TRIAL SHIPMENT OF HEMLOCK EAST IN MAY

WITNESS BEFORE COURT OF REVISION ELABORATES ON FIRST STATEMENT

Skeena River Millmen Are to Make Trial Shipment of Hemlock to Atlantic Seaboard via Panama

Skeena River millmen, with the assistance of G. W. Nickerson, lumber broker of this city, are planning to make a trial shipment of western hemlock through this port and the Panama Canal to the Atlantic seaboard in May, according to R. E. Allen, manager of the Royal Mills, Hanall, who is visiting the city today. Four mills will contribute to the cargo and an ocean going boat will be brought here to load the lumber. The Lakelse Lumber Co.'s mill at Amsbury, the George Little mill at Terrace, the Kleanza Lumber Co.'s mill at Usk and the Royal mill at Hanall will participate in the shipment which will probably run into well over a million feet. The experiment, Mr. Allen feels sure, will go through. It will be the first of its kind on such a large scale ever made in the district and it will be watched with great interest. If it proves a success it will open the way to a volume of shipping through this port which may develop into large proportions. While the lack of an ocean dock for loading lumber here will prove a handicap, these enterprising shippers have made up their minds to give the project a fair trial with such facilities as are at hand.

Mr. Allen says that the Royal Mill is now working again at full blast after having been closed down for ten days during the coldest part of the winter. Forty men are employed in the mill and in the woods cutting and logging. The shipping of some 30 carloads of spruce boomsticks to Fort William and Sault Ste. Marie east over the Canadian National Railway has just about been completed. Mr. Allen arrived from Hanall on last night's train and returns tonight.

Says the Victoria Times: Now that the people of British Columbia have been the losers to the extent of about three-quarters of a million dollars, by the collapse of the L. R. UNEMPLOYED IN GREAT BRITAIN

Those Registered Number 1,300,000; Wages Fall Result Stagnant Trade

LONDON, Mar. 23.—The ministry of labor gives the number of registered unemployed in Great Britain at the present time at more than 1,300,000. Despite these huge figures the country has been unusually free from serious labor disputes, mainly owing to the fact that the big trade unions, whose funds have been seriously depleted by previous struggles, are unable longer to resist the continued fall in wages which are shown to be necessitated through the country's stagnant trade.

M. P. McCaffery Gives Interview to Justify His Position Before Court of Revision on Wednesday

"There is no place on the American continent that has so many reasons for going ahead as Prince Rupert," declared M. P. McCaffery in an interview with the Daily News yesterday. "We have reached a point now where we must start. The railway must be made to pay or else the rails must be pulled up. We are in a fortunate position. The government is sympathetic to us and we have a man on the railroad board. All we want now is a fair show and it is my opinion that we are going to get it."

Mr. McCaffery was justifying his attitude before the Court of Revision and he considers he has sound reasons for his optimism. He maintains that circumstances have militated against the city of Prince Rupert and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for many years, but a change is due. He says:

World Needs Timber

"Timber resources contiguous to Prince Rupert are greater than to any other port on the Pacific coast and certainly they are greater than near Vancouver. The Forestry Department says there is six billion feet of fine timber on the Naas River. There are the great Kitimat, Kitsumkalum and Usk stands of gorgeous timber and then between Prince George and McBride and northwards is the biggest tract of timber land in British Columbia. The world needs all this timber and the time is coming—it is almost here—when it must be developed. The benefit of the Panama Canal for Atlantic shipments is just making itself felt. Vancouver shipping is becoming stabilized. The Canadian Robert Dollar Co. is even coming as far north as Swanson Bay with its ships. Shipments can be made to Boston from Vancouver for $12 where formerly the cost was $32. There will be at least 4,000 men employed this year in the mines at Stewart. That means a population of 2,000 without being optimistic about it. We must get a boat between here and Stewart and get the trade there and bring the business to the Canadian National Railways. Those mills on the Queen Charlotte Islands must run and we must get a boat there to bring that business here as well. Prince Rupert should be made the base of the coastwise steamers. They get their repairs here now. Why should this not be made their point of supply and operation?"

The Grand Trunk Pacific Development Co.'s appeal from the city assessment was disposed of yesterday afternoon in the County Court when Judge Young allowed a reduction in assessment totalling about $5,344.53. His Honor ordered that the assessment stand with the exception of lots in Section 3 which are reduced in valuation from an average of $51.77 to $45. The judgment is a distinct victory for the city and it is understood the company plans to take the case now to the Court of Appeals. E. F. Jones, city solicitor, appeared for the city and L. W. Patmore, of Patmore & Fulton, for the company. All evidence was in by noon yesterday and the afternoon session was devoted to arguments of counsel and delivering of judgment. The company was ordered to pay the cost of the court.

Will Back Oliver On Freight Rates.

Premier Oliver has started out on a tour of the province to explain his position and to enthrone the people in the cause. We hope he will come here, but yet we hardly need his influence to make us thoroughgoing supporters of the cause which he espouses. Liberal, Conservative and Labor, all agree that we should have fair play in the matter of rates. People on the western prairies also feel that they should not be called on to pay high rates just because the C.P.R. has a poor grade through the mountains.

We shall look forward to a visit from the premier and also we shall be interested to see what kind of a reception he gets from the people in what are supposed to be strongholds of the new Colonel McRae party.

Senate Reform Before Parliament.

While we do not feel over enthused over the Fielding plan of Senate reform, we must admit it is a little step in the right direction. At present the Senate is a political old men's home, the chief duties of whose members is to grant divorces to those who come to them with marital infelicities. It is a very expensive divorce court, much too expensive for a country the size of Canada.

While the Fielding proposal is not half radical enough for many people it will be the entering of the wedge which will in time hoist the old men off the Canadian political map. It seems queer that we should have to appoint a group of ancient and disgruntled politicians, mostly men who had lost the confidence of the people, to prevent the people's direct representative passing legislation that might injure themselves. The Senate is an obsolete body and as such should go into the discard altogether.

Scrapping Warships Causes Unemployment.

The scrapping of warships in Great Britain has undoubtedly been one of the causes of unemployment in that country. No reform is ever made but it hurts somebody. When the Washington conference was sitting, the shipyards resounded with the hum of machinery and the clatter of industry. In a few weeks some of them were quiet and the men employed there were looking for employment elsewhere. The employees went to increase the mass of unemployed throughout the country. A despatch yesterday told that in all two million tons of warships and auxiliary vessels had been sent to the scrapheap. It is difficult to imagine what that means in a little country like Britain. The shipbuilding was kept going at the expense of the British taxpayer and when it stopped the taxpayer was relieved by that much. Yet saving that money for the taxpayer caused untold suffering and inconvenience to thousands.

Radical Changes To Be Avoided.

Radical changes are always to be avoided. It looks simple enough on the surface to make changes, but the actual practice is not simple by any means. Changes always cause inconvenience and often much suffering. The thing to do is to bring them about gradually. Changes have to come. We are all agreed on that. We all want to see better conditions for everyone. We want to see the condition of the workingman improved, education improved, facilities for the comfort and enjoyment of the community improved, but the improvement must come slowly. From every radical forward step there is usually a reaction that sets us back, sometimes to a point farther in the rear than that from which we started.

The democratic awakening has come on the peoples of the world rather suddenly. A century ago it was hardly thought about. Today everyone is thinking about it and it requires a lot of thought and careful adaptation. The world is large and there are still many dark spots in it. All of these have to be brought in line before any real progress can be made. No nation can today live to itself any more than any person can live to himself. We are all part of the great whole. Many writers have had dreams of a world republic. If they travel to all the countries of the world, however, they find their dreams shattered for it must take centuries of careful nurturing to bring some of the nations to a point where they can hope to take their places as equal partners in any international union.

"My Heart Would Palpitate, I Had Weak Spells"

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes. It has done wonders for me and I want to recommend it to everyone."

HIGH PRICES FOR FISHERMEN

Some of Vessels Have Earned
Good Money During Last Few Weeks

Fishermen who marketed their catches at Prince Rupert have been making pretty good money of late. They have had bad weather to contend with and some have not done any too well but on the whole there has been money in the game, better money than they have made for many a day. Take two typical boats that arrived recently as examples:

American Boat

The American schooner Vansco, Capt. Andrew Olson, a thirteen man boat, arrived in port on Monday, after an absence of three weeks, with 40,000 pounds of halibut which was sold at 18.4c for first class and 16c for second class fish to the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Company. This netted the boat approximately for first class fish $1,600, and for second class fish $1,500 or a total of $3,100. Out of this amount one-fifth was taken for the boat share, or $1,220, covering upkeep, repairs and profits to the vessel, as well as a bonus to the skipper. This left a balance of $1,880 out of which the expenses of the trip had to be deducted, including fuel, oil and provisions. The expenses of a boat of this nature would approximate $1,800 which would leave about $80 to be divided equally among the crew of thirteen men. Thus each member of the crew would receive some $235.

Canadian Boat

The Pair of Jacks, a Canadian boat skippered by Capt. J. Iverson, with a crew of four men, arrived in port on Monday after a three weeks absence with 9,000 pounds of halibut which was sold at 16.5c and 9c to the Pacific Fisheries. Out of this catch 6,500 pounds was first class fish and netted $1,072, while 2,500 pounds of second class fish netted $225 or a total of $1,297. Deducting from this amount one-fifth as the boat share, a balance of $1,037, less expenses of the trip, approximately $400, leaves $637 to be divided between four men or about $160 each.

The earning capacity per man is of course dependent upon the quantity of fish, weather conditions, time absent from port, and the price prevailing upon arrival. In some cases, where boats have made exceptionally quick trips and have struck the market white prices were at their peak, the amount shared per man has ranged from $300 to $100. On the other hand, taking into consideration the whole season's fishing there are times when a boat will strike dirty weather and be compelled to stick around on the deep sea grounds for several weeks and then come in with only a poor catch. It is then that the men get little or nothing for their tedious labor and the boat owner loses money.

HALIBUT TREATY MENTIONED IN HOUSE

Minister of Marine Explains for Benefit of Mr. Meighen

The signing of the treaty of halibut protection with the United States was discussed in the House of Commons recently when Mr. Mr. Lapointe said:

The treaty provides for certain dispositions which were recommended in 1918 by the International Commission appointed by both governments—by the government of which my right hon. friend was leader and by the government of the United States. Among many other recommendations, a treaty had been prepared at the time in regard to the salmon fisheries of the Fraser river, and it was signed but was never ratified by the American Senate. Another treaty had been prepared but was not signed, and one of its dispositions was the very one which is now agreed to in the present treaty. That treaty, I say, was never signed; but it has been unanimously recognized by the experts of the Departments of Marine and Fisheries of both countries that it was highly desirable to enforce the close season, to say nothing of the other dispositions which had been recommended by the International Commission. I may say also that this disposition has been recommended unanimously by the members of the parliamentary committee which was appointed last session to investigate the subject of the fisheries in British Columbia. As to the question which my right hon. friend raises, I do not know of any treaty which was discussed in parliament before being negotiated. The discussion always takes place afterwards.

Mr. Meighen: I am afraid I cannot agree with the hon. minister. I should like the minister, before he comes to the discussion of the bill itself, to be good enough to look up some of his own speeches and those of his leaders on the subject of secret diplomacy.

Mr. Lapointe: I do not like to read my own speeches; I enjoy much more the reading of my right hon. friends.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. members had better reserve any further remarks on this subject until the question comes up regularly before the House.

Best Title For City

"The Oriental Gateway" was the title for the city adjudged to the best submitted at the Rotary luncheon yesterday afternoon. It was submitted by D. W. Bone who was awarded the prize. There were a number of other suggestions but the decision was taken on a majority vote of the members.

The luncheon program was in the hands of the publicity committee consisting of H. F. Pullen, N. B. Walton and Dr. Payne. The last mentioned had charge of the musical arrangements and a number of selections were played by the club orchestra consisting of D. W. Bone, James Lee, Geo. Woodland and Dr. Payne. J. W. Nicholls had charge of the community singing.

There was a drawing contest but for this no prize was awarded. The results, however, were quite startling.

REPAIRS TO BROKEN BODY ARE MADE BY BROOKLYN SURGEONS

NEW YORK, March 22.—Surgeons at the Samaritan Hospital in Brooklyn today were elated over what they declared was the marvellous reconstruction of a shattered human body.

The case is that of Sebastian Riccobene, 17, the blue-eyed Italian youth who leaped five stories to escape death in a fire which swept the Western Company factory in Thirtieth Street, Brooklyn, on October 30 last, causing three deaths. Riccobene was taken to the hospital suffering from injuries which included: Fractures of the spine, skull, pelvis and right arm; paralysis of both legs, punctured bladder and intestines; third degree burns of arms and body, and hemorrhage in the spinal cord.

Today, nineteen weeks after his leap, the boy, belated of the hospital staff, walked down, albeit haltingly, and looked eagerly ahead to the day later in the spring when surgeons predicted he will be himself again, ready to re-enter life's battle.

Passengers sailing this afternoon on the steamer Princess Rupert for the south included the following:

FISHERIES TREATY

Editor Daily News.

Allow me a little space in your valuable paper in regard to the signing of the Halibut Fisheries Treaty providing for a closed season. Looking at it from all points of view, I think it nearly time Canada had something to say in signing treaties in connection with her fishing industry. In several treaties Canada has lost out through the Foreign Office.

You take the sealing treaty. Canada lost out on that as well as on several more. It is nearly time that the Old Country government forgot about Canadians being colonials. Canada is a nation and we are not living under the Hudson Bay charter. Those times are gone for ever. This country is large enough to make her own treaties with a neighbor nation in regard to her fishing industry and the interest of the nation at large. Look at our salmon industry on the coast of British Columbia in the hands of the aliens through an International treaty, where Canada has nothing to say in the matter.

I am glad to know a Government is now at Ottawa that is going in that matter to see where Canada and Canadians are coming off at in regard to International treaties on the fishing industry.

The fishery commission was no farce, as some predicted it would be. They have made a good start in regard to the fishing in the Prince Rupert district and for all this fishermen must give great credit to Fred Stork, our member for getting the commission to visit the coast from Ottawa and find out for themselves the conditions as they exist on the coast.

ROBERT HANNA, Fisherman.

LABOR CAUSE IS EXPLAINED

John W. Bruce Speaks to Small Audience But Makes Clear His Position

URGES SOLIDARITY

Spoke with British and Italian Situations and Urges a United Front

That the labor classes in Canada will take a similar step to that which has been taken in Great Britain and, in order to protect themselves from the present capitalistic and political system of government, will make a bid for the administration of the country's affairs, was a prediction made by John W. Bruce, the recent organizer of the International Plumbers' Union of Canada, in addressing a meeting last night in the Empress Theatre. The speaker said that solidarity of the working classes was necessary and that a spirit of co-operation and enthusiasm that was now lacking must be developed. Disintegrating influences "must be overcome and the working classes had their destiny in their own hands."

Fund of Knowledge

Mr. Bruce's subject was "Latest News on American and European Labor Movements." Having just returned from a tour of America and Europe and having attended the International Labor Congress in Geneva and the congress of the British craft unions in England, the speaker had a wide fund of knowledge from his personal observations and, couched in eloquence, his address was replete with interest and enthusiasm. The attendance, however, due no doubt to the adverse weather, was small. Ald. S. D. Macdonald, president of the Trades & Labor Council, was in the chair and J. J. Gillis, president of the Carpenters' Union, also had a seat upon the platform.

The world today was in a condition of chaos and the capitalistic system had failed, the speaker declared. This condition had arisen out of the war in which the workers of practically all countries had participated. They had been told that they were fighting for democracy but today Europe and the world were in a worse condition than before the war. Unemployment, misery, starvation and degradation were rife. It seemed that war made work for men but peace brought starvation. The Treaty of Versailles had been a failure and had not brought peace. Today Europe was a armed camp and in spite of the era of international peace and goodwill that had been predicted, there was more divisions and boundaries than before the war.

Great Mass Ignorant

The great mass of the people in many of the European countries were ignorant of their social and economic condition so they were easily led. The Fascist movement, opposed to the principles and objects of labor organization, had gained control in Italy and was threatening Germany and England. Its influence could even be felt on this side of the Atlantic. It must be combatted by labor for its object was to prevent labor functioning in the way it should and it was being capitalized to disrupt labor organizations.

Low Moral Standard

Unemployment was the tragedy of civilization in the world today. With the exception of Germany alone, it was greater in every country than before the war and no effort was being made to adjust it. In Great Britain there were 2,500,000 workless. In their determination to make Germany pay, the Allies were making Germany work to capacity. With Germany at work, the rest of the world was out of work. Today Germany was controlling practically all the markets because that country was able to produce more cheaply than the other countries. The governments would say that the only remedy was longer hours and lower pay which meant a lower standard of living. In England today conditions were already repulsive. The worst thing was the increase in prostitution. The same condition existed in Belgium, Italy and Austria and the morality and ideals cherished by men were being broken down.

There was a ray of hope in England, however. The labor classes had risen to be a power in the political field and were challenging the state by attempting to control the machinery of state. Such action was necessary to the welfare of the working classes.

Canadians Divided

In Canada there was a problem confronting the laboring classes equally important. The failure of the workers to realize their position had been destructive to their solidarity. They had been divided in many respects. Some had lacked enthusiasm, while others had been over enthusiastic.

A desperate attempt was being made in Great Britain to solve the problem confronting labor. Philip Snowden even now had a resolution on the order paper of the British House of Commons challenging the very basis of society. That was an indication that the policy of production for use and not for profit was sound.

In numerical strength, the labor movements in Europe were far greater than in America but conditions of the workers were not as good there. This showed that where there was a higher degree of education among the workers better results had been obtained.

Orderly Movement

There were disrupting influences in the ranks of labor in Canada and the United States. These things would have to be faced and a common basis of understanding among all labor classes was necessary in order to present a united front for industrial emancipation. An orderly movement would have to be built up which would function and take the labor classes where they wanted to go with the ultimate object in view of getting the full share of the production of their labor. A spirit of dependency or division could not be allowed to lead the workers to defeat.

Local Conditions

Referring to local labor conditions, the speaker said that the city council here had refused to heed a government act in refusing the workers a conciliation board on their wage dispute. An attempt was being made to smash a labor union. If the council was able to do that, it would be doing something that thousands had tried and failed to accomplish. They would find it impossible, however. He would have thought the city council was comprised of men big enough to observe the law. They had taken advantage of a falling labor market. Had it been rising the council would have been forcing negotiations instead of the workers.

"What the laboring classes need is solidarity, activity and vigor," declared the speaker. "Apathy must be dispelled and organization brought to the status it enjoyed some years ago. The active effort of every man is needed. The outlook, however, is bright. In Britain the basis of society is being challenged and the same may be done here in the same way."

"The workers have got to figure where they stand. Faced with a debt a thousand per cent greater after the war than it was before, capitalists and politicians say that longer hours and less pay are necessary. Thus they would make the laboring classes increase their participation in the payment of the war debts, how much you are going to pay is up to you."

Follow Great Britain

"There is a serious situation ahead. Things have been done without your knowledge and you are not getting all the facts. But I can see the rising tide of militancy in this country. I can see the laboring classes here taking the same step as in Great Britain with the result that, possibly, at no far date in the future, we may be able to put on the order paper of our government just such a motion as Philip Snowden has done in Great Britain challenging the very economic heart of the nation."

Charles Hunter asked Mr. Bruce if he did not consider the resolution made by Philip Snowden but a sop to appease the unemployed while he was crawling on his hands and knees in coked hat and knee breeches to dine with the King. Mr. Bruce did not share this view and felt that the very fact that Snowden and other Laborites had been asked to dine with the King was a signal victory of recognition for the cause. Mr. Hunter expressed the opinion that Thomas and Clynes were a disgrace to the British Labor party. Mr. Bruce defended them and stated that they held the wide respect and approbation of the laboring masses of Great Britain.

Avoided Russia

W. Dickens asked Mr. Bruce why he had not dealt more fully with the Russian situation. Mr. Bruce replied that, not having personally visited Russia, he was not in a position to speak on the question. Opinions and reports differed widely and it was difficult to get coherent information about Russia. Mr. Bruce referred to Lenin's declaration before the soviet congress that the workers of each country would have to work out their own salvation according to the circumstances prevailing in their particular sphere. Such advice as that he believed was sound.

President S. D. Macdonald in closing the meeting thanked Mr. Bruce for his message and deplored the fact that there had been so few present to hear it. He also publicly thanked Archdeacon Bix and other members of the delegation which had appeared before the city council on Monday night on behalf of the workers in their wage dispute with the city.

the opposition leader, amid applause at a Conservative meeting in St. Mary's School. He pointed out that under the present abnormal conditions when people are discontented and business is dull, the advent of a new party pledged to lead the people out of the political wilderness is bound to secure adherents. But he cited the experience of Ontario, Manitoba, and, indeed, the present Federal administration at Ottawa, as examples of the evils of group government.

Mr. Bowser delved into political history in this province to show that prior to 1903 when party political lines were closely drawn by the late Sir Richard McBride, there was no continuity in government, no definite policy, no program which could be carried out to the advantage of the province. There was no cohesion, no tradition behind the three parties, he said.

"There is one thing we must work for," he said, "that is constitutional government."

Prefers Oliver

"I would rather see Mr. Oliver, with all his imperfections as an administrator returned to power than that a system of groups should be returned, a system which cannot carry out a responsible program," declared Mr. Bowser, who held that the present party system was the only one, however imperfect, that would produce adequate results.

Mr. Bowser predicted that the new party under General McRae would not last long. True, General McRae was seeking to make the people believe he was willing to sacrifice a great deal in their interests, but his following were, actually, sore-heads, men with a grudge against the existing parties, and the General's talk of

CONCRETE TIES PLACE OF WOOD

Being Used With Success in India Displacing Douglas Fir as Experiment

CALCUTTA, March 22.—Owing to the considerable market which has developed in recent years for Douglas fir creosoted sleepers in India, interest is attached to a demonstration made a few days ago of a new type of concrete sleeper, so called from the name of D. H. Stent, the inventor. The demonstration of this new concrete sleeper near Delhi was witnessed by leading Indian railway engineers and officials. The process of manufacture was exhibited at the Delhi plant of a prominent engineering company, and then a trip was made in a special train over a few miles of the North Western Railway, where the rails had been laid on these sleepers.

This sleeper is officially described as follows: "It consists of two concrete blocks, or pots, joined together by a tie bar, as in cast-iron sleepers. The rail fastening is by means of screw or dog spikes driven into wooden plugs specially treated and compressed and set in the body of the concrete block, whereby it is claimed that the advantages of the wooden sleeper, together with permanency and low cost, are obtained. Rails of any section, from 70 pounds to 110 pounds, can be laid on the standard concrete sleeper."

Fifty Miles Laid

That the experimental stage has already been passed is shown by the fact that the North Western Railway have already laid fifty miles of line with this sleeper, and it is said that they contemplate laying another seventy-five miles with the same sleeper. The engineers witnessing the experiments referred to above appear to have been considerably impressed by the strength shown by the sleepers under tests, and by the diminution of noise when the train passed from track laid on ordinary iron sleepers to track laid on concrete sleepers. If further time and experience prove the economy and efficiency of this new sleeper, the very promising market which has developed for Canadian creosoted Douglas fir sleepers will be seriously impaired. It remains to be seen, however, whether these concrete sleepers will stand several years of wear and tear.

R. T. Lynott, of the Canadian National ticket office in Duluth, Minn., arrived from the East on the train last night and sailed for Vancouver on the Prince Rupert this afternoon. He is touring the west on a holiday trip.

The Coughs and Colds of Children

Only the mother knows how hard it is to keep the children from taking cold, they will get overheated and cool off too suddenly, get their feet wet, kick off the clothes at night, and do a dozen and one things the mother can't prevent.

A great many mothers are now giving their children

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

It is pleasant and nice for them to take and relieves the cough or cold in a very short time.

Mrs. J. Wilson, Portage La Prairie, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for my five children. My little girl, two years old, had a very bad cold last Winter, which I thought was a croup, I had some 'Dr. Wood's' in the house so gave it to her and she was fine the next day; also my baby, three months old, had a bad cold and I gave it to him. It cuts and brings up the phlegm, and is the best cough medicine I ever used."

MAN WAS NEVER LOWER ANIMAL

So Says Dr. W. D. Matthew of the American Museum of Natural History

TORONTO, March 23.—Dr. W. D. Matthew, curator of Palaeontology, American Museum of Natural History, New York, addressed the Royal Canadian Institute, at a meeting held in the Physics Building of the University of Toronto, on the "Ancestry of the Horse, and Other Geological Records of Evolution." Dr. Matthew is a native of New Brunswick. Dr. Matthew said that to his mind these records were most definite evidence of the truth of changes in the animal kingdom. There was not as yet, however, any geological proof of evolution as regards man.

In Varying Forms

Dr. Matthew chose the horse as an excellent example of the gradual changes which had taken place. The earliest fossil of the horse yet found had four toes on the forefeet and three toes on the hind feet. This animal was only the size of a whippet greyhound. The speaker said that he had personally examined the fossils of between 50,000 and 60,000 species of the horse, and had been present at the excavation of about 50,000. By means of lantern slides he illustrated the gradual changes which took place in the size of the animal, in the nature of the teeth and in the feet, the different specimens being found in successive strata of rock. No evidence had as yet been found of a fifth toe in the horse, but the speaker felt certain that there had at one time been a fifth toe. In various slides he showed the gradual dwindling and disappearance of one toe after another until the single-toed horse of the present time was evolved. The speaker said that the rhinoceros, the tapir and the horse all came from a common ancestral stock, according to geology. Cattle, sheep, goats, antelopes, deer and the hippopotamus could also be traced back to a single group.

Man Primate, He Says

Dr. Matthew pointed out that, zoologically, man was a primate. But very little about the past history of man was found in fossils. If man were derived from apes and monkeys, he said, scientists would expect to find this evidence in areas not yet investigated, but there was no proof. In the pleistocene age, the age preceding the present, distinct varieties of the human species were found, but they were distinctly man, and not ape. Man of the present day was the highest and only one that survives of several lower species of the pleistocene age.

"Evolution of man stands mainly on anatomical and physiological records," Dr. Matthew pointed out, "records which seem to merely bear out what one would suppose from geological findings. Man stands in a position totally different from apes and monkeys as regards his relations to nature. They must change with their environment to make it better for his needs. The important thing now is, not adapting oneself to nature, but adapting nature to one's desires. For this reason I say that the course of evolution has changed."
