Up To Canada

DROMINENT British business men who visited the city this week with the United Kingdom timber industries party were ready to admit that it was problematical if old Britain could survive economically without a new policy of permanent aid and support from the rest of the Commonwealth. It is to such assistance that the heart of the Empire must look now if the Commonwealth is to be maintained as such henceforth. It is inconceivable that the independent Dominions, such as Canada, should not assume their responsibility in giving economic aid to the Old Land in this hour of her dire need. There may be a note of sentiment in the situation but, all sentiment aside, she is still capable, once the necessary economic adjustments are made, of being one of Canada's best customers. It should be remembered that it was Britain that stood as our fast buttress in the dark hours of war when her peril was our peril although further removed. Now we would do well, our own security for the time at least seeming secure, to stand by

It is appropriate enough that Mr. Low, the leader of Canada's Social Credit party, should suggest that this Dominion take the lead in calling a Commonwealth Conference to discuss ways of helping Britain in her present extremity. In such a proposal, he merely takes the words out of most loyal Canadians' mouths. As Mr. Low says: "It would be very difficult for the British government to take the initiative in calling such a conference." We were able, however, to learn how Britons feel through conversation we had with the business men from there who were with us this week and who were, we found, truly representative of the steady and brave spirit and courage of Britons as they are traditionally known.

APPRENTICESHIP

THERE ARE TWO distinct angles to the apprenticeship problem—the attitude and interest in Canadian Newspapers connection with which it is obvious must be changed if a reservoir of trained men is to be maintained to keep up the supply of successors as the older tradesmen drop out. There must be such a change of attitude on the part of employers and seniors in the trades towards the admission of the young men for apprenticeship. There must be a willingness and patience in helping and training them. On the part of the young men, too, it would be well that they should realize for themselves more than they are doing the importance of training themselves for permanency of skilled occupation instead of succumbing to the lure of high wages for mere jobs of today which afford neither training or promise of future.

Unfortunately, there is too little interest or desire to co-operate on the part of employers in the training of young men for careers in the trades. On the other hand, there is too little heed to their future well-being and security or ambition to make themselves responsible and useful citizens on the part of youths themselves.

HARRY BIRCH

AS HE IS ABOUT to retire after a quarter of a A century's service as managing secretary of the Prince Rupert General Hospital and before that a valuable and responsible member of the City Hall staff, it might be appropriate for us to pay a word of tribute to Harry W. Birch. He is a citizen who in his capable, quiet, efficient way, has done a great deal for Prince Rupert. Of course, his outstanding success was in his capacity as director of the business and financial affairs of the hospital.

Executive boards have come and executive boards have gone but throughout the years Mr. Birch carried on as the mainspring and guiding spirit of hospital management and administration. For a long time Prince Rupert General Hospital has been acknowledged as one of the most successfully managed in the country from a financial standpoint and all will acknowledge that Mr. Birch's guiding hand was largely responsible.

The Prince Rupert hospital is distinctive in that it has been able to expand, improve and keep up to date which is more than can be said of the most of Prince Rupert's public services. Mr. Birch is, undoubtedly, to be thanked to large extent for the hospital's enviable and healthy position. Now that he is retiring after a job so well done, we would like to join with many others in extending to Mr. Birch best wishes for many pleasant and happy years still to come. He has worked hard and well and is entitled to the rest and relaxation which he is about to take.

Japanese Expeditions Being Sent from New Zealand To Relieve Britain

WELLINGTON, New Zealand-A second Japanese whaling expedition will be sent to the Antarctic. The meat, it is expected, will help relieve the British food situation. Whale steak in Britain is growing in popularity. It is a little harder than beef and tastes much like veal. One whale yields about three tons of edible meat. New Zealand may develop further the whaling industry.
