A New Era For Alaska

V/E REJOICE that our neighbor, Alaska, ap-W pears in line for a huge aluminum fortune.

For us who have always had faith in the northwest corner of this continent there could be an element of "I told you so" in our reaction to the great news. This would be so if we were not aware that its glimmering future is just starting to unfold.

As will be the case of the project at Kitimat, an undertaking of the size contemplated for Skagway will bring with it further activity in a thousand different forms. Alaskans cannot be accused of over-optimism if, on the basis of the Aluminum Company of America's announcement, they are already looking forward to an era of development and prosperity.

At any rate, we feel that way about ourselves and challenge anyone to prove us wrong.

At the same time, it might be asked if there is room in the same market for two aluminum giants such as ours and Alaska's. We do not know the answer and would not try to provide one. We are sure, however, that ALCOA has made an estimate of the situation which it feels is good enough to back up an expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars, with strings attached.

The big string, of course, is tied to the fact that its water power must come from a Canadian source. It could never be expected that any contract would be signed giving ALCOA unlimited use of that water in perpetuity. There will have to be provisions to protect Canadian industry and Canadian resources.

The fact that the American company has certainly considered this and is still prepared to go ahead compels us to believe that the aluminum market is an enormous one which even present big projects cannot fill.

We are glad that we can consider the outlook along these lines. Alaska and British Columbia are good friends and we should get a kick out of entering that promising era together.

Lady, you'll save plenty with a modern ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR!"

Amazing how far a food dollar goes when you've got one of today's electric refrigerators on the job. All your eatables stay fresh and sweet, good for days and days.

No spoilage even in the hottest weather, no more dried up, wilted vegetables. A big, modern refrigerator has a lot of extra time saving, step saving, money saving features.

Convenient . . . easy to install . . . long lasting.
