VANCOUVER ASKS SIR HENRY THORNTON FOR PRINCE RUPERT DRYDOCK

Sir Henry Thornton Gives Address in Vancouver and Hears Railway Proposals

VANCOUVER, Jan. 19.—A firm belief in the future of Canada as a nation and a pledge that the Canadian National Railway and all connected with it would work for its betterment without sectionalism or bias was the keynote of a speech delivered by Sir Henry Thornton, president of the National Railways, to about six hundred businessmen gathered to do him honor under the auspices of the Vancouver Board of Trade last night. Sir Henry urged his audience to put before everything else the welfare of Canada, in which he had found greater liberty and easier laws than any other country could boast at the present day, not excepting the great democracy of the United States. Sir Henry repeated expressions of sympathy with Canada and with the family of the dead minister which he gave out earlier in the day in public reference to the death of Hon. W. C. Kennedy, minister of railways. At the call of chairman Kerr Boulgate the audience stood to attention in silence as a tribute to the late minister. Provincial transportation matters were not touched on during the speech. Intervened earlier by civic and provincial officials on the question of grain elevator facilities, the proposal to move the Prince Rupert drydock to Vancouver and the general question of tourist propaganda, Sir Henry promised the fullest consideration by all concerned in the management of the Canadian National. His attitude was epitomized in his remark that the government and the management of the railway wished to keep as many dollars in Canada as possible for the development of the country.

RECONSIDERING BRIDGE BYLAW

Possibility of Putting in Cheaper Structure at Mays Cove to be Investigated. With a view to making some modification providing for lower cost and possible future change of plans, the $17,000 Mays Creek bridge bylaw which was passed by the ratepayers at the recent municipal election was referred to the board of works for reconsideration. Ald. Munro said that the council was met with a peculiar situation. The bylaw had been passed but he thought it had been voted for under misapprehension. The present council had been elected for economy and he thought money could be saved here. The contract had been let subject to the passing of the bylaw but perhaps it could be cancelled. Mayor Newton agreed and stated it was only fair that the matter of the bridge should be reviewed before it was finally passed. Ald. Perry expressed the opinion that a good wooden bridge which would last for at least fifteen years could be erected for $18,000 and in less time than it would take to build the steel bridge.

In the course of his address when delivering his decision, Judge Young made scathing remarks in regard to stalwart and capable men living off the immoral earnings of women, as had been exemplified in this case.

WHY GO SOUTH?

Editor Daily News.

This exodus of people from all parts of the north and east to Los Angeles and southern California cities, shows how little consideration is given to conditions at home, or abroad, to the possibilities of gaining a livelihood, or of bettering one's condition in the world, where competition is so keen, and the means of earning a living so difficult, especially for the non-professional man, or the laboring class.

It is all very well, for the "tourist," and those seeking climate, and health, to seek a change, where they may enjoy life, to their heart's content, for a few years or a lifetime, and, undisturbed by tuberculosis, and other diseases. We are all seeking either, wealth, health, or happiness, in an environment suitable for our desires; but we should not forget old age, and the consequences of our every action.

Great Country

California is a great and growing country. The people of that state are progressive; so much so that they are reaching out, beyond the limits of the "Golden Gate," prepared to invest in our country, where they find possibilities, equal to their own. If California was a comparatively unknown land, with railways and steamships, opening up new fields for the immigrant, from which people would derive a competence—or even a living—there would be reason behind moving there.

Many hundreds of years ago, Spaniards and Mexicans invaded California, sharing the country with the Indian. Other foreigners traversed the state, seeking homesteads, until all the available land passed over to the government to private ownership. In recent years, Eastern millionaires obtained winter residences there, to avoid the extremely cold climate of New York, and other Eastern cities. They permitted no opportunity to pass, in the way of bettering their financial position, purchasing land, on which

California's Call

The whole of the State of California appealed to those seeking health, especially during the winter months. No account was taken with "Mother Nature," of the possible climatic changes, so long as the invalid found surcease from his ailments, for a short or long period. People flocked to a country, where cold, snow and other changes of climate were, supposedly, unknown, and enjoyed a season of change, which became monotonous, when compared with the bracing climate, in other parts of the world. In the early days, our successful miners from Cariboo, and elsewhere, visited Los Angeles, during the winter months. They returned in the spring, pleased to again take up life, in the far north, or in our coast cities. The "outing" was enjoyed, as it is by the wives and children of the eastern millionaires, or those in failing health. Many did not return, their condition was such that they did not recover. In the early days, before competition became so keen, there was room and to spare, for those who sought employment, California, with its wealth of minerals and fruit, appealed to the outside world. Cities and towns grew in all directions; but what is there now, for the small investor or the workman? Thousands are walking the streets, without homes or em-

Over Populated

It is all very well for the rich to enjoy all the blessings attendant on having the wherewithal to live comfortably the remainder of their lives. They may select the places of residence they require; but the world must understand that no country and no cities can be over populated and prosper. We have a country rich in natural resources. Our climate exceeds that of many other portions of the world. Our land is "craving" for settlers; our mines are inexhaustible; our fruit and our fish wealth cannot be estimated. We have opportunities, and for years we have asked for a class of settlers, able and willing to better their condition in life. The source of all wealth is in the land and the sea, and goodness knows there are millions of acres of land, still in an embryonic state, ready for occupation. Cities may grow, until they become like the centres of population, in Europe and Asia. The starving millions seek a living; but the majority appear content with overcrowding, and competition in this country and that, we are importing, instead of growing and manufacturing.

Support Millions

The natural resources of this country would support millions of people, instead of a few thousands. Foreign born people are seeking the opportunities we are throwing away, and are "making good." We complain of the Asiatics, while they are investing and taking up the land. They are beginning to control our fisheries. We live, in a great measure, on their produce, and we hire their cheap labor. Instead of the healthy farmer, and his growing family, occupying the land, we hear of little but the effects of "dope," and "rum," and the means to make the nation "dry," or "wet." Our legislators are discussing "liquor laws," while those who should be seeking health, wealth and all that goes with it, are walking the pavements of cities, or seeking pastures new, complaining of hard times, which are attributed to war and other causes.

Everlasting Why

This "Canada of Ours," and British Columbia in particular, offers opportunities which are being overlooked, by those who should realize that this province will sustain millions of the right kind of people. Why import furniture in the best wooded country in the world? Why import fish from Norway, and eggs and fruit from California, China and Japan? Why send squared spruce logs to Los Angeles in order to make fruit boxes, when they can be made here, more cheaply? Why have places where land is vacant, because of poor transportation facilities? Why bring "coal to Newcastle"? Los Angeles is endeavoring to build up commercial and industrial places of business, with "the climate" as an advertisement, to attract capital. The cities boast of the number of inhabitants and the increase in population, annually. What of the fanning, fruit growing, fishing, mining, lumbering, and other outside industries—the mainstay of the whole country? Every farmer, lumberman, fisherman, fruit-grower and producer is an asset to a country. They produce more than they use, which means wealth.

Learn From Indians

We are scarcely out of the "Jungle" yet, and may learn something, from even what we call "uncivilized nations." The Indians do not waste their fish berries, sea weed and natural food, grown in the country. They have no "chicken habit," to throw away, or question whether salmon is red or pink. The Chinese live on what they grow, such as rice and vegetables. The Japanese live on what they produce at home.

It appears to us, the borrowing powers of a nation, is the backbone thereof. When we paid seventeen per cent on the purchasing power of our coinage, for supplies, from our neighbors—during the time of the Great War—we considered it an outrage. We are paying six per cent on borrowed money right now, to purchase what we can produce, or manufacture, without considering the tariff. Do we consider from whence our supplies—even for the household—comes? An inventory of a home will show how much we produce, in a country like ours, and how much is imported. Why are industrial plants so scarce, and why is so much land uncultivated? Because the people are not loyal to their own institutions or their own country.

Cut Frivolity

When we do away with our frivolity and questioning about the importation of millions of dollars worth of booze; when we come down to actual facts and figures, we must stop waste and all work together, although with diversified interests, for the upbuilding of the "White Race."

COAL SCARCITY IN THE STATES Profiteering Prices Follow Paucity of Supply and People Are Dissatisfied LEGISLATION MAY FOLLOW

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. (By Canadian Press) — The coal situation in the United States, to use the language of a well known French physician now in America, does not "get better and better every day." On the contrary, the conditions with respect to coal are the subject of constant public complaint and are likely to remain so through the winter. Profiteering prices along with shortage of supply and in some cases poor quality of fuel, unite to make consumers much dissatisfied. Recent conferences of miners and operators in the bituminous field intended to obviate another strike next summer, have arrived at no settlement and while this does not mean necessarily that there will be another strike, it at least opens up that possibility. The patience of the public over the coal situation was sorely tried last summer and again this winter. Another strike would cause a wave of demand for drastic action.

Legislation Expected Conditions are combining to keep up a keen interest in the forthcoming report of the coal commission which is now investigating and which is expected to recommend legislation. It is not expected that a majority of the commission, which is conservative, will favor government ownership of the mines but it is expected to favor strict regulation. Nothing less than that will satisfy public feeling. In fact, unless the commission does recommend strict regulation, Congress is likely to ignore its findings and proceed to enact legislation of a regulatory character regardless of the commission.

Undoubtedly, when coal legislation comes up, as it inevitably will in the new Congress, government ownership and various plans of nationalization will be presented. Sentiment for government ownership of the mines is growing but a bill probably could not pass either house without a trial government regulation. The nationalization research committee of the United Mine workers of America has worked out a tentative plan for nationalization. It is not government ownership in the sense usually understood, although a form of it. The government would take over the mines and they would be operated by a joint commission, representing the financial, technical, and administrative heads of the industry; the miners and the local consumers.

Reflected in Canada The unsatisfactory conditions in respect of coal here are reflected in Canada. Undoubtedly throughout the winter Canada will find the supply of hard coal from this country much below the normal supply. Claim for an embargo in some quarters, however, is not likely to result in anything.
