Developing Tourist Traffic

COSTERING of the tourist traffic throughout British Columbia, emphasizing as far as practicable the attractive features of each season, is understood to be given consideration at any time now. This province, unlike any other part of Canada, lends itself to such a project. There are plenty of persons, having means, leisure and inclination, can find plenty to interest them in winter, as well as in summer. Even within present limitations, the tourist trade is said to have a value exceeding that of the fisheries and lumbering. It is a business we can sell, and at the same time, keep possession of. British Columbia is one of the major playgrounds of North America. Let the world know about it.

AUTUMN IN THE NORTH

CUMMER officially ended this week, but that need not invite dismay. It can be quite pleasant in and around Prince Rupert for many and many a week, despite the formal announcement that the last day, if not the last rose of summer has departed.

On the whole it was an agreeable season, particularly so during the early weeks. It must be admitted that the city could have done with brighter skies earlier this month but there were many factors that compensated during this week.

Autumn in the north can show delightful days. As autumn comes on, indications multiply that the summer of 1948 will be among the busiest Prince Rupert has experienced. This is not saying the months just passed have not been exceptionally active. But it seems a certainty that next year will be even more so.

The splendid new Canadian National liner, which will bear the name Prince George, is to inaugurate service on this coast. That alone is a star attraction, even allowing for the immense popularity of the matchless inside passage.

The Canadian Legion will convene here in 1948, bringing numerous visitors, many of whom will be in Prince Rupert for the first time.

Construction of the celluloses plant, by spring, should be getting well into its stride, if not being beyond present expectations.

Truly, autumn in Prince Rupert, this year at least, is a season of hope.

Seattle - Prince Rupert Motor Trip easily conclude the first day's Described 'Voyage into the Unusual'

(By ELIZABETH K. LAMBERT)

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Lambert, of Fort Lewis, Washington, with her husband and children, made an automobile trip from Seattle to Prince Rupert this summer. The story of the journey was published in series in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, from which the following is reproduced. Widely circulated in the western states, it undoubtedly will be of great publicity value for the Skeena Highway and Prince Rupert. This is the first installment of the series.

Threshing sheaves is hard work, as Herman Schoenroth, of Davin, Sask., will tell you. Schoenroth is one of the few farmers in Saskatchewan who still harvests by older methods, will likely convert to modern machinery whenever it is available. Schoenroth contends that better wheat is made in the stook than in the swath, a theory held by many older farmers. Added quality, would not outweigh advantages of faster and cheaper operation offered by combine harvesting.

The modern method: Two big self-propelled combine harvesters on the farm of Edgar Peters Meyer, 20 miles south of Regina, Sask., make short work of a heavy crop of wheat, running over 30 bushels to the acre. Combines have hoppers in which almost a truck load of wheat can be carried, and one truck is able to service both machines on a short haul to storage bins.

Because no matter how long one lives there are those who are still older, and younger, in last night's program there was fittingly a place for all. Many of the mannequins modelled the charm of added years; and some of our very young citizens thrilled the audience with their tal-

Foremost among these was little Mardell Soiland, 9 years of age, who received tremendous ovation as she played on her own piano such unusual selections as "Prelude" by Bach, "Butterfly" by Greig. "Prelude in C Sharp" Minor" by Rachmaninoff, and as an encore the "Polish Dance."

Also there with her fairy-like grace was little Elsa Insulander! who charmed those present by her twinkling toes in two tapdance numbers. A solo by Joanne Langridge "When You st large or how small. Were Sweet Sixteen" was also of the evening's pleasure and she chose "April Showers" for her encore.

Tories Ready For General Election

LONDON, ()-The Labor Party recorded a new victosy today. but Lord Woolton, Conservative Chairman, said that his party was "prepared to fight a general election at any moment." The statement followed a prediction by a Conservative member of parliament that before many months had passed "Britain is going to demand the services of Winston Churchill."
