inability of all the French delegates, excepting Premier Clemenceau and M. Jules Cambon to understand a word of English or Italian.

GAVE BLOOD TO SAVE SOLDIER

Transfusion Operation at Winnipeg in Which Woman Gave Vital Fluid.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Amy Mansfield, the mother of three children, one of whom lies dead amid the soil of St. Etloi in Flanders, gave a pint of her blood to save the life of W. Reynolds, a returned soldier, in a blood transfusion Thursday afternoon at the General Hospital. Mrs. Mansfield, who is a pleasant faced, home loving matron, telephoned to the social service department of the hospital to inquire if they wished her to submit to another transfusion to aid a returned soldier.

Mrs. Mansfield, seen at her home on Bannatyne avenue, was none the worse for her self-imposed sacrifice. Save for the marks of iodine on her right arm, where the skin had been punctured to perform the operation, she remarked that she did not feel the effects of the blood transfusion. Reynolds, the returned soldier for whom the operation had to be made, if he was to be saved from death, as a result of pernicious anemia, was today reported to be in a slightly improved condition.

Reason for Action.

When asked to say what prompted her to submit to such a courageous undertaking as a blood transfusion, Mr. Mansfield was silent for a moment. Then she said: "It's because mothers who had sons in the war will never forget it. If the call for volunteers in this operation had come during the war, when everybody was war-mad, no doubt there would have been about twenty smart young girls rushing up to the hospital to offer themselves. But now all the shouting is over, and everybody seems to have forgotten both the war and the warriors, everybody but the mothers." And then she went back to her house-keeping upstairs.

MOVE ENGINEERING HEADQUARTERS TO THE PACIFIC COAST

VICTORIA, Aug. 25.—Headquarters for the Engineering Branch of the department of public works for the western provinces have been moved from Winnipeg to Victoria as a result of which E. A. Brydson-Jack, who is in charge of the branch, has just arrived in the city and has made his headquarters with the dominion public works offices in the post office building.

There will be no change whatever in the administering of the work except that Mr. Brydson-Jack will carry on the supervision from Victoria instead of from Winnipeg. The change was considered advisable owing to the fact that there is a greater proportion of work to be carried on in British Columbia than in the prairie section of the western provinces.

Mr. Brydson-Jack has been in the Public Works Department for about five years.

SCHOOL TEACHERS GIVE IMPRESSIONS OF OLD COUNTRY

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—Four Ottawa school teachers have just returned from a teaching visit to the old land.

One of the ladies was much impressed with London, its immensity, and its various historical haunts; another found it much as she had expected from so much she had read of it.

Without committing themselves too definitely off-hand, the ladies remarked that they found teaching over there different from Ottawa. The kind of children they had to handle impressed them, seeming to be mostly from the slum areas. Miss Burns said she taught in twelve different schools while over there, some of them near the East India Docks, and in the famous Whitechapel area. They much preferred Ottawa children.

Discipline Different.

The discipline was rather different, and the "cane" seemed rather more in evidence over there. There was not the same spirit of friendliness and confidence between teachers and pupils in the London schools, according to Miss Mina Burns. This lady also commented on the splendid history lessons given during the forty-five minutes devoted each day to Scripture teaching. She said that the Bible was taught as history, and she found no tendency to introduce doctrinal teaching.

Speaking of her travels, Miss Burns said they had a most cordial reception while in Ireland, though excitement there was running high over political events at the time.

FEARLESS ADDRESS TO CANADIAN CLUB

good Briton because the bad Briton was so engrossing. Rev. Mr. Gough said he had for 22 years preached universal military service from his pulpit at Brompton and while he had lost members of his congregation through doing so, others had come, and in greater numbers.

Ireland the Ulcer.

Ireland was the ulcer in the side of Britain, during the war the speaker said. She would have been less injurious if openly belligerent. Several army corps had to be kept there in order to prevent rebellion and to head off any movement. Just now Britain was a distressful nation with an uncomfortable neighbor. His plan for dealing with the south of Ireland would be to say: "You are not suitable for membership in the British Empire."

God gave the south of Ireland great opportunities to serve the empire and humanity but instead of that she went back to the old black grudges and took German gold and burst into rebellion. If conscription had been enforced he believed Ireland would have found a more happy place in the Empire. The method to deal with her now was either to put in an army and subdue her with military triumphs or tell her to go her own way for she was not bone of our bone. The spirit of de Valera, the Spaniard, was not with us. American, Canadian, South African and Australian were more akin with us than Ireland. He and his alike used no kin with the Anglo-Saxon, the Canadian or the New Zealander.

Could Not Exist.

Of what importance would Southern Ireland be without the Empire, asked the speaker. That part of the country could not exist as a nation by herself. She has neither coal nor iron nor timber. There were present some of the elements which could make of her a solid nation. In the middle ages she had consisted of a number of contending states and tribes and the spirit which animates them now makes for grievances, not for solidarity. There was no element which made for a contented people. "To such I would say, Go. Get from without the folds of the British Jack." The greatness of the Sinn Fein had been because of the Union Jack which lent him importance in the eyes of the world. We of the British Empire have too much to do to deal with a protesting member as she has proved to be.

"Before our race there shines a future greater than the great past, and we cannot be distracted with the fretting Sinn Fein. We shall draw close to the Dominions which are flesh of our flesh and of one heart."

Labor Movement.

Prebendary Gough then spoke of the labor movement in Great Britain. He said there were two voices. There was the voice represented by Neil McLeh and the other represented by Peter Wright of the seamen's union. The latter was a splendid man but he had said that the heart and soul of the British labor movement in Britain was sound. In that he was mistaken. It was not sound. It was rotten to the core. Labor was sound but the movement was not. The movement was conducted by middle class intellectuals. It had not been sound during the war or since.

Labor on the Clyde had been rotten, saturated with treason and at other places they had been helping the German forces. He told of the strikes that had been brought on at the bidding of the Germans and of the valuable time lost during the war which had cost Britain and the other allies valuable lives. The heart and soul of a movement like that was not sound but rotten to the core.

Prebendary Gough told of the resolution that had been passed demanding that negotiations for peace be opened. The men who said this was sound was no friend of the Empire. He urged that the good citizens of the Empire band themselves together against such things as these. He then closed with the words of cheer which declared that the real heart of labor was sound, that Britain would win through as she had won through in the past and that the sunrise of victory was in sight.
