Canada Charges Russia With War Mongering

Gale in Years Rocks Seventy Miles Per Hour; Fishing Scow Is Wrecked greatest gale in years, which brought wind 70 miles an hour, lashed the north coast leaving the city relatively undamaged but a cannery scow which was thrown on the north side of the harbor after it had been moored at the dry dock.

Island weather station after midnight.

Damage in the city was slight, although one violent gust tore loose the sign at the front of Rupert Men's and Boys' Store, Sixth Street, causing it to smash a plate glass window as it swung free.

FISHERMEN HAD ANXIOUS NIGHT

Fishermen, whose boats were moored at wharfs from Fairview Bay to Seal Cove, spent an anxious night, and many remained on their boats in case they should be endangered.

Only reported damage to small vessels occurred when two boats at the Cow Bay floats were rammed by a larger vessel which was manoeuvring for a better position during the storm. The "Grass," owned by John Saldan and the "Beryle," owned by John Taylor, were taken to McLean's shipyard this morning for slight repairs.

The Nelson Bros. scow "Bobolink," which was at the dry dock for repairs, broke free and drifted before the storm shortly after midnight. How much of her is salvagable was unknown today.

The "Bobolink" was formerly the Department of Public Works snag boat and was taken over by Nelson Bros. when the Esquimalt went into service.

NO MAJOR DAMAGE IS DONE TO LINES

City Telephone Superintendent A. B. Love reported that the storm had caused no major damage to telephone lines in the city as far as could be ascertained this morning.

Long distance telephone and telegraph lines withstood the gale and were in normal operation this morning.

A line from the telegraph office of the Department of Transport "F-M" broadcasting station on Mount Hays went out when a tree fell on it. A line gang went out to repair it this morning.

Capt. Harry McLean of the Union Steamships vessel Camosun, which arrived here shortly before 9 o'clock this morning, said that his ship had weathered the storm well. Capt. Eric Suffield, marine superintendent for the line said that the Camosun had proved herself a "comfortable sea boat" during the storm.

The Camosun docked 10 minutes ahead of her scheduled time.

The ocean-borne hurricane, which skirted Prince Rupert without hitting the city in its full force, was battering itself out today on the bleak, rugged ranges of the Alaskan Panhandle after sweeping across the Queen Charlottes which just missed the main centre of the storm.

There were no immediate reports of damage from the 70-mile-an-hour wind that shook fishing villages and logging camps of the Islands before it veered northward to the southern Alaska border.

While ships at sea reported having passed through the storm without difficulty, several were forced to reduce speed from around 18 knots to eight knots because of the rough seas.

Main southern British Columbia shipping routes were well out of the path of the storm but one fishboat, the Shimara, was reported breaking up under heavy swells, the crew being taken off by a cannery vessel.

ONLY ONE WAY OUT OF CRISIS

Britain's Sole Salvation Is Exporting More, Importing Less, Declares Dalton

LONDON (CP)—Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton told the House of Commons today that the current drain on Britain's gold and dollar resources averages $70,000,000 a week, a ruinous rate which cannot be continued.

"It can only be checked," Dalton declared, "by exporting more and importing less in respect to the dollar area. There is no other way around it all."

RUSSIANS ARE FORTIFYING ON SIBERIAN COAST

ANCHORAGE—Siberian Eskimos have told Rev. E. R. Parker, Presbyterian missionary living on American Island, that Soviet Russia is building "rock houses" in the cliffs lining the shores of Siberia opposite St. Lawrence Island. Some very heavy blasting has been done. Conscript labor is general. Few people are allowed to go near the scene of construction, the Eskimos say.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis

The active storm centre that brought gale winds to the greater part of the British Columbia coast since noon yesterday has now moved to the Gulf of Alaska where it is beginning to weaken. Winds of gale force were reported this morning in the vicinity of northern Vancouver Island although they dropped overnight along the northern coast. Strong winds are expected to spread down the coast and into the interior of the province today. Cloudy to overcast skies with rain showers are expected to be general over the weekend.

Forecast

Overcast today and Saturday with widely scattered rain showers today. Lighter winds. Little change in temperature.

Gerard Dubois, commercial attache of the French embassy at Ottawa, in the course of a tour of western Canada, arrived in the city by train last night from Edmonton. After a stay of a few minutes here, he proceeded to Vancouver on the steamer Prince Rupert.

CONFERRING ON ITALIAN COLONIES FUT-URE—Conferring in London on the future of the Italian colonies are, left to right: W. Gallman, representing U.S.A.; M. Massigil (France); Sir Noel Charles (Great Britain), and Mr. Zarubin (U.S.S.R.). It is expected that general discussion on the problem will be followed by the appointment of a commission to visit North Africa to ascertain the wishes of the people in the territories concerned. Mr. Molotov has stated his country has an interest in the trusteeship of Tripolitania and Eritrea.

28 Are Dead In London Suburban Railway Wreck

LONDON (CP)—At least twenty-eight persons were killed and estimates of injured range from fifty to one hundred following the collision early today in a dense fog of two London-bound electric trains, packed with workers, at South Croydon on the outskirts of London.

Scores of others were bruised and shaken when a train from Hayward's Heath, Sussex, crawling through the mist, was struck in the rear by a train from suburban Tattenham Corner. The last two coaches of the Hayward's Heath train were thrown from the rails and two leading coaches of the Tattenham train were telescoped.

Residents along the line heard the deafening crash of the collision and, after a moment's silence, cries of agony and fear. Soon the embankment was littered with bloodstained sheets which housewives provided along with medicine cabinets.

Transportation Costs Are High

OTTAWA—Transportation costs in the northwest pile up as development work widens. For example, expenses at Yellowknife gold camp and at Eldorado on Great Bear Lake are becoming enormous. Distances are so great. It costs more than $20 a ton to move freight by rail from Edmonton to Waterways and another $38 to move it by scow from Waterways to Yellowknife, 300 miles distant.

THE AVERAGE CITIZEN may well be disturbed and confused by the international happenings of the past few weeks. For all our generous concept of a world of nations united for peace, we seem to be facing a situation where nations once united in a supreme cause seem to be tempting one another to war.

This impression quite naturally arises from the stormy sessions of the United Nations Assembly, and particularly over the fiery outburst of Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky of Russia. To many people these words seemed a definite challenge.

What this assumption overlooks, however, is that the hot words are now being said in public, where once they were said behind closed doors. They are being said to millions of people of various characters and temperaments, instead of to one or two men versed in all the devious ways of diplomacy. Perhaps one of the results of this obviously carefully-planned attack was to have the very effect that it did have, to startle the world into questioning how much the rattled sabre actually portended, and so to make its nations more amenable to Russian demands. Perhaps it was also to build up in the Russian people the sense of contention abroad, the suggestion that they were surrounded by unfriendliness. That had been effective propaganda in the case of Germany, and might be equally effective in keeping the Russian people at a high fervor and working under that demanding influence.

The general feeling that Russia is deliberately using these open discussions not to inform her own people, but actually to misinform them, or at least to lead them to misinform themselves, has raised the question as to the actual value of these open debates. Years ago Arthur Balfour protested such a course just as a good many persons have been moved to protest today. "How," he demanded, "is the task of the peacemaker to be pursued if you are to shout your grievances from the housetops, whenever they occur? The only result is that you embitter public feeling, that the differences attain a magnitude they ought never to be allowed to approach, that newspapers agitate themselves, that the parliaments . . . have their passions set on fire, and great crises arise which may end . . . in international catastrophe."

That might have been the argument in the present case and, in a sense, it is all true. But what is also true is that the secret diplomacy of another day didn't spare the world from any calamity. Secret diplomacy didn't fail to provide certain reasons for World War I, and did not protect us against it. The League of Nations did not save us from World War II. At least the people of the world are now being faced with the definite issues. There will be no war with which the people as a whole, at least in democratic countries, are not in accord. For all the dangers that are obvious in this open discussion of facts, there is no tendency to turn away Woodrow Wilson's "open covenants." There is some suggestion that the "openly arrived at" phrase that completes it might be subordinated, to prevent the Assembly being used as a sounding-board for propaganda rather than discussion. But that would merely mean that the negotiations leading up to the policies affecting nations might be conducted in reasonable secrecy, but that the policies, once formulated, should be open to the widest possible discussion.

VANCOUVER CIVIC CENTRE

VANCOUVER is becoming civic centre conscious. Some time ago a bylaw was defeated, but by a narrow margin. Then, it was proposed that $2,500,000 be raised. Now, the ratepayers will try again. In December they will vote on a bylaw to authorize the purchase of land for a downtown centre, the amount of the bylaw to be governed by the area to be included in the centre.

There is said to be a possibility that the original size will be reduced but before definite action is taken and the ratepayers heard from there will be discussions with the town planning commission and any other bodies that might be interested. One would think that for a city the age and size of Vancouver, a suitable civic centre would have been established long before this.

HOW ABOUT DUCHESS?

THE DUKE OF WINDSOR is in London and some are wondering if the visit has anything to do with the possible presence of the former Mrs. Simpson at the wedding of Princess Elizabeth next month.

The marriage will be an occasion of national rejoicing and Britain could do with something like that right now after about eight years of war, austerity, and all the rest of it.

Royalty has not yet recognized the Duchess but this might be a good time to heal whatever difficulty there is and make a new start toward that elusive thing called happiness.

The wife of the former King has brains, personality and can move in any society and knows her way around.

FARMERS CLAIM MULES DO "MORE WORK ON LESS FEED" THAN HORSES — Herman Pachal, farmer at Ebenezer, in northeast Saskatchewan, told a photographer the other day he "wouldn't care to farm if he had to drive horses." Instead he prefers mules, and finds his team, Jack and Jenny, above, perfectly capable of hauling a big load of oats six miles to the grain elevator. Pachal, who owns what are probably the last mules in the province, claims they are gentle and willing when properly trained, and will do "a lot more work on a lot less feed" than horses. He does all the work on a quarter section of land with four mules, wonders where he can replace them when they grow too old for work.

Future Of Economics In Canada

By FORBES RHODE

Canadian Press Business Editor

Of all countries, it has been said, Canada most needs a free-trading world to maintain her prosperity.

This is because she produces in abundance things she consumes only in part herself and which she must sell to others, particularly the products of her farms, forests, mines and fisheries. She, in turn, needs things which she can't produce herself, or produces in an expensive way.

The results of present international talks are therefore important to her.

Will the Marshall plan allow Europe to use United States dollars to buy from Canada? Will Britain get added United States dollars with which to do the same? Will the Geneva talks of 17 trading countries, including Canada, make substantial progress in making trading easier?

It is important to Canada that Europe and Britain get United States dollars with which to pay her, because Canada in effect sells overseas and buys from the United States. This is her traditional trading policy which has worked out well in the past, though it would now seem in line for some modification.

The Geneva conferences have run into many difficulties but recent word has been more cheerful. Many see these talks and those to follow in Havana, Cuba, in November, as the turning point where the world will get set on a course of freer trade or go into an era of restrictions which will slow trade down.

The background is that the world's producing plant, except for the Americas, has been destroyed or damaged by war. Virtually only the Americas, notably the United States and Canada, are producing enough to support themselves and they have a surplus. The world needs this surplus but for the moment at least can't pay for it, and it is a matter of working out how the surplus countries can supply the rest of the world without ruining themselves.

The tradition of trading nations has been to make it possible for their markets to buy, on the principle that they will get it back in the long run in general prosperity. The United States and Canada are trying to do this, though with strain to their resources.

Rarely has a perilous situation been so discussed, examined, assessed and appreciated, and this is one of the most hopeful factors.

It is probable, for instance, the Geneva trade conferences will long ago have broken up in failure, if it were not for the sheer pressure of necessity wherein countries realize they must make compromises and even sacrifices to gain larger ends.

Solutions are not being sought in only one basket. While international meetings go on, nations are working out here and there other deals to keep the wheels turning. Britain, for instance, having had a hard-pressed for dollars and gold, is arranging a loan of $320,000,000 in gold from South Africa under conditions which are presumably mutually agreeable.

Certain trading men refuse to believe that trading must stop because there is temporary inability to pay, and are working in a private enterprise way to see that it goes on.

Canadians are not likely to hear of any sudden solution of their own or the world's economic problems. The solution will consist of a lot of things.

Canada is still banking on a freer trading world, and though it seems likely she will have to apply some temporary restrictions, such as on buying from the United States, she will do it only under necessity, and against the tendencies of Canadians who like to be able to buy what they wish when they have money in their pockets.

Neither is Canada looking only to international agreements she is laying plans for development of her own resources and economy from within.

Considerable hope is seen behind present anxiety that once the immediate dam against world inter-change of goods is broken, there can be, barring war, a period of almost unprecedented prosperity. It is said with fingers crossed, but it is a possibility.

BEER IN RUINS OF HOTEL FIRE

It was thought, when an explosion was heard during the height of the Central Hotel fire, that it had come as a result of the heat on beer in storage, which possibly was correct. Since then, however, some beer has been found in the ruins but the quality does not seem to have as yet been definitely established.

Roman Catholicism Growing in Wales

SWANSEA, Wales (UPI) — The last century has seen a "vast growth" of Roman Catholicism throughout Wales, Bernard Cardinal Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster, told a Catholic meeting here. In 1847 there were only 24 missionary priests and 18 churches or chapels where the faith was practised in the whole Welsh vicariate. Since, however, "there has been a vast increase in the number of churches, convents, educational establishments and charitable institutes throughout the land. . . . Progress has been made on all sides."

BRIDGE IS SAGGING

CONWAY, Wales (UPI) — The Conway suspension bridge, built 121 years ago is beginning to sag. A one-inch difference has already been reported.

to be the chief point which Canadian representatives are making in their discussions with Americans in the present trade negotiations at Geneva.

Reminiscences By W.J. and Reflections

During Prince Rupert's exuberant youth there were often times when windy weather appeared to be a purly local or family affair. Each stiff blow or gale was entitled to respect and usually received it.

Fifty miles out of town, or less, the day might be as mild as milk—no storms whatever. The city accepted the situation with philosophy. With far fewer automobiles, soaking wet trousers and skirts resulted. Playful little gusts, with an eye for mischief, would blow the coat back as far as your waist, and skirts would go sailing around one's head. Ladies, struggling to office or shop, have been known to swear in shrill voice.

"Wonder," he said in the letter, "how that part of Prince Rupert looks today?"

The card can be made out with fair distinctness. The clearest signboard is that of the Kalem Hardware. Another is the Pioneer Steam Laundry. And further along there must have been McCutcheon's, the Knox Hotel, the fire hall, the Empire office and, finally, Centre Street.

Others included Charley Halsey, M. M. Stephens, Bill Bacon, the Shrubsalls, Jack Kirkpatrick, Don Brown, Christensen and Brandt, Frank Bowness, Scotty Dennis, Sid Macdonald and many another early bird.

The picture was taken by J. Denny Allen.

AIR PASSENGERS

To Vancouver—W. G. Townley. From Vancouver—W. G. Townley.

W. G. Townley, superintendent, Canadian Pacific Air Lines, arrived in the city by air Thursday afternoon from Vancouver on company business, leaving again this afternoon to return south.

A. O'Neill, of the B.C. Bridge and Dredging Co. which is doing construction work at Watson Island for the Columbia Cellulose Co., arrived in the city on Camosun this morning.

To hear of someone's roof ripped off was nothing to speak of with surprise. Lumber was plentiful and not so expensive. But usually a wandering roof managed to stay in one piece.

But it was inconvenient for the family. No one wanted fresh air that bad.

The waterfront, when the harbor showed whitecaps, was no place for a loosely tied launch or boat. Even the float itself would be tested. Nearly every major gale meant some craft would go adrift and that could mean hours of search and effort.

W. J. Raymond received yesterday a letter from an old friend he had last seen in Saskatoon and who since leaving Saskatchewan had returned to his former home in the Maritimes. He enclosed a postal card which featured the art included that of Vienne, whose col-

wored full gathered

skirts. Some fell full to the hemline which was sometimes diamond edged or caught up underneath and left unpressed. Other skirts narrowed towards the hemline forming a hobble.

Evening dresses for the over-21s were sleek-fitting and sophisticated, most of them featuring a tightly draped bodice leaving one shoulder bare.

One black velvet costume was edged with white ermine around neck and cuffs and had a white ermine vest peeping under the jacket, which fastened at the waist. A bottle-green, two-piece ensemble had a double-breasted three-quarter length coat with a band of Persian lamb fur around the hips, tying in a bow at the front. It also had a small fur collar.

skirts. Some fell full to the hemline which was sometimes diamond edged or caught up underneath and left unpressed. Other skirts narrowed towards the hemline forming a hobble.

Evening dresses for the over-21s were sleek-fitting and sophisticated, most of them featuring a tightly draped bodice leaving one shoulder bare.

One black velvet costume was edged with white ermine around neck and cuffs and had a white ermine vest peeping under the jacket, which fastened at the waist. A bottle-green, two-piece ensemble had a double-breasted three-quarter length coat with a band of Persian lamb fur around the hips, tying in a bow at the front. It also had a small fur collar.

A black georgette cocktail frock was designed with a full skirt longer at the back than the front, with flowers embroidered in sequins in a diagonal line down bodice and skirt.

COMPANIONS FOR NURSES

Needed by Adventure Loving Young Women in North

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—For the adventure-loving young woman there are jobs open as nurses' companions in Canada's north. The Mines and Resources department announced recently.

Nurses' companions are needed for Fort Chimo and Port Harrison in the Ungava region of northern Quebec and Lake Harbour in southern Baffin Island, where centres provide health and education facilities for the Eskimos.

Health centres such as these are considered the most practical means of solving the Eskimo health problem, said the department official. At the same time opportunities are provided for extending a measure of education to native children who may be at the station or living in the vicinity.

While no specialized training is required, the nurses' companions must have some teaching ability in order to conduct classes for the Eskimo children in such basic subjects as reading and writing, arithmetic and handicraft work. They must also be able to instruct them in hygiene and general health matters.

WEDDING INFLUENCE

London's Fall Hats Feature Black, White and Wine

By DENISE DALTRY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON—Fancy hats were on display at the fall show of Erik Paris Ltd., with three colors predominating — black, winter white and wedding wine, the last intended as a compliment for the forthcoming royal wedding.

His models were designed to sit straight on the head, and his trimmings were a variety of high-standing feathers, a profusion of winter flowers or a narrow sequin band around the base of the crown.

Black Poodle was his name for a new fur fabric used for some of his models. It has a bushy appearance like the fur of a French poodle.

For wearing with tailor-made he showed many hats designed on the style of beef-eater models. A small crown and small straight brim curving slightly upwards in front. The crowns were almost as wide as the brims.

For cocktail and dressy hats he used the pill-box style with sudden height introduced by feathers, plumes or large bows. For evening wear with long skirts, large stiff brims giving side width were shown. Most of the brims were raised slightly off the face.

Sequined veils for keeping the hair tidy on evening outings were also exhibited.

His berets were designed with side width to be worn at the back of the head, and the brim of one of his halo hats swept gently around to a high point at the centre of the forehead.

Another headwear show was put on by Aschers, a well-known firm of textile designers, with square scarves designed by such artists as Henri Matisse, Henry Moore, Andre Derain, Graham Sutherland and Feliks Topolski. Ascher squares, which can also be used for neckwear, sell from 17s 6d. ($3.50) for a design by an unknown artist to £7 9s ($30) for a square by Matisse.

They were exhibited in frames, like pictures, opening up a new idea for interior decorating.

Many have been produced in limited editions of from 250 to 600, with each numbered and the screen destroyed after printing. Aschers say hopefully some may become rare museum pieces.

Some of the designs are surrealistic. Others feature ballet dancers and even still life.

HAPPILY OBLIVIOUS

HASTINGS, N.Z., Oct. 20.—Rationing, until recently, didn't mean a thing to an old farmhand of a remote sheep station near here. On a rare visit to town he was nonplussed when asked for coupons for clothing he had bought, and explained that the farm produced all the food he needed and he hadn't bought any clothes since 1939.

Students Well Pleased With Civic Centre As Venue for Their Sports

Several of the students have been interviewed concerning their reaction to the Civic Centre as a physical training centre. Here are some of their opinions:

Jack Wynn—Thinks taking Physical Education at the Civic Centre is a good idea because the Centre has better facilities for the sports which he likes than has the school.

Jackie Budinich—Like many other basketball players, prefers the gym at the Civic Centre to the one at the school because the floor is much better and there are lockers for gym equipment.

Bob McChesney—Feels that Physical Education at the Civic Centre is the best thing that ever happened to the Bo-Bo-Me-Hi students because there have been no proper facilities for gym work at the school.

Louise Amadio—Does not participate in many sports, but likes going to the Civic Centre because it's cleaner than the school gym.

Anc Lien—Wouldn't tell us much but we know that he must like it because he spends most of his time there.

Jean Faught—One of her reasons for liking the Civic Centre is that it is a change from the schoolroom monotony. She also likes the privilege of using the showers after each gym class.

White Elephant Sale Success

Under the joint management of the Parent-Teachers' Association and the Students' Council, a very successful white-elephant sale was held in the auditorium at Booth School on Thursday afternoon. This sale was organized to help increase the funds in the P.T.A. and Student Council treasuries.

On sale was a large selection of articles—books, glassware, games, sports equipment, cakes, clothing, pictures and records—which had been contributed by the parents and the student body.

Refreshments were served during the afternoon by the senior girls under the supervision of Miss M. Anstey and Miss M. Townsend. Following the tea Mrs. H. Black's fortune-telling booth proved extremely popular.

The Students' Council committee was composed of Art Olsen, Bob McChesney, and Tom Holt. The staff advisors were R. Cleland, P. Stroochi and J. Church.

The P.T.A. committee consisted of Mrs. G. Hill, Mrs. N. Youngs, Mrs. E. Becker, Mrs. H. Black, Mrs. E. Hyndman and Mrs. N. Moses assisted by Mrs. Glass and Mrs. Langridge.

ANITA SLATER—Born in Edmonton, attended Trapp Tech in New Westminster before coming to Prince Rupert. She says she hasn't been here long enough yet to form an opinion of the school.

PAUL SHANNON—Attended Vancouver College last year, is another addition to 11B. He was born in Washington and has lived in Prince Rupert before.

MARJORIE BRAIN—Born in Prince Rupert, later moved to Vanderhoof, and now is back with us again. So far she likes Bo-Me-Hi although this is her first year here. She registers with 11B.

Veteran Prospector Out for First Time

SEATTLE—Joe Quillan, 68, is here en route to New York to see his sister. This is his first time "outside" of Alaska and Yukon in 46 years. He's a prospector and miner.

"I suppose I've found as much gold as the next man," he told an interviewer, "but I never struck it rich. I've worked in bonanza fields that are forgotten now, but I was always across the ridge when the big payoff came."

New Phones in Vanderhoof Area

Extra telephone facilities will shortly be installed in the Vanderhoof area. Announcement has been made by R. G. Bishop, division superintendent that a crew will soon be on the ground. Establishment of a safety factor will be necessary to take care of accommodation when it is expected there will be a large scale rehabilitation. The general re-arrival operation at Burns Lake shut down earlier than scheduled, because of the high board charged the crew, Mr. Bishop indicated.

Observe Saint's Day; Pets Attend Church

HEREFORD, England (CP) — Children from all over the city gathered in Holy Trinity Church here—and brought their pets—for a service celebrating the feast of St. Francis, patron saint of animals. Five children came to the church with ponies. Dogs, cats, rabbits and caged birds were there by the score. One lone guinea pig attended. The service opened outside the church where Rev. H. W. Hayward read a prayer while holding a Pekinese in his arms. As the procession was sung, the children led their pets into church.
