CANBERRA, Australia ()-Field Marshall Viscount Montgomery told a press conference today there is no evidence yet of a future war of the "push button" variety. He said:

"I could not possibly recommend that we scrap everything we have and start pushing buttons." Montgomery says he does not subscribe to the theory that a third world war is inevitable, and declared "I think that is the wrong sort of attitude. The field marshal said counter measures could be developed quickly against atomic weapons."

Deplorable Ignorance

APT. HENRY SLAYTON, who drove into Prince Rupert last night to win a medal as the first motorist to drive from Florida to this city, is not the first to tell of Canadian customs officers at the British Columbia border advising motor tourists, no doubt through sheer and deplorable, if not inexcusable, ignorance, that there was no highway open to Terrace and Prince Rupert. How such officials should not yet know the northern transprovincial highway leading to the coast here is open seems almost unbelieveable but it seems, nevertheless, true. For instance Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth, recent settlers at Terrace from Nevada, were similarily misadvised and, like Captain Slayton, almost abandoned the trip.

The Associated Boards of Trade of Central British Columbia and other organizations were well advised in making vigorous protest to the appropriate government authorities and it is hoped the protests will have immediate effect. Certainly, government officials, particularly those having to do with immigration, should be the last to be so ill informed about their own country and its vital travel facilities.

KEEPING UP TO DATE

MHETHER WE ARE READY to admit it or not, this has become an age of internationalism. No longer is it sufficient for a citizen merely to keep up with happenings in his own community, his own province or even his own country. In this fast-moving period a development in a country or city thousands of miles away can affect a Canadian community.

The last war emphasized to Canadians that the time has passed when they could think of their country as a land isolated and protected by vast oceans on either coast. Events in Asia and in Europe were interlocked with the destiny of the Dominion. The end of war left Canada with new and lasting responsibilities in helping to make and keep the peace.

The citizen shares those responsibilities because his representatives in parliament can carry out programs and policies only to the extent they are backed by the people of Canada.

Where can the facts be found that will enable a Canadian to express a thoughtful, well-informed opinion on an issue of national importance? To what source can he turn for background information on an international development?

Special departments of newspapers are one help-special commentaries by news analysts, interpretative articles by correspondents and other expressions of expert opinion. Magazines contain many worthwhile articles written from the Canadian viewpoint. Practically every library has timely books on current affairs.

An atlas or a globe kept near the easy chair often clarifies a news story or article. Reference libraries make available material for a debate or discussion and reports of surveys and similar activities can be obtained.

Keeping up to date needn't be dry or dull. It can provide an interesting way of broadening one's horizons, making new friends and gaining satisfaction from being in step with events.

Being informed and alert is more than the duty of a good citizen. It can safeguard liberty itself.
