PARIS WEAKENS AT CONFERENCE

Majority Party Urges Settlement
Along Lines of Bankers'
Proposals. Heriot May Give Way.

PARIS, July 26.—Unmistakable signs of discouragement in parliamentary circles in regard to the London inter-allied conference are manifested. In some cases there are definite declarations that the best thing Premier Heriot can do is to give way on penalties and get the best arrangement possible in exchange for this concession.

"Le Quotidien," the official organ of the Government majority, declares that the majority in the chamber is ready to pay the price of a settlement on the lines suggested by the British and United States bankers.

WRANGELL, July 26.—The fish cannery of the Alaska Packing Co. was destroyed by fire here yesterday, the estimated loss being set at $200,000.

Efforts to save the cannery were made and the steamship Admiral Rogers, which was in port, proved the chief factor in a fight to prevent the spread of the flames.

Two Indian Children Burned to Death in House Yesterday at Prince Rupert Cannery

Locked in the house which they probably inadvertently set on fire and thus unable to escape from the devouring flames, two little Indian children, Delbert Angus aged five and Chester Angus aged two, lost their lives yesterday when the Indian houses at the Prince Rupert cannery were burned. While their bodies were later recovered by Dominion and provincial police they were quite unrecognizable and little more than charred cinders.

It was about half past ten when smoke was first seen issuing from the roof of the house in which the children had been left, ing in the cannery and had locked the alarm was given at once, the children in the house to pre-warn the blaze, and all hands were sent their coming to harm from summoned to help extinguish the falling from the dock. She is a blazer. By the time they got there, young woman and much sym- however, it was already too late, pathy is expressed with her in the fire had made such headway calamity which has befallen her, in the dry wooden structures Manager T. H. Johnson of the that it was quite impossible to do the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. and the Dominion and provincial police were early on the scene with a gang of firefighters and everything possible was done by them to make things comfortable for the people who had lost their temporary homes.

Unable Save Children
The anxious mother and friends who knew of the children being there, rushed to the scene with the idea of saving the children. This they were unable to do. Through the window they were able to see one child still alive in the middle of the floor but surrounded by flames, the tremendous heat from which kept everyone at a distance.

Efforts were made to save the houses by pulling down one, but before the men had accomplished this the flames had spread and driven them away and they had to pull down another some distance up the line of buildings so as to provide a gap where they could make a stand and prevent the fire spreading to the main buildings and to the cannery. This was done successfully and happily there was practically no breeze else all would have gone.

The Indians living in the seven houses that were burned lost practically everything they had, but at once provision of clothing, blankets and tents in which to sleep was provided and all are today housed comfortably and is proceeding as usual.

Probably Started Fire

It is thought that the children must have started the fire inside the house, although this is only conjecture as there is nothing left to indicate what happened. Their mother, Mrs. Laura Angus lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus, and chisel and automobile robe put as exhibits in the murder trial of the two young college men, the aviators are bombing the rebel concentration points and a rebel airplane was destroyed.

Wonders of Jungle Brought to States by Explorer; Man Eating Sardine and House Building Toad

NEW YORK, July 26.—(By Canadian Press).—Aside from the "white" Indians brought back from the Panama jungles by the Richard O. Marsh expedition, scientists are investigating other zoological and botanical mysteries unearthed by the expedition. Among them is a frog that builds a house.

This queer frog, says Charles M. Breder Jr., of Newark, an ichthyologist of the American Museum of Natural History, builds a dam in front of the hollow he has selected and when the water seeps through to make a lagoon he sits and chants a love song him in his "apartment."

Another species of frog was found that, with its mate, kicked up a tremendous froth of water so that the bubbles covered the eggs and these were sealed with a viscous fluid. When the dry season arrived the tadpoles have plenty of water to develop in and later the torrential rains break the bubbles and release the tiny frogs to a more adventuresome existence.

Mr. Breder is lame as a result of his explorations, having been attacked by a fungous disease in his feet. If this is not checked, the tissues will be destroyed. He is 27 years old. Among other hardships he experienced was to lie at the point of death from typhoid fever, when two other scientists died. Mrs. Breder, an expert on reptile life, joined him at Panama and nursed him back to health.

Man Eating Sardine

Mr. Breder describes the piranha, a species of man-eating sardine so vicious that a school of them quickly devours anyone who falls overboard. He himself, bathing, felt hundreds of nips on his legs and body and his efforts at splashing to frighten the assailants served only to make them concentrate their attack. He tells of a fresh-water flying fish three inches long, as thick as blotting paper, and of an armored fish the natives cook in its shell and each much like a crab.

He said the interior Indians were gentle and kindly, except when drunk on liquor made from maize chewed to a pulp by the most beautiful of the village maidens. Their manner of fishing is to dive after the quarry and Mr. Breder says even the very gamiest Panama bass cannot escape them.

No Jealousy

Their religion is a combination of nature and devil worship and a trace of Catholicism, probably handed down from some long-forgotten Spanish missionary priests. They usually have three wives and there rarely is jealousy among them, for each time a wife is added there is less work to be done by the others.

Position Of Senate Being Discussed.

The position of the Senate is being discussed by newspapers and others. The Edmonton Journal in a recent issue says:

From the time the Senate came into being, nearly sixty years ago, there has been talk of reforming it. When a government has been in a minority in that body and had its legislation held up, it has made threats of "mending or ending" the upper chamber. But when it has been long enough in power to obtain a majority there, it has immediately lost its interest in bringing about any change. So, at this stage at least, the public is not likely to take very seriously the statement made by Mr. King in the closing hours of the session that, when Parliament next assembles, he will place proposals before it for limiting the power of the appointed house to prevent the carrying of measures which have passed the Commons.

There are, it must be recognized, many practical difficulties in the way. If it is quite clear that there is strong popular sentiment in Canada in favor of an alteration in the B.N.A. Act, the Parliament at London, which under existing conditions is a body which must put it into effect, would offer no objections to enacting the necessary legislation. But the act was the result of a pact between the different provinces and there must be a general demand for a change of any great importance before it can be brought about. Determined opposition in any section of the Dominion would probably serve as a bar to any such move.

Mr. Meighen asked the Premier to be more specific as to his intentions and to inform the House whether he contemplated consulting the provinces in connection with his plan. To this Mr. King simply replied that the form of action to be taken would be considered during the recess. It is quite a possibility that he will listen to those supporters of his who have been urging an appeal to the country during the autumn, and that his statement on Saturday was a prelude to going before the electors and attempting to make this the principal issue. When questioned as to whether there would be an election before another session, he answered that he was unable to give a pledge that it would not be held. If he really intends to seek to bring about a reform of the Senate, he would certainly be wise to endeavor to secure a definite popular mandate to proceed with it before he enters on the subject.

Been Unwise In Their Actions.

The Senators, if they wish to retain their powers unimpaired, have pursued an unwise course during the session that has just been concluded, continues the Journal. Such confidence as the citizens had in them has been much weakened by the treatment given by the majority to some of the C.N.R. branch lines bills. There is very strong feeling in the west over that accorded the extensions in this part of the Dominion for which a clear case has been made out. The opposition to them was, it is apparent, dictated by no sound public considerations, but simply by a desire to embarrass the government railways program.

The fact, however, should not be overlooked that the Senate majority, which was responsible for burking these projects, was by no means wholly composed of opponents of the government. It included strong Liberals, while western Conservative Senators pleaded the case for the lines in question. It was a Conservative premier who launched the C.N.R. as a publicly owned enterprise, and it is hard to believe that that party will undertake to defend the Senate's action, in case the government seeks to curb the appointed chamber's powers on the strength of this.

BOX MAKING A GROWING INDUSTRY

65,500,000 FEET OF B. C. LUMBER CONVERTED INTO BOX SHOOTS IN 1923.

B. C. Possesses Woods Admirably Suited for All Classes of Packages.

An important branch of the British Columbia Forest Products industries is the manufacture of wooden boxes.

There are 25 box making plants in British Columbia representing a capital investment of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

About 1,200 persons are employed in the manufacture and handling of wooden boxes in British Columbia and the annual payroll is not less than $1,250,000.

Lumber Converted.

Over 65,500,000 feet of selected lumber was converted into box material in 1923 and the value of the product was well over $2,000,000.

British Columbia's box making branch, which is as yet in its infancy, furnishes its quota towards the great purchasing power of the combined woods products industries.

B. C. species individually and collectively offer an ideal selection of woods possessing all the most desirable qualities for the packing of all classes of commodities, from the most fragile and perishable, to those calling for containers of exceptional durability and strength. Woods that give out no odor, take nails easily, and are otherwise suitable for all classes of box making, are amongst the common species in this Province.

Over 15,000,000 feet of box shoots were exported from British Columbia in 1923 to all parts of the world, and strenuous market extension work is being carried on to increase these figures manifold.

U.S. THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES SCORED

Students Are Mediocre Men Says Report on Institute of Social and Religious Research

NEW YORK, July 25.—Many theological seminaries in this country can scarcely qualify as educational institutions and many of their students are mediocre men of comparatively little training, according to a report on seminaries in the United States and Canada issued today by the Institute of Social and Religious Research.

The widespread popular belief that America faces a serious shortage of Protestant ministers is dispelled by the report, according to which the shortage is not in the quantity but in the quality of candidates for the ministry.

A tendency toward "denominational and institutional inbreeding," the fostering of divisiveness rather than of unity, the exclusion of the scientific spirit, and inefficiency in financial accounting are among other shortcomings of the seminaries stated to have been revealed by the study.

SHOWER OF UNION JACKS.

Editor Daily News:

In answer to your request for suggestions as to how to fittingly receive Stuart MacLaren, the British aviator, would it not be a good thing to have a lot of small colored Union Jacks printed on paper and mixed up in a sack like confetti and when the aviator arrives to have one of the local aviators to take up the sack and give him a shower from the air of Union Jacks. The American aviators arrived in a snowstorm. The Britisher could arrive in a storm of British enthusiasm.

PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALLERS VISIT EUROPE

Teams From England and Scotland Travel in Different Countries Including Germany

LONDON, July 26.—(By Canadian Press)—English professional football teams, swarming over the continent of Europe, ambassadors of Britain's most popular pastime to countries where hitherto competitive sports were almost unknown, is the spectacle enjoyed this summer as a consequence of many clubs of the English Football Association undertaking instructional tours. No fewer than nine first class teams have had engagements in places as far removed from each other as Copenhagen and Madrid, as Vienna and Corunna. The invasion has penetrated even to South America where Plymouth Argyle took several falls out of the best in the Argentine.

Newcastle United, Everton and Dundee, of the Scottish First Division, traversed Spain. In the land of the Dons, it is reported, soccer is rapidly ousting bullfighting. The toreros are playing to empty houses; the matadors have discarded their colorful trappings and are now turning out in sweaters and shorts; the señoritas are bobbing their hair and learning to razz the referee where formerly they pelted the matinee idols of the bullring with roses.

Peck of Trouble

The British teams did not have it all their own way, for the Madrid Olympics eleven took the English Cup holders into camp by 20, while the Catalans trounced Everton at Barcelona by 2-1. At Corunna, the Scotsmen from the jute town ran into a peck of trouble, like their fathers before them during the Peninsular War. The game with the Spaniards ended in a free-for-all. A brief, but significant, report of the contest says that "the game was furiously contested and great excitement prevailed. The vigorous tactics of the visitors seemed to upset the home team."

West Ham repeated their visit of last year to the Rhineland, but on this occasion their contract called for no games with the British Army of Occupation. They took on a German team in the Cathedral City, the Koelner Club. The naivete of the Teutonic officials furnishes a refreshing sidelight on the game, for in fixing the price of admission they decided to admit the British spectators at about one-fifth of the ordinary prices "as they cannot afford as much as the Germans." Price of admission was between two and a half and three dollars. West Ham were quite successful in their tour and defeated Mannheim and Frankfurt, each by a score of 4-0.

pated in the athletic invasion of Germany and handed a sound trimming of 4 goals to nothing to the strongest association football club in the Fatherland, Nuremberg.

That Denmark produces some fine soccer players is attested by the defeat that Copenhagen handed to both Swansea Town and Clapton Orient in the course of an incursion by these clubs to the Baltic countries. In each case the winning margin was by one goal.

Charlton Athletic had better fortune in Belgium and carried off two games, one at Liege and the other at Veriers.

Cardiff City went far afield and played in three countries, at Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia, at Vienna and at Berlin.

Delegations of athletes from all the nations of the world participating in the Olympic games were recently received by president Doumergue. The athletes marched past the president in the gardens of the Elysee Palace. Each delegation was presented to the chief executive by Count Clary, president of the French Olympic games committee, and Baron Pierre De Coubertin, president of the International Olympic committee. M. Doumergue presented the athletes with autographed photographs.

Luis Lacey, whom English experts considered to be the best man on their international polo team, has torn the muscles of his right shoulder, so that he will be unable to play for at least another week, and probably longer. This means that he probably will not get any more practice before the ponies leave for the United States. The British regard this fact as a misfortune from the standpoint of team efficiency. He, however, will be able to play in the United States, since the team will not sail until August 9.

Driving a twelve-cylinder automobile, Rene Thomas Sunday, recently covered a mile from a flying start in 25 12-100 seconds. This is said to be a new world's record.

STUART SHIELD GAME IS WON BY SONS OF CANADA

Football Match Lacks Ginger Because of Heat; But Spectators Numerous.

The fourth game in the Stuart Shield series, played between the Sons of Canada and the G.W.V.A., on the Acropolis Hill grounds last night, resulted in a win by 2 goals to 0 for the Sons of Canada. There was a good crowd of spectators on hand but the weather was too hot to permit the teams playing a hard game.

The Sons of Canada scored their two goals in the first half and when kicking downhill, S. Eskeine and McDougall both scoring one apiece. Both goals were unearned on the play at the time.

Second Half.

The Veterans had the best of the play in the second half, but did not take advantage of their opportunities. Mitchell, Norwood and Russell, in the forward line, missed good openings.

The teams took the field, as follows:

Sons of Canada — Gawthorn, goal; V. Menzies and H. Menzies, full backs; G. Mitchell, J. Mitchell and H. Astoria, half backs; A. Mitchell, R. McDougall, S. Eskeine, E. Warren and E. Smith forwards.

G.W.V.A.—Knox, goal; Lord and Burton, full backs; E. Findlay, W. Murray and F. Hunter, half backs; Robertson, Russell, Norwood, W. Mitchell and Johnson, forwards.

T. Jones refereed the game, and Glaperton and R. Howe officiated as linesmen.

The halibut landings this week have been marked by the steady high prices prevailing, in spite of a good average supply. Canadians have been arriving with good catches and have pulled down consistently high prices. The demand, both in the eastern retail market and the cold storage plants on the coast, has been well maintained. Fishing conditions, on the high spots according to incoming skippers, have been very good and the boys seem to be well satisfied with the manner in which business has been going. Canadian second class fish jumped to nine cents during the week and the Canadian schooner Scrub pulled down 17.8 cents on Wednesday for her first class landings. American first-class catches have dropped a few points this week over the prevailing prices last week, but prices for second-class landings have remained practically the same. Outside of the actual fish landings, business along the waterfront is experiencing a lull, as is general, at this time of year.

The various fish houses are already planning on doing considerable overhaul work to machinery and buildings during the forthcoming closed halibut season and they will also manufacture fish boxes in readiness for the next spring and summer business.

From Monday to Friday, 573,600 pounds of halibut has been marketed on the Fish Exchange, Canadians were high at 17.8 and 9 cents, and low at 13 cents and 7 cents. Americans were high at 16 cents and 8 cents, and low at 13 cents and 6 cents. The arrivals were:

Canadians — Ringleader, Mah, Minnie V., M. M. Christopher, Tiffie S., Tramp, Malamute, Azores, Terrier, Marguerite, Kobe, Scrub, Swing, D. S. T., Pair of Jacks, W. & T., Lillian M., Livingstone, Nautilus, Muirineag, and Plop.

Americans — Cedric, Onah, Tee, Glacier, President, Hi Gill, National, Restitution, White Star, Reliance, Sunset, Wave, Venus, Groth, Brothers, Omaney, Harding, Norma, Atlas, Kanata, and Scandia.

The salmon packer, Arrive, owned and skippered by Joe Ryan, is on the Suga ways for general remodelling. The hull has been extended for 6 feet and other minor alterations have been made.

The Canadian schooner Ruth, Capt. Axel Erickson, is undergoing a general engine overhaul. New piston rings are being installed and the exhaust gadgets are being fixed.

The troller Snipe, Captain "Frenchy," arrived in port early in the week from Port Simpson for a real engine overhaul. The engine has not been behaving as its genial skipper considered a good engine should behave, accordingly the whole darned works have been torn down and it now resembles a cut-glass jug after a bomb explosion. The cylinders are being re-bored and new piston rings fitted.

Steve Ridley, who has been fishing for the Sunnyside cannery has brought his power boat, Katie, into port and is now installing a winch aboard preparatory to engaging in seining for humpbacks.

Akerberg & Thomson have recently secured the agency for the Vivian Gas Engine Co., of Vancouver. This is a well known engine on the Pacific coast, and the various models range in power from 6 to 100 horse power.

A scow load of 500 tons of coal will arrive from Nanaimo over the week-end for Albert & McCaffery.

Doc's 35th Anniversary.

"Yes, sir, it's a long time to be married, but it only seems like 35 months instead of 35 years," said our old friend Doc Clapperton on Wednesday afternoon on the occasion of the 35th anniversary of his wedding. While the genial Doc did not do any special entertaining, considering the weather too hot for coffee and mustard sandwiches, he was the recipient of many hearty congratulations by friends, both along the waterfront and up-town. So many rings came in on the telephone that Harry noticed it began to smoke with the intense friction of the incessant bell-ringing and with great presence of mind hung it over the dock in the salt chuck for a while to cool it off. Many happy returns, Doc.

Souvenirs Galore.

It has taken Harry Jackson, president of the Jackson publishing company, provincial wharf, to unearth some weird looking marine souvenirs. The case in the store is crammed with the most expensive collection of relics secured from Davey Jones' locker "never" seen before. We had no idea that Harry knew so much about the sea until we listened in on a conversation between him and a party of tourists off the Louise. The tourists were so overcome with the sad sea stories that they cried so much they could not see into their purses to extract the necessary. Harry defies any one on the Pacific coast to produce the same piece of mummified cabbage that he has in his case, and it would be a difficult matter.

Certainly one of the first needs is to make it profitable to sell fish. There would be no great difficulty about catching more, from the rich harvest grounds off the coasts of Canada, if more could be profitably marketed. The problem is to find customers.

FISHERIES ARE DISCUSSED BY OTTAWA PAPER

The Ottawa Citizen in a recent issue discussing the fisheries administration, says: From time to time the government is urged to appoint someone more qualified to administer the Dominion department of fisheries. Sometimes the request is for a separate minister of fisheries. At the annual meeting of the Canadian Fisheries Association in Montreal last week, a resolution urged the prime minister that, in the event of any change in the cabinet, he should place at the head of the department "a minister with a practical knowledge of the fishing industry and its requirements."

It would seem to be a very practical thing to do, on the face of it, to appoint a practical man. But is there any such man in the political arena, at the disposal of the government? There may be, but the country has yet to hear from him. From the fishermen's point of view, the practical man is the man who goes out daily with nets and lines to catch fish. But to the fish dealer, the practical man is one who is commercially successful in selling fish.

Certainly one of the first needs is to make it profitable to sell fish. There would be no great difficulty about catching more, from the rich harvest grounds off the coasts of Canada, if more could be profitably marketed. The problem is to find customers.

Sacrificed Fishermen

The United States used to be the Canadian fishing industry's best customer. In recent years, that custom has been retained only by sacrificing the Canadian fishermen, by compelling them to work from before dawn till after sundown for seven days in the week. In return for that labor, they receive barely sufficient to live from day to day. Under such laborious conditions, it is little wonder that the young people in Nova Scotia villages are all being attracted away to the cities, particularly to the United States.

Let some one come along with some practical ideas on how to make it possible to sell more Canadian fresh fish to Canadian consumers, at about half the present price, without reducing profits to the dealers and transportation companies, and without asking the fishermen to work under slave conditions, and the country would be interested. It should be possible; but no one in parliament or in the Canadian Fisheries Association, has any policy for doing it, so far as the public is aware. Until the man is discovered who can deliver the goods, there is no particularly urgent reason for changing the present administration of the department.
