Pirates And Prohibition.

Everyone, even perhaps the sternest prohibitionist, knew that when America went dry her law would temporarily be brought into contempt, says the Manchester Guardian. But did anyone foresee the lengths to which lawlessness would go? the most beloved woman on the Elvidge. Albert Roscoe, Alec From the account just written for the "Morning Post" by one who has himself taken part in the disreputable trade, it appears that smuggling is carried on with all the amenities of the old pirates of the Spanish Main. The "rum fleet," hanging ten or twelve miles off the American coast with a cargo of spirits, often mere synthetic poison, finds employment for a most miscellaneous company of desperadoes. There are some who manage the business side and who work in London. Others run the contraband ashore in the "speed boats," dodging or, it is stated, bribing Customs officers. Others, again, the "rum runners, man the motor cars which ply between the coasts and the "blind pigs" or places where drinks are sold more or less secretly. Finally, there are the "high jackers," the lawbreakers who prey upon the lawless fleet itself and loot and "scupper" its ships, sometimes even murdering the crews. Such folk fit well enough into tales of Luis of the Scar, Captain Misson, and the other buccaneering captains whose romantic villaimes used to opposite Jack Pickford in his cently spent a nice little holiday thrill the writers of a peaceful pre-war generation. London's Weather Grumble Shifts.

London's weather grumble has shifted ground. A few days ago it was directed to the dull coldness of the season. the last few days the heat and the sunshine have been our complaint. Of course, a really wise Londoner does not growl over being unduly warm for a tiny portion of the year. But then we are not all really wise, and we have all been very hot. When a woman was brought up at Bow Street on a charge of throwing a stone at the Meteorological Office, what could we do but-theoretically-sympathize? When stalwart men were overcome in a race at Henley, the proper comment was the actually heard "Poor young fellows! After so much cold, no wonder they feel the heat!"-London Times.

High Schools Results Creditable.

According to figures to hand, the High School students were no less successful at their matriculation examinations than were the Public School scholars at the Entrance. Principal Location of "Tol'able David" Brady and his staff and the boys and girls themselves are open for congratulation on the splendid showing which is shown in the results published today. PLACE IN TRADE

Has Been Found to be Good Business Policy Both for Buyer and Seller

OBLIGATION NOT ONE-SIDED

Some cynical persons have remarked that the Golden Rule has no place in business. They have taken the position that instead of doing unto others as you would have then do unto you, the only safe and sane plan is to do others before they have a chance to do

Fortunately for business and for the world at large, however, these persons are few and far between. The great majority of people are honest.

It has been proven repeatedly that even in business it pays to practice the Golden Rule. It not only makes a man feel better down in his heart when he employs its principles but he finds that it is good business.

Does Consumer Do His Part?

The consumer expects the merchant to be honest and square and give him his money's worth for every penny that he spends with him, but how often does the consumer stop and ask himself the question, "Am I being as fair and honest with the merchant as he is being with me?" . The consumer not only expects the merchant to give him-honest weight and full measure at the lowest possible price, but he expects a world of other things at the same time. Nine times out of ten he expects the merchant to give him credit, and nine times out of ten the merchant does it. Many times he expects the merchant to "carry" him for three or four months before he pays for what he buys and as many times the merchant does it. He expects the merchant to pay for advertising space in the church program which he is getting up, and the merchant does it. He expects the merchant to "kick in" most liberally when he is raising a fund for the benefit of the town band, and the merchant does it. He expects the merchant to "come across" with a donation to help the poor family which otherwise would become a charge upon the common funds of the community, and the merchant

Another Side to Picture Now, look on the other side of the picture. Mr. Consumer decides that he needs a new suit of clothes, or Mrs. Consumer decides that she wants a new kitchen range, or some of the little Consumers express a desire for a train of cars or a bobsled. Mr. Consumer picks up the big mail-order catalogue which the mail-order house has printed with his money or that of others like him, and he looks it over until he finds a picture that strikes his eye. It's a picture of a "nifty" looking suit of clothes. Of course, he can't feel the picture to see whether the cloth is as good as it looks; he can't look the mail-order man in the eye and ask him whether he will guarantee it to wear for at least a month or six weeks; he can't tell the mail-order man that he will drop in the first of the month and settle for it: he can't tell the mail-order man that he would-like to have a little of his business or a chance to do a little carpenter work or painting or plumbing for him, as long as he is buying his goods from him, for the mail order man hasn't any business or any work to give him. But the picture is a pretty one, so Mr. Consumer digs out his hard-earned cash and sends it to the mail-order man.

After a week or ten days, or possibly two weeks, the suit arrives. It may be nothing like the picture. The cloth may be of poor quality. The chances are that it doesn't fit at all. But there is nothing for Mr. Consumer to do but wear it. He can't get his money back. He might send the suit back and the mail-order man might send another in its place, but the chances are that it wouldn't be any better than the first and Mr. Consumer would only be out the additional express charges.

Found Golden Rule Pays

Mr. Consumer found that it pays to remember the Golden Rule in business. If he had done unto the merchant as he would, like the merchant to do unto him, he would have got more for his money and he would have aided in making it possible for the merchant to help him and his town when they needed help.

Marital Trouble of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bedore Aired in Court Today

The city police court was the scene of an animated trial this morning when Sam Bedore appeared before Magistrate McClymont on a charge of wife desertion. The charge had been laid by Mrs. Bedore and the prisoner had been recently brought from Stewart by Police Sergeant Mc-Glinchy. L. W. Patmore appeared on behalf of the accused and City Solicitor Jones took the case for the informant. The charge resulted from an order made in the city police court in May 1922 when an order was given for $50] a month maintenance to be paid to Mrs. Bedore by her husband. a provise being made that informant would not molest her husband.
