Operator Savings Huge Even at $10 Reduction

VANCOUVER—Deadline for shipment of about $15,000,000 worth of British Columbia lumber to the United Kingdom has been extended from September 15 to October 31.

This was announced today by Ralph Shaw, vice-president of MacMillan & Bloedel, multi-million-dollar lumber firm.

He said the deadline was extended by the British Timber Control Board on condition that operators accept a loss of $10 a thousand feet on lumber not yet shipped.

Another condition is that contracts be cancelled for railway lumber materials, such as ties, apparently required by the British prior to the original deadline.

Operators, however, received the news with glee. A spokesman said the operators will certainly accept the British conditions and consider they are getting off lightly with only a $10 reduction from the $35 price paid by the United Kingdom.

HUGE SAVING
The spokesman said the extension means operators will save between $4,500,000 and $7,000,000. This represents from 45,000,000 to 75,000,000 feet of lumber which was not shipped before the deadline because of B.C.'s prolonged woodworkers' strike.

The 45-day-old strike was settled on July 29. Notice of the extension comes only eight days after two B.C. lumber executives left Vancouver by air for London in an effort to forestall cancellation of the lumber orders.

At that time, exporters said the loggers' strike had caused a shortage of shipping and that it was impossible to complete shipment of orders to Britain by September 15.

Some 3,000 carpenters in Vancouver and on Vancouver Island started to strike June 6. Contractors retaliated with a lock-out, making another 5,000 workers in allied trades idle.

Let's Take a Look at BCHIS

SINCE Premier Bennett has put hospital insurance at the top of his government agenda, we believe that he should make public at an early date the Stevenson and Kellogg report on the subject.

For too long now hospital insurance has been kicked around as a political football and there is disconcerting evidence that the new government contemplates heaving it clear out of the park.

If hospital insurance barely survived on compulsory premiums, there is not a breath of hope for it on voluntary payments. However, in the Stevenson and Kellogg report, which is understood to have cost the province close to $100,000, there is very possibly a solution.

If, as announced, the enquiry discovered a way to save more than $1,000,000 yearly in administrative salaries alone, there is every likelihood that it offers other recommendations which would put the program on an efficient working basis.

We have gone too far with hospital insurance, and drawn too much benefit from it, to abandon it because of some minor unpopular features. Moreover, as we have already paid well for the list of recommendations now in Victoria, we should have a look at it before it is discarded in the interests of a vague pre-election promise.

UNDER OUR ROOF

By John Sturdy

Tapeworm of the Brain

Yesterday afternoon our small son turned up in the shed with a sour expression on his face. At first I thought he was sore because I was reading one of his comic books, a weird tale about a well-built lady called "Nyoka, the Jungle Girl," but when I gave him the book he still looked at me distrustfully.

"What's our name stand for, Daddy?" he suddenly demanded. "Why," I said, "the name Sturdy means strong, steadfast. It is a renowned old English name. One of our ancestors..."

"That's what I thought you said," interrupted the small son. "You've been fooling me all this time, with all that steadfast and strong business. Why didn't you tell me the truth, Daddy?"

"What are you driving at?" I demanded. "I found out what Sturdy really means," he piped up. "It's a disease caused by a larval tapeworm of the brain."

I stared at the child in absolute horror. For a moment I could not believe that those words had issued from his small mouth. A larval tapeworm of the brain! And my own flesh and blood saying it to me!

"How dare you speak like that!" I thundered. "Oh, it's all very well for you to splutter, Daddy," said the small son. "But I looked it up in the dictionary. Sturdy is from the Old French sturdus, which means Gid, or Sturdy, a disease caused by a larval tapeworm of the brain."

"Huh?" "You should have told me, Daddy," he added, and walked out of the shed.

LOOKS IT UP Of course I didn't believe him. I tried to lose myself with Nyoka the Jungle Girl, but it wasn't any good. The more I thought of the child's words, the more haunted I became.

Eventually I couldn't stand it any longer. I sneaked over to our house, where our guests, Hamish and Little Augie and Col. C. Skeffington-Smuts (Ret.), and his wife Anastasia are living, and I crept into the living-room and found the dictionary.

To my horror there it was: STURDY (OF) VET. A disease caused by a larval tapeworm of the brain. (See GID.)

Well, I didn't have time to see GID. Just at that moment Col. Skeffington-Smuts entered the room and said, "Oh," when he saw me. "Anything I can do for you, my man?"

"Colonel," I said, "I'm the fellow who owns the house, remember? Sturdy is the name." "Oh, quite!" said the Colonel. Then suddenly he looked very disturbed. "Oh, I say -- hey, chaps! Chaps, come here!"

The chaps turned out to be Hamish and Little Augie who entered on the run. "Here's the fella," said the Colonel, and I found Hamish and Little Augie staring at me. I thought there was a hint of tears in Hamish's eyes.

"Sit down," he said softly.

"Don't exert yourself. I'm sure everything will turn out for the best." "You know," said Little Augie, "to look at him you'd hardly believe it."

The Colonel interrupted. "Get on the telephone," he ordered Hamish. "We can't waste any time. Minutes may be precious."

BE COMFORTABLE So Hamish went away to telephone and the Colonel and Little Augie insisted I take a comfortable chair in the living-room, and it's been so long since I've sat in my own living-room that I made no protests.

And then Hamish came back and said somebody was coming right over, and we all sat around to wait.

I thought this might be a good time to talk about the house, so I said: "By the way, I have something on my mind..."

The three guests looked at one another and nodded. "Yes," said Hamish sympathetically, "we understand."

A fifth person now entered the room. It was Dr. Jones from the village and he said: "Got here as soon as I could." He looked at me. "What seems to be the trouble?"

"There's nothing the matter with me," I said, alarmed. "He naturally won't admit it," said the Colonel to Dr. Jones. "But the fact is we learned the truth from his young son. He's suffering from the Gid—the Sturdy—tapeworm of the brain."

"Then you don't need me," said Dr. Jones. "You need a veterinary. Sturdy is a disease usually found in sheep."

I exploded then. "Well," I shouted, "if that's what I have, it's because I've been living in the shed with Little Augie's goat."

I will state one further thing. I have burned the dictionary. And if I ever catch our small son reading anything but Nyoka the Jungle Girl, or Captain Marvel or Hopalong Cassidy, he'll soon know the real old-fashioned purpose of a woodshed.

As I See It

For Instance Drugs

GULL LAKE, Alberta.— Here at the Alberta School of Religion you often hear the wisest ideas given out by some country minister, maybe in a conversation around a tree, or on the sands beside the lake.

For instance, this one I heard this morning about drugs. A bunch of us had been talking about education, and how every generation of youngsters has to learn some of its own lessons for itself.

But one quiet voice warned of carrying this idea too far. "You can't just sit back and say, O leave the kids alone and they will try out things for themselves and sooner or later find what is good and what is bad. Suppose they try out drugs. Soon most of them are ruined, almost beyond all hope."

He developed the idea a bit, along the lines that you could not leave bottles of poison around and expect an infant to try out one after another and see which was good and which was bad for him.

I MYSELF know of people who were caught by the drug habit, but who were cured, with the help of old-fashioned religious conversion. But I also know of several other fine young lives which were ruined so utterly by drugs that most of us would say those poor souls were damned beyond all hope of redemption, here or anywhere.

But if there is one menace on this earth, more ruinous than any other I have come across it is the traffic in narcotics.

JUST a year ago, when I was here on the prairies before, they were holding a conference in Saskatoon on ways and means of dealing with the drug menace. It is almost ludicrous to look back on that conference now, for over and over again speakers said that there was no widespread addiction to drugs among teen-agers in Canada, as everybody knew there was in the U.S.A.

Now we have been rudely shocked out of our complacency and learned that dozens of youngsters in Vancouver alone have already been contaminated at ages as young as fifteen or sixteen.

SURELY there is a crying need for education on this matter not only through the churches, schools, YMCA, etc., but in every single family in the land.

Any father or mother who lets a son or daughter grow up to fourteen years of age without telling him or her the terrible truth about drugs has not done a good job. The same goes, even more, for older sisters and brothers, for the youngsters often listen to them more than to parents.

Every youngster should know that the "hit" novices get out of drugs soon becomes such a craving that almost all the victims lose all moral sense and will do literally anything—no matter how criminal—to get more drugs.

I THINK a person who commits murder is a minor lawbreaker compared with the vile creature who, for profit, deliberately ruins a youngster's life by enticing him or her to become a drug addict. Once caught, not one victim out of a thousand ever escapes.

So long as we retain the death penalty for any crime, including that of murder, I would make it cover the higher-up organizers of the drug traffic—for these are human monsters.

As for the victims, the addicts, they are sick people and should be treated as such. The most sensible way to treat them is in institutions specially set up. It is better to give the victims what they must get—to prevent them from stealing, murdering, or becoming prostitutes to get the money to buy what is literally worth more to them than life itself.

But every Canadian youngster should be taught that the drug habit is the quickest, shortest, surest road to hell-on-earth.

US Builds 'Rival' Atom Submarine Power Plants

Theoretically, one could be smaller than its competitor while producing equal energy. It also could be more hazardous to operate, stopping just short of being a potential atomic bomb.

Arctic Pantries Of Army Signals Filled For Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The Army reports that its string of signal stations in the Arctic now has chicken dinners stored away and a lot more food besides.

This was one way of reporting that the job of provisioning the 15 stations of the Northwest Territories and Yukon radio system with rations to last until June, 1953, has been completed.

The job was handled by the western army command and transport office and the service corps supply depot in Edmonton.

Cooks at stations in Aklayik, Fort Smith, Good Hope, Hay River, Norman, Norman Wells, Providence, Radium, Reliance, Simpson, Wrigley and Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories, McMurray and Chipewyan in northern Alberta, must order their groceries early in the year to get them before river navigation closes in the fall.

During May and June, 80 tons of food and supplies valued at $28,000 were sent into the northern detachments to feed 164 men.

STARTED BY TRUCK From Edmonton, giant semi-trailer trucks, some refrigerated to carry perishables, sped north on the MacKenzie highway to Hay River on Great Slave Lake.

Here the stores trans-shipped to river boats for the long haul up the MacKenzie River over the Arctic Circle to Aklayik.

More supplies were moved by rail to waterways on the Clearwater where they were packed again on to river boats for the trip down the Athabaska to Lake Athabaska and along the Slave River to Great Slave Lake.

Supplies must be specially packed at the Edmonton supply depot. In charge of the depot is 2nd Lieut. H. A. Anderson of Saskatoon, who with Sgt. B. G. MacKay of Ottawa, supervises packing and shipping.

"We pack most stores in wire-strapped trade cartons, stuffed with shredded paper and corrugated cardboard," explained Lieut. Anderson. "Glass jars are our chief headache. They have to be individually wrapped and padded. Anything that can be damaged by water, dry cereals, peas, beans, flour, tea and sugar has to be waterproofed by dipping their cartons in wax."

The chief shoppers are Lt.-Col. G. F. Stevenson of Hamilton, Ont. On his staff are Maj. C. B. M. Foster of New Glasgow, N.S., and Staff Sgt. H. T. Saunders of Calgary.

Children, so it is said, are losing faith in fairy tales. Perhaps it is because of fewer honest-to-God children.

ASK THEM! The CCF convention in Toronto urged war on poverty but declined to take from the resolution any move meaning restoration of military preparedness. Necessary though preparedness might be sometimes, it could not take the place of positive action to end poverty and exploitation. The debate was bitter. Wonder how they feel about accepting fifty years ago wage scale, with 1900 cost of living basis.

War's shadow again dims the Balkans. Broadcasts tell alarmist stories of trouble involving Greece and Bulgaria that might lead to Number Three. Long previous to forty years ago, and after, from the Balkans came endless tales no one in Canada heeded. Each was tiresome, and what was told never got anywhere. Mr. Canadian, if you're around 38 or 40, you'll remember 1914. That year did.

The happy employer is indicative of a satisfied employee and the latter is always the most efficient. Customers are very sensitive to this. Nothing may be said but the customer always leaves a store with some thoughts somewhere in the back of his head. His future patronage is largely determined.

SOMETHING FOR PERUSAL Copies of the 136 page St. Thomas Times-Journal are being received in Prince Rupert. It gives a lot more of the intimate history of Ontario than the average school ever hope to equal. It was, for example, at St. Thomas, a train hit and killed P. T. Barnum's monster circus elephant, Jumbo. This was prize publicity for St. Thomas. They talk about it yet.

The Social Credit government orders new doors for the British Columbia cabinet room, so that it will be impossible for anyone in the corridor to overhear a possibly important conversation. The job is quite unnecessary. In modern journalism, responsible correspondents are never found there!

SAME OLD SPORT Churchill is not eighty, but give him just a few more years! There are those who feel age should have nothing to do with government responsibility. Mr. Churchill lights a fresh cigar, and remarks that "a prisoner of war is someone who has tried to kill you, and having failed in the attempt requests you not to kill him."

Wake up, Prince Rupert We Need an Airfield

Can we secure a land airfield now? In this writer's opinion can be done but only by the realizing the utmost importance of this air field and the tremendous importance to Prince Rupert and pressing for it.

My thoughts on this matter are not new and have been pressed now for over two years. I have been taken to Vancouver-Sandspit-Whitehorse air service which bypasses Prince Rupert should emphasize matter. This is only a beginning. We must wake up to reality.

Prince Rupert can and should be a big city in future years. Pioneers knew that. We men of today must carry on. We cannot afford for the sake of our children to lose reality.

Dark Outlook For British Export Markets

LONDON (CP)—Growth of man and Japanese competition coupled with the danger of increased wages in British industry may price the overseas markets, according to a report released by the treasury.

In 1948 exports from Germany and Japan were 13 per cent of British volume, but by 1951 they had risen to 67 per cent. In the period the share of the exports enjoyed by the former enemy countries had risen from two per cent to 12 per cent, while Britain's share fell from 12 per cent to 21 per cent.

"To keep our share rising further," says the report, "we must keep our prices competitive. The danger of this is that wage increases will force up our prices and will be competitive no longer. This possibility, together with other factors, is being reported, adds, is even a possibility of a depression."

Paris Designers Get Ready For Royal Coronation

PARIS (AP)—Getting ready for the Royal coronation in England next year seems to be occupying Paris dressmakers' thoughts these days.

Waists are usually fitted at Patou, but he uses bands around the hips and contrasting materials to suggest a long-waisted middy line. One of his favorite cocktail styles is a tight black sheath with a drape descending from the hip down one side. He calls this "a symmetrical volume superimposed on line."

Paris Designers Vie For Popularity with Parisians

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS, Italy (Reuters) — "Good — and the opinion of the world's fashion experts view joint showings of leading Italian couturiers."

Other high-style houses, including Ferdinandi, Vanna and Folliobert, establish a Grecian trend for evening.

Draped chiffons, jerseys and glamorous metallic sheaths are popular with buyers, who claim that only here in Italy can they find embroideries at such a price.

For less sophisticated tastes, there are the gaia ball gowns, using an enormous quantity of material.

Models start at $80 to $125 for custom-made day wear. The latter figure may even include fur trimmings. Formal clothes range from about $250 up to $500.

One of the most fabulous gowns, named after Britain's Queen Elizabeth, is Vanna's masterpiece. This heavily-embroidered dress employing yards of pale pink tulle, features a removable apron skirt which converts into an evening cape.

No Dancing at IOOF Hall

furs and satins that suggest champagne sparkling in crystal glasses against gilt-and-mirrored walls, red plush and polished wood.

Crinoline cocktail and evening dresses have the sumptuous width that cries out for the accommodating interiors of the horse-drawn carriages of earlier years. Even in day clothes there is a definite regal flavor.

The Royal ladies' love of velvet is stressed in the billowing skirts of neatly-waisted coats with rounded shoulders and stand collars. Princess Margaret, who has bought more than one outfit from Victor Stiebel, might have been the inspiration for his wide-skirted, turquoise velvet coat with immense grey fur cuffs and tiny matching hat, little bigger than a half-hat.

FIT FOR PRINCESS

The Princess could certainly wear with sophisticated distinction, the white nylon dress with short, accordion-pleated skirt billowing over a crinoline foundation, the diaphanous shawl collar pleated to cup the neckline. With low, square neck, the tight bodice beaded in silver from bra to waist and the waist caught by a narrow silver kid belt, it is a type of gown the Princess favors often.

Royal preference would no doubt incline to all-round pleated day dresses in light-weight wools and heavy silks, worn with tight-waisted jackets, rather than the big-shouldered gaucho suits with waistless jackets over knee-length skirts.

The varied styles of box jackets, from loose, waist-length to tight-hipped, half-belted effects, will, however, be the best-seller for smart business girls with modest bankrolls. The voluminous, knee-pleated skirts cannot possibly sell at competitive prices.

Dull though they are, the winter-woollens achieve an under-current richness suggestive of royal brocades in the Elizabethan era. Take, for instance, the latest thing in "poodle" cloths, under dark bubble surfaces of black, grey or bottle green, glow rich reds, deep blues and clear royal purples. The outstanding winter color is green in every shade from true grass to the darkest peacock shot with blue and tawny gold.

IN MEMORIAM
HODGKINSON — In loving memory of our dearly beloved son, Pte. Frank Edward Hodgkinson, Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, killed in Italy, August 9, 1944.
Eight sad and lonely years have passed
Since our great sorrow fell.
The shock that we received that day
We still remember well.
How his life was shed we know not;
What his last word, look or thought;
Only that he did his duty,
Died as he bravely fought.
Ever remembered by Dad,
Mom and brothers, Alfred and Kenny. (1tp)

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Opening Two Bid Is Often Dangerous

You can shade your opening two bids a little when you have a partial. But not much. Don't be like Mr. Muzzy who, when he has a 40 partial, opens with two spades, holding six spades to the ace, king, nothing and a side ace.

"I was only bidding to the score," he wails, when his partner, holding a fine hand, raises him to six and he goes set. A little thought will convince anyone that it's not necessary or desirable to open hands like that with a two bid.

If partner has anything, he will take some action over a one-bid. If he has nothing, then the enemy will have three aces, two kings and practically all of the queens and jacks.

Do you think they will sit there on their hands and blandly pass? Of course not. They will go ahead and reach a game contract of their own. Or, if the spades are blanked in one of their hands, they may double you and take you for a basket of points.

Mr. Abel's hand in today's deal would not qualify as an opening two bid, without a partial. He shaded his opening because of the 60 part score and this is about as far as I would recommend going in the shading department.

Miss Brash with a good opening bid of her own took the two-bid at full value and jumped all the way to six. This unerved Mr. Abel to such an extent that he loused up the play.

He won the opening diamond lead with the ace, cashed two top trumps, then the king and queen of clubs. He got to his hand by ruffing a small spade, led a small club and ruffed on the board.

He led the ace of spades and threw a diamond. But now he couldn't safely return to his hand to extract Mr. Dale's remaining trumps. Desperately, he tried to cash the king of diamonds but Mr. Dale ruffed and Mr. Abel still had to lose a diamond trick.

He would have been all right if he had played just one found of trumps at the start. Then, after cashing dummy's club honors, he would have returned to his hand in the trump suit itself, still leaving a trump on the board. This one additional entry to his own hand was all he needed for his contract.

Child Prodigy Reads at 3; Studies Radio

UNION, Calif. (AP)—Leon Ross's parents try hard to tell him he's just like other youngsters, but it isn't many boys seven years old studying radio engineering. Or like to read encyclopedias and almanacs? Or can do things in their heads? Or know the names of the kings of England and Presidents of the United States, just like him?

He attracted considerable attention recently when he passed two stiff Federal Communications Commission examinations, one for a novice radio operator's licence and the other a commercial radio operator's certificate. The second test required the ability to send and

CLASSICAL RESEARCH

A Musical Personality

Jascha Heifetz, violinist, born February 2, 1901, in Vilna, Lithuania, was a prodigy from infancy, obtaining his first violin lessons from his father at the age of three.

At this early age he was able to play by ear various studies with ease and pure intonation. He entered the Vilna Music School at four and at five years old made his first appearance in public.

Immediately after his graduation, at the age of eight, he went to the St. Petersburg Conservatory, where he became a pupil of Leopold Auer. On April 30, 1911 he made his first appearance in St. Petersburg; at 10 he played with symphony orchestras in Odessa and Kiev, and at 11 in Pavlovsk and Berlin.

Besides playing in public, the young Jascha continued his studies with Auer, and received a general education from tutors. When the Russian revolution broke out, the Heifetz family sailed to New York, where Jascha made his debut at the Metropolitan Opera House, October 27, 1917. He was hailed by critics and music loving Americans as a violinist of remarkable attainments. Since 1917 he has toured extensively through the U.S.A., Europe, the Far East, Australia, etc.

In 1925 he was the donor of a concert hall at Jerusalem and in 1926 the French Legion of Honor made him a Chevalier.

SINGULAR VIOLINIST

Few violinists have explored the repertoire of their instruments as intensively and with as profound an understanding as Jascha Heifetz. He has enriched the violin literature with over a hundred of his own brilliantly effective arrangements for violin of short works by other composers, past and present. Today he is at the highest peak of his career, thrilling audiences the world over in concert halls, radio and records.

Heifetz' first teacher, Leopold Auer, was the head of the violin department of the St. Petersburg conservatory. He made numerous concert appearances both as a violinist and a conductor. Few teachers have transmitted their ideas so completely to another generation as Auer.

Though it was his object to preserve as far as possible the individual qualities of each student, he imposed upon them the attitude which dominates all their playing alike—an unflinching respect for the nature of the instrument and a willingness to accept its limitations, while exploiting its potentialities to the fullest.

Among his better known pupils were Heifetz, Efrem Zimbalist, Mischa Elman and Mstislav Piatro.

GOOD CROPS such as this are expected in the Bulkley Valley farming district with grain fields now showing first rate prospects. Shown here is a crop of oats in stocks at the Smithers government experimental station, of last year's product.

Novice Prospectors Scour Australia for Uranium

By JEFFREY SMITH

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—The current "best seller" in Australia is a government pamphlet on "How to Find Uranium."

Part-time prospectors are scouring Australia's rugged "outback" in a country-wide drive to find new uranium deposits to add to the country's already large known sources of the atomic raw material.

The "uranium fever" is being stimulated by a government offer of up to $56,000 for discoveries of radio-active ores.

The new army of prospectors is spurred by the same lust for adventure and quick money that sent the diggers to the Australian goldfields a century ago.

The fever is not as virulent as in the gold rush days. Few seamen are leaving ships, bank clerks are not forsaking ledgers or husbands deserting wives to join searches in the outback.

But farmers, newspapermen, unemployed actors and full-time prospectors are among the growing numbers who are already "catching" the fever.

EVERYBODY JOINS Schoolchildren are among the most enthusiastic seekers. City dwellers are spending their vacations searching outback territories in the hope of finding ores—and making a quick $56,000.

Mining experts say that no really adequate search has so far been made in Australia for radio-active ores—despite rich uranium finds at Radio Hill, in South Australia, and in Rumbungle, in northern territory, which authorities say will make Australia one of the world's big five producers of atomic materials.

Australian mineralogists believe that if people moving about in country districts become aware of what they see, there are excellent chances of finding more deposits of uranium and thorium, the chief radio-active ores.

Amateur prospectors studying the government booklet are learning all about the Geiger-Muller counter, whose accelerated click responds to the presence of radio-active ore; the ultra-violet lamp; the spectroscope and electroscope.

For these are the tools of trade of the modern prospector. MODERN PROSPECTOR The booklet tells the enthusiast how he can make a simple and inexpensive electroscope to determine whether ore is radio-active.

A lamp chimney (or tube of glass made from a bottle by removing the neck and base), a tobacco tin lid, a carpenter's nail with pointed end flattened, a cork, some sealing wax and receive at least five words a minute in Morse code.

A prodigy? Lenny's mother, a court reporter, tries to scoff at the idea. But she admits her son has been reading since he was 3. He's used an electric typewriter, adding machine and an office calculator for three years.

At Don Marin's radio school in Hollywood Lenny keeps up pretty well with adults in radio engineering.

As for his school grades, his mother says he gets A's in such subjects as arithmetic and reading in the third grade.

He confided to his adult classmates in radio school that "they give me fourth-grade mathematics, but I know I could do sixth-grade math."

Two pieces of aluminum foil are the only needed materials. The nail is soldered by its head to the tin lid, then pushed through a sealing-wax-filled hole in the cork and the assembly

—Foot Lights—

By LILIAN MILLER

Of the world's greatest dramatists, it seems that Britain claims the lion's share. Among these we find Richard Sheridan, author of the much loved comedy, "School for Scandal."

Sheridan was born in Dublin in 1751 and before he was 20 years of age he had produced his first famous comedy, "The Rivals."

Though not as prolific as Shakespeare, Sheridan was certainly as versatile. With his personality and wit he won fame as a great orator during his 12 years in the British parliament.

When Sheridan died in 1816 at the age of 65, he was buried among the honored in Westminster Abbey.

For stage presentation, or for enjoyable reading, you'll love Sheridan's farce, "St. Patrick's Day," or his comedy, "The Critic."

Marissa Windle—For "devotion to duty" and "gallantry in the face of the enemy," Marissa deserves a medal.

She was among our most faithful members and proved herself during our frantic search for stage props by hiking all over Prince Rupert and gathering dozens of flowers, bows, and knick-knacks.

The "enemy" to Marissa was her audience. She did a beautiful job of the overly-devoted mother in "From Five to Fifty-Three" despite her terrific stage fright.

LONDON (Reuters)—The physician to the late King flew to Rome today to attend the Duke of Windsor, who is reported suffering from stomach trouble.

Sir Daniel Davies told reporters he was going to see the Duke, "but I know nothing else about it."

The Duke became ill aboard his yacht in the Mediterranean, although later reports from Italy said he had recovered and ate steak for lunch.

London Editors Mourn Death Of McCullagh

LONDON (Reuters)—The early death of George McCullagh, president and publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail, was a sad blow to Canadian journalism, the London Times says today.

The paper published an obituary giving details of the life and achievements of McCullagh, who died in Toronto Tuesday at the age of 47.

The Times describes him as "approachable and youthful in manner as in years."

The Daily Telegraph also pays tribute: "Mr. McCullagh's death... removes a shooting star from the Canadian journalistic, financial and political scene, though his brilliance had been dimmed for several years by serious illness."

Art And Business Can Work Together

A further pointer that Canadian commerce is increasingly aware of the importance of the arts in the full life of the community was visible on Toronto's King Street these past few weeks. The Chartered Trust Company's main office has given over its window to an exhibition of child art from around the world. This collection, gathered together by the International Red Cross, was but the first of a series of cultural exhibits to which the company will lend its display space.

The recent support of the Dominion Drama Festival by a distillery and the purchase of the collected historical drawings of C. W. Jeffery by a leading oil company are not to remain mere isolated instances of an enlightened new departure on the part of commercial enterprises. In the present ideological struggle for men's allegiances, it is becoming increasingly clear that the arts and business enterprises are, in a very real way, interdependent; for a free art expression is a symbol of a free community.

JASPER PARK LODGE.—The Scott Glacier area of Jasper National Park, including the famous Committee's Punch Bowl which is steeped in the romance of early fur traders, has been chosen by the Alpine Club of Canada as the site of its 1953 summer camp.

The decision was made following the recent return of a seven-member reconnaissance party which spent two weeks exploring the area located about 35 miles from Jasper Park Lodge. In early years this area was thought to contain the highest mountains in North America.

The summer camp is scheduled for next July when some 200 club members hailing from across Canada, the United States, Great Britain and Australia, and their 50-horse pack train undertake the three-day trip into the Scott Glacier area. Members will live under canvas for two weeks while they climb the 10,000-foot and higher peaks in this area.

Seven officers of the club who made the reconnaissance trip were Mrs. Ethel Gibson, Major Rex Gibson and Cyril Jones, all of Victoria, B.C.; Henry Hall, Cambridge, Mass.; Polly Prescott, Cleveland Ohio; Joe Coffey, Edmonton, and Bradley Gilman, Worcester, Mass.

One of the features of the area is the storied Committee's Punch Bowl, a lake at the summit of the Athabasca Pass and named after the governing committee of the Hudson's Bay Company.

In the early days of the fur traders, the pass was the meeting place for brigades travelling from the west and east and it was their custom to drink a "jorum of punch" to the "great company."

ANCIENT SCIENTIST The Greek astronomer Hipparchus, who lived in the 2nd century B.C. is considered the founder of sidereal astrology.

NEW ISSUE of Canadian four-cent stamp now distributed commemorates the 1952 International conference of the Red Cross Society which took place last month at Ottawa. It was the first time the annual meeting has been held in Canada.

S.A. May Stiffen Race Segregation To Stamp Out Defiance Campaign

VENTERSBURG, South Africa (Reuters)—Premier Daniel Malan's administration may stiffen its racial-segregation law in an effort to stamp out the growing defiance campaign being staged by the colored population. Justice Minister Charles Swart told a public meeting here the government will not hesitate to introduce new legislation.

The number of colored people serving jail sentences for deliberately breaking laws—mainly using white-only entrances at train stations—is mounting daily throughout South Africa. The campaign is organized by several colored people's associations and is aimed at winning reform of "unjust color legislation."

Swart said the campaign had created a serious situation in the country.

No government would allow the things now being done by the African National Congress, South African Indian Congress and other organizations, he said.

"I give you the assurance we shall take action even if new legislation must be introduced," he said.

Up to now offenders have been sentenced to short jail terms, usually around a week. But one judge recently threatened offenders with whipping.

How Hard Does a Whale Work?
Does a whale heart work as hard in proportion to its size as the heart of a man or a mouse. Does it

These are the questions two noted heart specialists are trying to answer by taking electrocardiograms of Alaska whales.

Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston, and Dr. Robert King, Seattle, are at Clark's Point on Bristol Bay where they hope to record on paper the heart beats of the Beluga whale.

Through their studies of opposite extremities in size, the scientists hope to establish some sort of a scale which will help to understand heart functions in relation to the size of man.

In order to record a whale heart in action, they will load their equipment into a small boat and travel into the nearest school of white whales.

The metallic contact of a cardiograph, which normally is placed on the skin, will be incorporated in the point of a light harpoon. Wires leading from the contact will transmit heart beats along the harpoon line to an electrocardiograph. A stylus in the machine will record heart action on a sheet of graph paper—if the whale cooperates.

Arriving at Prince Rupert on Thursday, the Japanese freighter Yamateru Maru is today loading barley which, it is expected, will mean a total cargo of 450,000 bushels. The vessel was not lined, but work started soon after arrival.

In the recent 16-ship parade along Seattle's waterfront one of the vessels was HMCS Ontario which was officially greeted by a 21-gun salute, and by the Canadian consul-general at San Francisco. Skipper of the Ontario is Capt. E. P. Tisdall. The warship carries 578 enlisted men and 125 officers.

Claim of the Griffiths Steamship Co. Ltd. against Western Plywood Co. Ltd. for $37,743 was dismissed recently in the Supreme Court of B.C. by Mr. Justice Clyne. The claim was for damage to the steel barge Griffson.

This happened at Prince Rupert where the barge listed at its berth when loaded with cottonwood logs. His Lordship found damage was caused by unseaworthy condition of the craft. It was alleged the Griffson had not been properly loaded.

Commencing Tuesday, August 19, HMS Sheffield will pay a nine-day visit to Vancouver, the first in four years. The Sheffield was built in England in 1936 and saw a lot of action in the war, which included pursuit of the battleship Bismark, and her destruction and engagement with the battle cruiser Scharnhorst. She also shared in numerous shore bombardments and landings.

A Dutch family totalling nineteen travelled all the way from Holland to settle on a farm on the British Columbia coast. This is at Abbotsford. The new settlers are Mr. and Mrs. Johannes Griffioen and 17 children, who range from 11 months to 22 years. It is the largest family ever to be transported by the Holland-America Line in its 75 years of history.

No fewer than four double-deck sight-seeing craft built entirely of aluminum are in use in Sweden. There is less weight, as well as an increase in speed.

Importance of aluminum in ship construction is just another example of the increasing usefulness of this metal. Designers of the Swedish MS "Gilloga" estimate that the 18 tons of aluminum in the craft result in a saving of 20 tons, compared to a similar steel vessel—a figure equal to the weight of a full load of passengers together with baggage.

In vessels of this kind, such weight savings are quickly reflected in increased revenue and reduced cost of operation. Another illustration of the additional economic value is shown in the aluminum resistance to salt water corrosion.

WATER PROPORTION
The water surface of the earth has been computed at 141,050,000 square miles, compared to 55,783,000 square miles of land.

Motors Blank Battery in Manson Match

General Motors proved too good for Heavy Battery in a Manson Cup football league game as they scored a 5-0 victory last night.

Play was ragged at the start with the Motors having the better of exchanges. However, it wasn't until a penalty was called that Krause was beaten.

Bishop scored the goal with a cross that gave Krause no chance.

Offsides repeatedly stopped the Motors but Giske put them two-up with a sizzling drive past Krause. Boulter saved well from Marron and Krause outguessed Tait.

Whitefield got a third goal for the Motors with a fine shot to give them a 3-0 lead at half time.

After the resumption, Heavy Battery turned on the pressure but Motors defence was sound and the losers failed to beat Boulter.

Battery were short several of their players, but were well served by substitutes.

Bishop made the score 4-0 when he headed a perfect goal past Krause from Pat Wilson's cross. Some neat footwork by Whitefield put the Battery defence in a tangle and Tait was in fast to make it 5-0. Two grand crosses by Pat Wilson were missed before the final whistle came.

The teams:
Battery — Krause; Mazzoni; Topher; Pavlikis; Georgeson; Parkhouse; Cameron; Gilker; Silversmith; Marron; Holkestad.

General Motors — Boulter; Robinson; Eby; John Wilson; Bishop; Bedford; Lien; Pat Wilson; Bewman; Tait; Whitefield; Persammon; Giske.

Remember When
Sportsmen from Canada and the United States paid last respects to Eddie Gerard, the great Ottawa Senators defenceman and coach of three National Hockey league teams, whose funeral attracted crowds at Ottawa 15 years ago today.

Mrs. E. J. (Pauline) Hicks, only child of one of Prince Rupert's first barbers Alois (Mutt) Ohnesorg, returned to Vancouver yesterday after attending her father's funeral. She was accompanied by her husband, Mr. Ohnesorg, known to hundreds here as "Mutt" came to Prince Rupert in 1912 after travelling extensively in France and England.

He opened a barber shop on Sixth Street, just off the corner of Third Avenue and retired only two years ago to devote his time to caring for a collection of house plants.

Mr. Ohnesorg was born in Germany, and was married here in 1927. His wife now lives in Vancouver.

He died last Monday after a short illness.

A charter member of the Moose Lodge here, Mr. Ohnesorg was buried in the Moose plot at Fairview cemetery on Thursday.

The uranium seeker tests his ore by placing it near the electro-scope. If the strips of aluminum come together quickly then radio-active ore is indicated.

The booklet also describes the country where there are the best chances of finding uranium and thorium.

In general, it says, the veins and lodes containing these ores are located where other metals such as tin, gold, lead, copper and zinc have already been discovered.

Beavers Best Conservation Engineers

Jeff Lambley of Terrace, one of the original members of the Terrace Rod and Gun Club, told Rotary Club members here that one of the finest conservationists is the beaver.

"The beaver does engineering work for us free and if there is enough food for him he will be glad to stay in happy surroundings."

He said the provincial game department at the present time is doing a great deal of good in its conservation program and in the propagation of wildlife.

"If you are interested in wild life," he said, "the rod and gun clubs aim at conserving and propagating it."

By propagating it, he said, the club attempts to improve living conditions for fish and game such as the planting of water plants in lakes and streams which are known to be attractive water birds and fish and the introduction of new species of game and fish."

He said a number of beaver have been taken from areas to places where they can do a lot of good and especially around Lakelse Lake, where they are thriving.

Navy Officers Appointed to New Postings

OTTAWA — Forthcoming appointment changes of two senior officers of the Royal Canadian Navy were announced today by Naval headquarters.

Commodore Horatio Nelson Lay, of Ottawa and Walkerton, Ont., who has held the appointment of Naval Member of the Canadian Joint Staff and Canadian Naval Attache in Washington, D.C. since July, 1949, will become Assistant Chief of the Naval Staff at headquarters on Sept. 9.

Captain Morton A. Medland, of Toronto, who has served at Naval headquarters for the past year as director of weapons and tactics, will succeed Commodore Lay as Naval Member of the Canadian Joint Staff, Canadian Naval Attache and Commanding Officer of HMCS Niagara, the Canadian naval establishment in Washington, Sept. 6. In his new appointment, Captain Medland will hold the acting rank of Commodore.
