Gasboat Murrelet Blows up and Sinks off Georgetown; Captain has Narrow Escape

The well known gasoline boat Murrelet, owned by Dr. W. T. Kergin, Dr. L. W. Kergin and Henry Georgeson, sank in 22 fathoms of water off Burnt Cliff Rock near Georgetown yesterday afternoon about 3.30 following an explosion. On account of the depth of the water where the boat went down, it will be impossible to salvage her so she will be a total loss. She was well covered by insurance.

Capt. Georgeson set out from here about 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon for Port Simpson no one else being aboard but himself. Off Burnt Cliff Island.

Given the right kind of men and women, the rest will follow.

There are a lot of men and women in this city who are making money, yet they hardly ever spend any of it in a way that will benefit the city. There are others who are not making very much but they put every dollar of it into improving their places or enlarging their interests here. What every city needs! is a sufficient number of local patriots and it is bound to succeed.

Encourage Local Industry.

When the sawmitt opened in this city it was given a low rate on electrical power. Then when it began to operate there of Houston, were a number of city officials and others who continually grumbled because the mill had such a low rate. Now the grumblers see the folly of their ways. If the mill had continued to operate we should not have had such a hard time here last spring. What we need is to have that mill again operating and! extending its operations to include a pulp mill. If it comes to us with a proposal for reasonable treatment, the people here today will be in the humor to treat reasonably with them. A pulp mill in this city would be worth a great deal as it would provide steady employment for many well-paid workers and would increase the business generally including transportation.
