ATEST ESTIMATES place Prince Rupert's Le population at well over nine thousand persons as ground breaking work for the $15,000,000 celanese pulp mill on Watson Island gets under way. The housing situation, which has been easier for a time, has started tightening up again with notable shrinkage in the number of Wartime Housing residences available for occupancy.

Fall spending in the city hit a high mark during the Civic Centre Carnival occasion last week, reflecting profits of the now concluding halibut fishing season for the fishermen, if not the operators, and the generally high earnings of expanding industries and services.

With continuing employment for the late fall and winter assured, Prince Rupert, while anxious, of course, like the rest of the world, over the genral economic outlook, can look forward to continuing employment for late fall and winter and an active several months ahead until the advent of 1948 which gives every promise of being a banner year as we really get under way.

HIGHWAYS, HERE AND THERE

THERE ARE TWO WAYS of looking at highways. The United States government takes one view, the Canadian government the other, says the Vancouver Province.

The United States government looks upon highways as public utilities highly desirable in their own right. It realizes, of course, that construction of these utilities can be used to create employment and keep the nation from falling into a depression. But in Washington's view the highways come first and employment second. You cannot plan a highway system properly, the American engineers say, if you regard it as primarily a relief project.

The Dominion government, on the other hand, looks upon work on highways as a hedge against depression and a primer of economic pumps. In Ottawa's view, the making of work is the more important consideration. The highways themselves come. second.

These opposing views, of course, have a direct and powerful influence on the policies of the two governments mentioned. The United States government is busily engaged upon a master plan of highways for the nation. In co-operation with the states and cities it is planning and building a vast system of super-highways to meet the transportation needs of the day. Canada, on the other hand, is waiting for a depression. Then, it is intimated, she will do some highway building on a national

The United States plan envisions the construction of high-speed roads. The Canadian plan-there isn't any.

There is another difference between the two countries. In the United States, it appears to be the federal government that is planning and pushing highway construction. It is making half a billion dollars a year for each of the first three post-war years available to the states that will co-operate. But some of the states and cities are hanging back because of the expense. In Canada, the states and cities want the highways, but feel themselves handicapped by the lack of federal assistance.

BOOSTER ISSUE

T WAS LIKE a breeze from the past to receive the other day, a copy of the industrial development number of the Daily News from Prince Rupert. The war and continuing shortages of newsprint have conspired to restrain the enthusiasm of editors for their favorite communities, so that we have not had many of these special numbers for several years. It is characteristic of the booster issue to find a community on the pioneer fringe, as Prince Rupert is, to be among the first to get back into the business of booming the home town. As they reflect the optimism of Canadians eager to conquer new frontiers, we hope that we shall see more of these development numbers from other communi-

AFTER PORT DAY

Editor, Daily News: Port Day is past and gone and, perhaps, it would be better to say nothing and let it be forgotten too. However, your statement about it in Waterfront Whiffs cannot pass unchallenged. I quote: "Port Day was given an enthusiastic response by munity which is a healthy sign for Prince Rupert."

3. Large numbers exhibited on the judges' scow designating each event so the boats will know what's going on.

4. Intensive canvassing of boat owners in the city to get them signed up for events in advance.

5. Better placing of posters along the waterfront. This year there was no announcement of any kind at the Yacht Club, and no programs were supplied to boat owners in advance.

6. Be more realistic about the types of races. Why list a sail boat race when there is only one sail boat on the waterfront?or perhaps two? Why not have a race for inboards up to 14 or 16 feet, of which there are

"It's funny," said the Old Timer, as he paused in his morning walk, how a label or a slogan can make people swallow things without thinking, when if they stopped to think, their own common sense would tell them it was phony.

"Take a slogan like planned economy. It sounds good, and a lot of people just nod their heads and think it must be a good idea. But if they just did a little real thinking and remembering, thev'd no more want planned economic than they'd want a dose of arsenic.

"Planned economy can work, all right, but there to is just one way it can work. Each individual has to give up his political and economic freedom and do just as he is told, the job he can work at. the wages he can get, what he must produce, what his standard of living must be, and so forth. That's the way it works in Russia and the only way it can work.

"Then let them think, too, about one question-who's going to do the planning? Every time they hear one of the orators spouting about planned economy, let them ask themselves if he is to be one of the planners to whom all authority is going. You'd get a pretty quick

"But as a slogan it sounds good, and it fools a lot of people."

Arthur Little, who used to sell peanuts and notions in eighborhood of where the railway station stands, would have revelled in today. What is going on now consists of the very events he anticipated but did not see. Like scores of other opimistic souls who surmounted numerous disadvantages and disappointments, he came here just about 25 years too soon. Perhaps ne suspected it, but never let on

After all, it is only 37 years since the incorporation of Prince Rupert. And, as time goes on, what's 37 years amount to in the life of a city? To sum it all up—when gains and losses are balanced - achievement by no means has been lacking in Prince Rupert. Particularly is this notable when it is recalled that. ince 1910, life has been largely of the destruction and economic and financial chaos that such Yet. Prince Rupert's stormy childhood faced all this, with plenty of gratuitous discouragement thrown in. -

Between the guns of a modern cruiser, the blasting at Port Edrard where contractors have a large rock removal job ahead, the shots fired at Port Day harpor races and revolver practice by small boys on the public streets, dwelling in Prince Rupert is becoming reminiscent of the days when a hill would be picked up and split into 115.672 separate pieces of rock, to fly half war across the harbor.

It may have been that three women make a crowd even on the banks of the Re Deer River; or it could have been that the front sea of the democrat comfortably seated but two. There were no family limi number crowded in beside our own six plus milk-cans, candy was no thought of inconvenience or crowding-not until 20 years later and then it was too late to

The dampness of the river met the party as it neared the long sloping ravine where it ran. Not many rods further the air became filled with the pungent scent of ripe cranberries. The boys in particular grinned impish anticipation of squirting the juice where it would do most damage. Everyone was expected to pick, and would, but there was ample time and opportunity for many other things as well. Both should be accomplished.

The home trip was different. There was less room because each container was brimming A bit of salt in the water, and and standing separate. Therefore there was except dyed blue, and in the cenmuch less hilarity and less talkin the back. Up front conversation was speeded up if anything, low in tone, and punctuated with sympathetic cluckings.

It was this part that left the hangover-that pensive, satisfied expression on my mother's face that had nothing to do with rows of newly filled jars. tI was mystifying until one of these "days after" when she remarked: "Hearing someone else's troubles make vour own so light."

Picking blueberries was different. Especially where confidences are concerned. In the wildest imagination it would not be possible for anyone to get comfortable enough to be that human

The last ones I picked were just off Wantage Road. Some people maintain that they aren't properly blueberries but blue huckleberries, tOhers swear they are none other than deluxe blueberries. And I agree. With one feot deep in muskeg, the other two-and-a-half feet away desperately clinching a log, one hand flailing flies and the other picking, I still agreed and felt comfortable by comparison with other blue-berry associations. The honors were definitely here and it hadn't all to do with flavor. Both kinds, the Alberta berry and these, are heavenly, just one of those things put here for "God's chillun." My only complaint lies in the places they

"People get so confidential in grow. Never, no never, are they grain of intestinal fortitude to glimpse, let alone pick. And then

In Alberta they grow where it is dry and hot and in a district inhabited by bears. Not the usual kind, but great big fellows who nclude blueberries on their menu, preferably out of a newly illed pail that somebody hid in tations, however. Any given a shady little nook to pick up later. tI was put there after hours of toil. Since the berries pails and one small tub. There hug the ground, pickers do to. So you limber up with a few symnastics, arm yourself with what is known as a "picker," don a very broad-brimmed hat, and go to work.

After the firs four hours it sn't so bad. There is a numbing influence at work. Besides, you have gleaned a few berries Quite a few, in fact, counting all the leaves the picker brings with those delicate clusters of blue. But you don't think of the leaves. Not yet. You wait until you are at home. Then you sit in the coolest spot in the house, dream of blueberry pie and preserves, blow and pick small leaves-and forget the immediate and miserable past.

"Worming" is so much simpler. a few never make an appearance tre of a berry. Who could ever
