By printing paper money in unlimited quantities Germany has so far avoided taxing her people for war debts. Now it seems as if it will be useless to keep the presses running and the country will have to get down to some stable system of finance. It will be very interesting to watch for the next step in the financial situation. Germany, Russia and Austria have all been experimenting with the currency and the outcome may be disastrous or a way may be found for stabilizing the finances of those countries so that it will be possible to do business with them on a sound basis.
