NEVER WILL BE SECOND BENNETT

"R. B." Never Spent More Than He Earned
It is not likely Canada will ever see another Bennett because the times that created him will never come again, writes Frank Flaherty in Toronto Saturday Night. "He went to Calgary in 1897," writes Flaherty after a few years as a practising lawyer in his native New Brunswick. "One day as he relaxed on a train he told the writer how it all started."

"When I got to Calgary all I had was a $5 bill, a few odd dollars and a few boxes of books," said Bennett. "The first few years were pretty tough. I made less than $1,000 a year but I always spent less than I made. I never paid more than a few dollars a month for my room until later on when I moved to a hotel. I never had a car. There were other fellows who went to Calgary about the same time who bought cars and built fine houses but none got anything ahead of them."

GENIUS AT WORK ON ATOM RESEARCH—At the age of four, Raymond Schiff, of Pittsburgh, learned to play chess. While in High School, two years before the atomic bomb, he wrote an essay on the future of atomic energy. Today, at 21, he is working with scientists on nuclear experiments. He is shown here exercising his mental muscles at the target end of the giant atom-smasher in Pittsburgh. Schiff won one of the two top awards in the annual science talent search five years ago. Since then he has studied at Harvard under some of the nation's leading experts in atomic physics, and now ranks as one of the country's youngest nuclear physicists.

MORE SALMON IS AVAILABLE

To Canadians Following Cancellation of Britain To Take 40 Per Cent of Pack

OTTAWA (CP)—More canned salmon will be available for Canadians this year now that the United Kingdom has cancelled its agreement to buy forty per cent of the British Columbia pack, an official of the fishing industry forecast yesterday as preparations went forward for two important meetings in the industry here next week.

Silas Innes, a native of Kitkatla, suffering from injuries to the head following a fight on Third Avenue, was picked up at the Pacific Cafe by the city ambulance at 2:30 this morning and taken to Prince Rupert General Hospital. UNION TALK OUT OF TURN

TORONTO —A Union statement that broke a vow of silence on the progress of negotiations towards settling of the nine-day old strike in six plants of the Swift-Canadian Co. has been blamed by company negotiators behind the scenes for the inability to reach a settlement.

Both sides had pledged themselves earlier to keep details secret until talks had ended.

DOBBIN RIDES, NOT WALKS, UP THE AIRPLANE RAMP—With the use of the new ramp, which is based on the principle of the funicular railway system, a horse to be air-borne is secured before loading in a specially constructed box which remains level as it is hoisted up the ramp into the aircraft. Inside the hold of the Bristol freighter, a U. K. plane—large enough to carry five horses for 300 miles in this way—the box is fastened to special attachments in the floor. Loading completed, the ramp, weighing 250 pounds, quickly dismantles and is carried in the aircraft with the horses, to be used for unloading at the terminal point. Evolution of this design eliminates the use of heavy and unwieldy loading equipment which in the past has impeded large scale use of aircraft to carry racehorses. Carrying four horses, the aircraft can travel 800 miles.

Villagers at Grimethorpe Are To Determine Production of Fuel

DONCASTER, England, (CP)—In the Yorkshire mining village of Grimethorpe, 132 men will meet tomorrow to make a decision vital to Britain's chances of weathering the economic crisis. They are the men who a month ago went on strike when asked to hew an extra two feet of coal-face a shift in the Melton field seam at Grimethorpe and brought 70,000 other Yorkshire miners out in sympathy. The strike has already cost Britain 350,000 tons of coal and the daily loss, with winter approaching and another spectre of fuel shortage looming, is about 90,000 tons.

ADOLF WAS FOOLED—Thought Invasion of Britain Not Needed; War Already Won

NUERNBERG, (CP)—New light on one of Adolf Hitler's best kept secrets—why Britain was not invaded—was cast today in published passages of the diary of Gen. Franz Halder, former chief of staff of the Germany army.

The diary said that Hitler suddenly stopped active preparations for invasion of Britain on the ground that a "crossing of the channel would be a mistake" and that Germany would find another way of beating Britain.

Halder said that Hitler thought this was only a matter of time as the war was "already won."

INDONESIAN SETTLEMENT

Australia and Belgium are Named as 'Negotiator Nations'

BATAVIA (CP)—The Indonesian Republic today designated Australia to represent it in the United Nations' sponsored attempt to solve the Dutch Indonesian conflict.

The Netherlands had previously chosen Belgium as its representative.

Australia and Belgium will select a third party. The three will then attempt to reconcile the Dutch and the Indonesians.

Missed the Bank—Cheque Uncashed

The new banking hours threw at least one man into a state of frustration today. Just a few minutes after eleven this morning an unidentified man rushed up to the bank door and, finding it locked, drew back and gazed at the drawn blinds in bewilderment. Stopping a passer-by the confused man asked how it was that the bank was closed at this hour of made but they didn't make the day. Explanations were the would-be bank customer any happier, he had a cheque that just had to be cashed.

The city ambulance was called to take Andrew Wilson of 617 Fulton Street to the General Hospital at 5:15 this morning.

U.S. COOL ON BEVIN PLAN

Various Interpretations as to What British Foreign Secretary Meant

WASHINGTON D. C. (CP)—New interpretations of what Ernest Bevin, British foreign secretary might have meant by his proposal for "redistribution of Fort Knox gold" have failed to thaw official American coldness toward the idea.

Some London sources said the Foreign Secretary's theory was that, by raising the dollar value of its big gold holdings, the United States could make "profit" which could be used in paying for aid to Europe without imposing additional burden on American taxpayers.

One Washington government analyst called this another invitation to make loans or gifts.

Choosing Immigrants

PREFERENCE TO SETTLERS of British stock in any immigration scheme for British Columbia, as set out by Premier John Hart as a guiding principle, is, of course, a very desirable aim. Naturally, we might be expected to feel a preference in that direction but it cannot be anything more than a preference. As a matter of fact, it is a question whether exclusively British immigration would fit our needs. On the land, particularly, it might be questionable and it is for the development of our agricultural background, which is not keeping pace with our industrial expansion, that new people are needed.

It is questionable if British people, so many of whom are highly industrialized, want to come to the land. And it is further questionable if they would be entirely suitable as settlers of the land.

Possibly, there is a type of European people that might be better fitted.

We are not discounting the desirability of British immigration but we also remember that we have in the past had immigrants from certain European countries, who, even in the first and second generations, have become assimilated as some of our finest Canadian citizens.

A SENATOR'S VIEWS

SENATOR J. G. TURGEON, writing as a guest columnist in the Vancouver News-Herald recently, deals with the subject of immigration and applies his views in regard to a broader immigration policy as an economic necessity for Canada particularly to Northern British Columbia and Prince Rupert district. Here is what he has to say:

"Some of the steps about to be taken by Great Britain in an effort to avert complete disaster should at last make all Canadians realize Canada's stark poverty so far as population is concerned. The positive and urgent need of large and carefully planned immigration must now be clearly seen.

"This is especially true of British Columbia. Our great and long-continued export of timber to the United Kingdom is suddenly and seriously threatened. It is true that there is, at the moment, a domestic market by reason of the dreadful housing conditions in so many parts of Canada. And it is to be seriously hoped that at least for the next year or so our wealth-creating employment-producing lumber industry will continue in full swing.

"But are we Canadians going to remain forever willing to be utterly dependent upon foreign markets for our industrial and productive life?

"Canada—and especially British Columbia—must have more people. We are crying for railway construction in the north and central portions of the province. Yet we know that the prospect of largely increased population, together with development of our north country's wealth of untouched natural resources, is an absolute necessity both for the construction and for the economic operation of such a railway.

"Prince Rupert is still looking eagerly for the development that was promised 40 years ago by the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. But the immigration that was promised at that time soon was stopped, and was kept shut off deliberately until the last few months. If Canada really enters upon a far-reaching immigration policy, and if the people admitted are properly organized, then without doubt British Columbia's northern area will be settled and its resources will be developed.

"If this prospect of population and development is made positive through government policy and activity then there will be comparatively little trouble in bringing about necessary and properly located railway construction; and the whole northern portions of British Columbia and Alberta will come into their own and railways and seaports and the Western Canadian economy will prosper.

"Then we will no longer have to denounce the construction of secondary industry in Ontario and Quebec. The increased population, the development of resources and the creation of transportation facilities will materially increase our secondary industry.

"Every community in British Columbia and every group or association of peoples should endorse the steps already taken and in addition should press upon the government for a definite, far-sighted and truly active policy of broad and selective immigration."

SOME MORE PUBLICITY

PRINCE RUPERT AND DISTRICT gets some fine double-barrelled publicity in the current issue of Toronto Saturday night which draws attention on Page 1 to a well written and splendidly illustrated article entitled "Travelling British Columbia's Prince Rupert Region is like a 'Package Tour' of All Canada," which occupies all of Pages 2 and 3. The author is Harry Rowed who was here a few weeks ago gathering atmosphere and taking pictures, the latter being, indeed, the feature of the piece. Included in the picture is one excellent panorama of the city from Acropolis Hill.

Leading off, the article says:

"The few hundred miles from Mount Robson to the coastal city of Prince Rupert may be described as a package tour incorporating something of all Canada, a transcontinental trip involving twenty-four hours train travel. For the "Rupert Line" swings through high mountains, it winds along farm lands reminiscent of both the prairies and the east, pushes into lake and river country not dissimilar to northlands of Ontario and Quebec and finishing along a waterfront that could develop nostalgia in the mind of the Maritimer. Yet the entire region has a marked character of its own, one which deftly combines native lore and vigorous industry."

Classified Advertising Pays!

Canadian Newspapers

From the Monthly Letter of Royal Bank of Canada

INSTALMENT NO. 2

CIRCULATION AND ADVERTISING

Before discussing what they put into their newspapers, it would be well to make a courtesy reference to the business departments. Circulations have increased greatly in recent years indicating that editorial departments are filling a public need in their presentation of news and views.

In February this year the President of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association said combined circulation of Canadian dailies had reached a total of 2,880,000, actually higher than the number of families in the Dominion. This was an increase of 733,000 since 1935.

Advertising departments, too, report themselves in healthy condition. Total expenditures by Canada's 100 biggest advertisers in 1946 in 90 dailies, 4 week-end papers, 15 magazines and 14 farm papers, amounted to $13.3 million, an increase of 8.4 per cent over 1945, according to the magazine Marketing.

This may be the piece to comment on a statement sometimes heard to the effect that advertising "support" newspapers. Advertising is a business, and the support is not a subsidy, but payment for a service. "That is why," said the New York Times editorially, "there is so little point or truth in most accusations that newspapers are 'dominated' by the political views of their advertisers. A paper's advertisers, like its readers, are a numerous and heterogeneous group, of many diverse opinions. The newspaper has no way of knowing what the political and economic views of its advertisers are."

SATURDAY SERMON

HITCH HIKING

(REV. B. S. PROCKTER, St. Andrew's Cathedral)

"And Ruth said . . . whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

These well known and well loved words spoken by Ruth to her mother-in-law are often used and quoted in connection with the most sacred ties which bind people together in love and fidelity. Sometimes they are used as a solo at a wedding. While originally they had no reference to marriage, it is still true that such Biblical words have much more relevance and are much more appropriately sung in church than our secular songs of love and marriage.

We need not doubt that Ruth loved her mother-in-law very dearly, and being the sort of person who shows love in submission rather than in assertion she makes the complete self abdicating, placing all the direction and responsibility on the other's shoulders. "Where you go, I will go. Where you stay, I will stay. Your people, my people. Your God, my God." It is a lot that she was offering, and a lot of responsibility she was loading on Naomi. But many lives flourish best if they can love and be useful and leave the big issues in the hands of the beloved. In a sense, this is hitch-hiking, but it would be a lonely world if everybody decided to be independent.

The basis of many of the games we play as children is "follow the leader" and they illustrate this quality or tendency we all have to throw in our lot with somebody else and enjoy doing it.

There are circumstances in life when we have to do this quite deliberately. Marriage has already been mentioned. The "weaker vessel" delights to follow the leader. Community demands our capacity for following often enough, but it is best here too that we do it with our will and intelligence and not simply because we like having somebody else take the responsibility.

This is, however, such a common thing among us that we need to consider. Wherever we are and whatever we are doing, there may be someone who is deciding to do what we do. We may be young. A little child can lead them. We may be old. We may be wise or foolish. We may be hanging back or on the march. Others decide if only for the moment to go where we go and stay where we stay. Maybe we are completely off guard or very much on our best behaviour. Somebody else, consciously or unconsciously either through appreciation or sheer lethargy decides that for this time they will hitch-hike with us along life's highway and they climb aboard.

When we begin to consider what kind of people we are, such reflection as these are I am sure quite horrifying. Well might we resent the fact that people so often refuse to live their own lives and that we should have upon our backs not only our own stupidity and sinfulness but that of other people.

However, the matter really presents no insoluble problem to the understanding Christian. Our Blessed Lord has already told us that we are considered only partly as individuals . . . that in His eyes we belong together in the same bundle of life along indeed with our forbears and those who shall come after. This is one of the facts of life none the less for being so dimly apprehended in our time.

This identity with each other is at once our hope and our danger. Our danger: because it can be a case of the blind leading the blind and falling into the ditch or grave of futility and degradation. This initially happened when Adam decided to follow Eve.

But the blessed hope is also here. Our Lord seeks to gather us into the bundle of new life which is His Church, His Body in which we may all be one in Him.

It cannot be too frequently brought home to such individualistic Christians as we are, that it is in and through His Church that we are assured in the New Testament of our Salvation and Eternal Life. Further, it does no harm to be asked questions concerning our attitude to those who share with us the blessed hope.

To be called out of the world into the Church is to become one who said and will keep on saying to the Crucified Saviour: Where you go, I will go. Where you stay I will stay. Your people, my people. Your God, my God.

Then we shall not worry about the people who follow us. For if they follow for even the briefest time they will realize that they are following a follower and a poor one at that. They will ask themselves about the Leader, and from following us they may turn either in appreciation or dissatisfaction to Him. So may they be lifted out of this grave of futility into the Eternal Family life of the Church which is His Body and His Bride.

Tells of His British Trip

Tanned, Fit and Full of Vigor
Abbie Eyoifson Back Home

Tanned, fit and full of pep and vigor. Leading Seaman Albert Eyoifson is back in town after a trip that carried him across Canada, the Atlantic Ocean and the length and breadth of the United Kingdom as representative of the local Sea Cadet Corps and guest of the Navy League.

To Abbie the experience was one of interest and education. Leaving Prince Rupert August 24 he travelled by train to Montreal where he met his commanding officer, Lt. Cdr. Moffatt, Midshipman Graham Atkins and other Sea Cadets making the trip, except the boys from the Maritimes who joined the party later. At Halifax the group of 25 boys and their two officers were given a civic reception and Abbie, being the Cadet who had travelled the farthest from home, was called to give an impromptu address to the gathering and over the air.

The sea trip on H.M.C.S. Warrior was pleasant with plenty of physical training to keep the boys in trim and floor hockey for recreation. Arriving in Greenock, Scotland, the Cadets were taken to see the Rosyth Dockyards near Edinburgh. While there they were quartered on H.M.S. Cochrane and spent some time seeing the sights of Edinburgh which Abbie thought was the most interesting city he visited in the United Kingdom.

By train the Canadian party travelled to Portsmouth where they stayed almost a week, living on H.M.S. Royalist. They were taken to see the mine-laying school, torpedo school, motor torpedo school, gunnery school, visited Nelson's old Victory and had one day at sea on a Royal Navy destroyer out on a torpedo run. It was at Portsmouth that Abbie made his second public address of the trip. It too was an impromptu speech, given while the cadets were having tea with the Lord Mayor of Portsmouth.

When the boys got back to London they were given their first and only leave. Abbie went to Liverpool in the 48 hours permitted him. After their leave the group visited London Tower, the Houses of Parliament, St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey and some of the other spots of interest. On one afternoon they had tea with Canada's High Commissioner, N. A. Robertson, and on their last night in London, Rt. Hon. A. V. Alexander, British Minister of Defence, addressed them at a formal banquet.

On their way back to embark on the Warrior at Greenock, the boys had only 35 minutes in Glasgow. Just time to have breakfast and catch another train. The westward crossing of the Atlantic was not a smooth one according to Abbie, although most of the boys managed to stay on their feet and the two or three who had to stay in their bunks were taking an interest in things again before the storm blew itself out.

Once in Canada and several times overseas, the touring Sea Cadets were subjects for news-reel cameramen and Abbie has been informed that one picture, taken while the party was visiting H.M.S. Victory at Portsmouth, is now showing in Canada. The Cadets saw one soccer game in the United Kingdom, did not attend any dances and had no parties but, wherever they had a stop-over, there were British Sea Cadets on hand to show the visitors around and to see that they did not get lost.

While in Portsmouth the boys were taken to see the opera "Student Prince" and for Abbie this was one of the most entertaining features of the whole trip. He has not yet quite made up his mind but Abbie is thinking of entering the service of one of the banks here. He junior matriculated from High School here last year.

The theory of refrigeration for preserving food was first expressed in the middle of the 18th century.

LETTERBOX

THE CITY BAND
Editor, Daily News:
I've been following the "Letters" appearing in your paper
the last few days on the Civic Band and feel I should try to straighten out a few matters.
In the first place I would like to thank Mr. Steen for his efforts in support of the band. It is unfortunate that he had a few facts that were not quite accurate.

Mr. Thain's letter was correct.
The city did donate us $100
which was appreciated.
Nevertheless we were offered $5 for our part in the crowning of the queen—which included a parade through town and back to the Civic Centre where we waited outside while the queen was crowned, then paraded her uptown again.

We felt that, as an organization which is in need of funds as badly as we are, we were justified in approaching the Civic Centre committee to ask for some support.

We approached a member of the committee and laid our request before him. His answer was "Will five be OK?" (We did receive $25 later from the Civic Centre).

Now we of the band do not want to pick on personalities.
We realize that this man is not alone. Many people would have probably said the same thing.
But we would like to try to point out to the people of Prince Rupert that you cannot speak in terms of five or twenty-five when referring to a city band.
Those who do just don't understand what they are saying.

There is considerable personal cost to the members of our band which holds us up from making any gains in our objective.

We need $1,200 at least for uniforms, and instruments are always high, even to purchase them second-hand.

Thank you Mr. Editor for your valuable space.

ROI T. JUDGE,
President,
Prince Rupert Civic Band.

LIFE in this Prince Rupert
by BIDDEE JINKS

I doubt if I will ever again
ask anybody to play the "Glow Worm" for me. Not only for a long while anyway, and then it Skeena River as far as Dorreen,
where he remained for five years
prospecting.

she smiled brilliantly and was forgiven—if there was anything to forgive.
The piano was lovely under her touch. She played swing and swung from it to Chopin. She called for requests and, by and by, I got to thinking it was my turn. "The Glow Worm, please," I said, "I love it!" and she laughed. She threw back her head, held up her hands, and shrieked. Quickly I cast about for a reason. Had I called it
"Fire Fly" as I had when a child? I might have—but no, I heard myself distinctly say
"Glow Worm." By the time I came out of this state of shock she had regained her voice and was shrieking, "The Glow Worm!" That horrible thing! I just loathe it—loathe it—but I'll play it." Whereupon she attacked the piano with such indelicacy that the Glow Worm turned magically into a firefly—and flitted stripped and unlovely from the room.

She played beautifully and was well-trained vocally, evident from her first note and long before she murmured for the seventh time, loudly, "I remember so well when I studied this piece under Madam Kadiza."

She loved us for listening to her but, nevertheless, she was in a class by herself with one exception. He stood near the piano and at a raised eye-brow
he joined his tenor with her soprano. It was lovely, in spite of the fact that he was "self-taught." That was her expression also but she allowed that he could sing. He had sung publicly in Winnipeg and lesser places and was a Canadian who knew "Trees" and the semi-classical range of solos. She was an American, had done vaudeville and sung anything, but they were kindred spirits. So much so that she disposed of the rest of us with a wave of her chubby hand after using a slangy phrase, and gurgled up at him: "Id better not try any vaudeville stuff here had I? It just wouldn't be understood in this company!" You see, we were Canadians — the conservative, dull type.

There was a session of community singing when the long, long trail wound no longer, and nobody in particular was coaxed
into the supreme role of smiling
while getting kissed a sad, sad adieu. She didn't know "Rock of Ages," No, nor "The Old Rugged Cross." Impatiently, she didn't know any hymns. "Let's sing 'California-I-a' instead," she said, and led off. None of us knew it but a few attempted a cover-up by humming and lip-reading. It was a failure. The music stopped with a crash. "For Heaven's sake — are you all Canadians?" she shouted. But

JET ENGINES CLEAR THAMES OF MUD—A cascade of water goes up from the river Thames as mud is blasted away from the river bed by a jet engine, blowing about 40 lbs. of air a second. By this method it is hoped to do away with the slow dredging system of keeping the Thames clear of mud to allow ships to sail farther up the river. The jet engine, an early model airplane type, blows air into the water, disturbs the mud which is carried away by the river current.

Cassiar and Port Edward Canneries Still Running—Coast Halibut Landings

Cassiar and Port Edward are the only two salmon canneries still operating on the Skeena River. In Prince Rupert the Seal Cove cannery is still open as are Butedale, Klemtu, Goose Bay and Namu down the coast. Trollers report light catches and the gill-net hauls consist mainly of chums with a very light showing of coho. Seine areas are still open in the southern part of the Prince Rupert fishing area which includes Lowe Inlet, Whale Channel, Kynoch Inlet, Mathieson Channel, Seaforth Channel, Rivers Inlet and Smith's Inlet. The waters off the north and east coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands are still open. A few seiners are out there now but most of the fleet is waiting for the annual large-scale movement of chums which usually puts in an appearance around the Queen Charlottes about this time of year.

The records of the International Fisheries Commission show that for the period from May 1 to August 31, 1947, the following total amounts of halibut in pounds have been landed in Pacific Coast ports from Area 3:

|----------------|-------------------|
| U.S. Fleet | 21,214,000 |
| Canadian Fleet | 6,985,000 |
| Total | 28,199,000 |

The above figures are preliminary totals for the season, as the area closed to halibut fishing on August 17 on attainment of the 28,000,000 pound catch limit set for the area.

In 1946, Area 3 was closed to halibut fishing on August 19. Season totals for Area 3 in that year were as follows:

|----------------|-------------------|
| U.S. Fleet | 27,125,000 |
| Canadian Fleet | 4,062,000 |
| Total | 31,187,000 |

Landings from the closed Area 2 during August were restricted to that halibut caught incidentally while fishing with set lines for other species under permit and amounted to 65,000 pounds in 1947 compared to 186,000 pounds for the same month in 1946.

Summer has gone, but the lure of the north British Columbia and Alaskan coasts still holds. It looks like plenty of tourist travel through a large part of the fall. Ships still have much of their accommodation taken up by tourists, passengers coming from all over the west, 90 per cent from the United States.

With the Alaska longshore situation what it is and strikes tying up Alaska Steamship and Northland Transportation Co. shipments, the motorship South-eastern continues pretty well occupied now serving shipments between Seattle and Alaskan ports. The Southeastern is the Briggs Steamship Co. vessel and was originally put on the run between Prince Rupert and southeastern Alaska.

The new Minister of Fisheries, Dr. Milton Gregg, whose appointment was announced this week, won the Victoria Cross in the First Great War, and doubtless is the first cabinet member to hold that distinction. He is, however, no stranger to parliamentary routine.

The Naas River salmon gill net area has been slightly enlarged to include a small additional area at Pearse and Portland Canals.

Longshoremen at Seward, after striking for three weeks over a dispute with sailors, are back at work, having been promised that a Labor Relations Board field man would go north to discuss the situation with them.

In an effort to keep as many dollars possible at home, instructions have been issued by the British Government cancelling several important orders for Canadian fish. This, to some extent, affects the west coast. This may mean the taking up of some slack in the fish business and fostering the inclination by the Canadian public to be greater consumers. They use a lot of fish, already, and more and more of what is a grand dish can do no one any harm.

Union steamer Camosun, Capt. Harry McLeod, arrived in port at 4:50 yesterday afternoon and sailed again at midnight for Ketchikan. Passengers disembarking at Prince Rupert were: H. Hall, Mrs. W. J. Gibson, R. Johnson, P. Waterman, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. McLeod and two children, Rev. and Mrs. Solland and child, Miss M. Hendrick, Mrs. E. Henbly, and Mr. and Mrs. Tedberg. Among passengers heading for Ketchikan on the Camosun were many school teachers who have been spending the summer vacation at their homes in the south.

Second Union liner of the evening to reach port was the Catala, Capt. Ernest Sheppard, which completed her calls in the Skeena River before coming here and arrived at 8:20 p.m., sailing a couple of hours later on her return to Vancouver.
