Clipping the Lords

THERE WILL BE approval in many quarters in Britain of the proposal of the government in the Speech from the Throne to restrict the powers of the House of Lords-something which the Lords will have to approve themselves before it can become law.

The British system of government has long been the shining example to the world, in the development of democracy and democratic methods. If it has any weakness, the clinging to the Lords, reflecting the British love for tradition, has been one. In Canada, the Senate, entirely appointive with no hereditary aspect, has been somewhat of a counterpart.

Rare, however, has it been in modern history for either Lords in Britain or Senate in Canada to flout the expressed will of the people through interfering with legislation from the elective section of Parliament. That is why both have lasted so long as a tempering influence.

It is doubtful, it would appear at this distance, if Lords would, when it came down to cases, interfere even with legislation for steel nationalization which, it is said, the Labor government fears. But in any case, the government desires to take no chances.

ADAMS GOES NORTH

A THE AGE of seventy-three, the able and re- his younger brother, destined to concert given by Count Scheda been escorted to a dance A spected Most Reverend Walter Robert Adams, Anglican Archbishop of Kootenay and Metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of British Columbia, relinquishes the comparative ease of his seat at Vernon in peaceful and sunny Okanagan to go north to the frontier town of Dawson and assume the rigors of rugged Yukon. In the way of ministerial progress, it would seem the Archbishop has chosen to move in reverse direction. In fact, it may be considered a unique move.

Yukon diocese, of course, is not so rigorous as it was in the days of Stringer and to lesser degree in the time of Sovereign and Geddes. The airplane and the wireless in latter years have removed many problems and much discomfort from ecclesiastical ministration and administration but still the north is considered usually as a young man's country.

Bishop Adams displays the courage and the initiative of youth in, at his advanced age, choosing to go north. He will, doubtless, give to Yukon the ability, dignity and spiritual leadership for which he has been distinguished in the progressive charges which have led to the highest office in the gift of his church in British Columbia-the archbishopship and metropolitanship which he, of course, retains.

BILL BAKER ON KISSING

ALEX HUNTER, editor of the Prince Rupert 1 Daily News, warned his readers in a brief but pointed editorial the other night that kissing should be done with care because colds are going around and kissing "is definitely one perfect way of picking up germs."

We are happy to know that the state of politics, employment, city finances, shipping, labor relations, pulp mills and fish catches is so perfect in Rupert that the Daily News editor can settle down and devote his attention to such problems as kissing. Perhaps this column would get into less trouble if it followed the same formula, and perhaps it would enjoy life just as much.

Alex, however, overlooks some of the finer points of the art of osculation. He implies that it is okay to go dating with one who has a cold, but safer not to kiss. If the date is in a closed theatre, we think there is probably as much danger of catching the cold as if the osculation were engaged in. If the principals, however, were walking in the open air, especially during a Skeena River downpour, probably the germs would be dissipated in the night air and then the kiss, if it occurred, would have to assume all the blame.

Alex started out to warn against spreading cold germs but he did Canadian womanhood a great wrong by saying that germs simply cling to a caress. He did not say that simply cold germs thus cling, as he certainly might have for the sake of civic reputation, etc. He closes by advising to "play coy and be careful." This is hardly in line with the warnings of many watchful mothers that kissing, cold or no cold, is dangerous.

This brings us to the old story of the girl who told her sweetheart that "honestly, in all my life, I've only been kissed by two parties." To which he replied-"Yes, I know: democrats and repub-

So we think Editor Alex had better climb down off the fence and tell us avid readers which side he is on, democrat or republican, and whether he is carrying on a subversive crusade against all kissing, or is merely giving free advertising to the medical profession, which seems not to realize that editors can't live on love alone, germ-free though it be.

-Bill Baker in Ketchikan Chronicle.

WILL BE DUKE OF EDINBURGH

Consensus Favors This as Title for Philip Mountbatten

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM LONDON (AP) - The consensus among well-posted persons close to the Royal household is that the King will confer upon his future son-in-law, Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, the title of Duke of Edinburgh and possibly create for him a British princedom, as Queen Victoria did for her consort. Albert.

Although the King may choose from among at least five titles it is generally thought Edinable. No small consideration is River. that Queen Elizabeth, belonging to a distinguished Scottish line. would be honored in the choice. Certainly the Scots themselves would take special pride in the designation of Princess Elizabeth's husband-to-be as officialone of them.

The title, vacated in 1900 by he death of Prince Alfred, son f Queen Victoria, is one of the foremost in the kingdom.

Among the other eligibles, the dukedom of Sussex has placed high in the speculation. This title was last held by the sixth son of George III, who died in 1843. Shortly after announcement of the royal engagement it was given top preference by most competent sources.

Mentioned frequently, too, is that there was a number of the Duke of Clarence. The last places where water leaked in. Duke of Clarence died in his youth, affianced to Princess Mary, who subsequently married ent weather, a special musical her engagement she has not become George V.

Considerations of sentiment and delicacy perhaps also would eliminate the dukedom of Connaught. The last who bore that title died during the war.

Although the King could grant Philip a brand new title, informed opinion largely agrees that ne prefers to revive one previously held in the Royal Family.

By letters patent Victoria in 1840 gave Albert precedence next to herself but it was not until 17 years later that she granted nim status of prince consort. In each case the honors were entirely personal and were not intended to apply to husbands of future queens.

Special artists, commissioned by the King's officers-at-arms are working on a new coat of arms for Princess Elizabeth and one for Mountbatten. No detail. have been disclosed, but it likely that the princess' arm will be quartered with those of the Mountbatten family.

Philip's coat of arms may incorporate devices of the Mountbattens and of Greece and Den mark, of which countries he was a prince before he assumed Brit ish citizenship last spring. J might even embrace the roya. arms of England, because of his impending marriage to the heirpresumptive to the throne.

Loved German POW Blames Her Parents.

HORSHAM, Sussex, Eng. (P)-A 15-year-old girl who told a juvenile court she tried to run away with a German prisonerof-war and later attempted suicide because her parents failed to show affection for her was placed on probation. The magistrate told her he was not blaming the German, who "tried to make you happy." A letter from the girl to her parents, read in court, said: "You think!" because he is German he is not human, but I love him even if I am only 15. If dad and you had shown me affection I might not have gone with him, but wanted to feel somebody thought something of me and really loved me.

MAKING IT RAIN IS NOT SO EASY

Something More Needed Than Dry Icing Any Old Cloud

(By SAM DAWSON)

NEW YORK-You can't make with dry ice.

the meteorologist-and nature has to do that trick.

A "supercooled" cloud is one in which the moisture content below freezing in temperature but still liquid. A meteorologist has ways of measuring the cloud's temperature, to see if it's supercooled, or a pilot can report icing on his plane as he flies through the cloud.

Same amateurs, lured by tha modern technique of rain-mak- ture beneath the cloud, or evap-3, have tackled clouds where orates without reaching the moisture content was above ground if the air beneath freering, and seeded them with cloud is too dry. dry ice. Nothing happened.
