Save Money and Patronize Canadian Ports by Shipping Grain to Vancouver or Rupert

That is the Advice Given the Prairie Farmers by the Edmonton Bulletin in an Interesting Editorial Article

There are two good reasons why grain should be shipped out by Vancouver or Prince Rupert, according to the Edmonton Bulletin. One is that by shipping that way Canadian ports are used instead of American; and the other is that the farmers on the prairies make money by shipping west rather than east. Both are valid reasons, and facts and figures are quoted by the Alberta paper to prove that what it says is true. Here is the article:

Some years ago a committee of the Senate, after investigating the trade, reported that two-thirds of the grain shipped from Canada passed through the United States and was shipped from ports in that country. That condition held until the close of the fiscal year ending with March, 1923. Of the 1922 crop more than 91,000,000 bushels were shipped from Canadian ports, but more than 159,000,000 bushels went out of United States ports.

Change Occurs

The following year showed a marked change in the grain movement. For the year ending with March, 1924, more Canadian grain went out of Canadian ports than went out of United States ports; 140 million bushels via Canadian routes against 139 million via United States routes. Not only so. Despite the larger amount of grain exported from Canada, the amount passing through United States channels was twenty million bushels less than the year before; while the Canadian ports handled 49 million bushels more.

For the year ending with March of last year the showing was not quite so good, but still decidedly good in comparison with the records for years previous to 1924. Of the crop marketed during the shipping season a year ago, 119 million bushels went through Canadian channels, against 126 million bushels over United States routes. While the balance was against Canadian routes, it was not at all serious in comparison with former years. Taking the two last years together, approximately as much Canadian grain has gone out of Canadian ports as out of United States ports.

NEWTON DEFENDS PRINCE RUPERT

Says Grain Can be Hauled Here as Economically as to Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Mar. 3.—Denying the opinion expressed by Mayor Harvie of Lethbridge at the conference yesterday, that politics was involved in the placing of the Government elevator at Prince Rupert, 200 miles further from the grain section than Vancouver, Mayor Newton said the port warranted the plant being built, as railway grades permitted the hauling of grain there as economically as to Vancouver.

GRAIN HANDLED IN ELEVATORS

The amount of grain handled by the prairie Government elevators is not so very large although a great deal of it has been dried and caused a lot of work and delay. Here are four of the most important for the season to date:

Taking This Port More Seriously.

Prince Rupert is being taken more seriously of late. People in Vancouver and Edmonton and at other places now realize fully that we are a port and a port with a future. They see in this place all sorts of prospects and are willing to recognize our right to a place in the sun. In spite of all this we shall have to fight every inch of the ground and must not expect too much all at once.

Government Has Been Patient With Opposition.

The Dominion Government has apparently had it within its power to stop the debate on the address by moving the closure. This is a rather drastic measure and one that governments do not like to resort to. If it is done too early in the debate the Government is likely to be open to the accusation of trying to shut off criticism. This time, however, they seem to have delayed too long. They should have applied the closure long ago. There is a limit to obstructive tactics and they should not be encouraged in any party. Liberals have been guilty of similar tactics in past years but usually have not been given the latitude allowed the opposition in this House. Meighen and his cohorts have made a record.

Circulation Audit. And How It Is Done.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations, whose man completed an audit of the Daily News circulation books yesterday, is very thorough in its methods. The auditor checks up the records of all subscribers and examines the receipt stubs. He checks carefully the street sales, the waste papers, the sales to agents. Then he examines the newsprint invoices and the daily press run and can tell almost exactly how many papers should be printed from a roll of paper. The daily record is sworn to and investigation is made into anything that might look like free circulation, which is not allowed. It would take a clever person to put it over one of the auditors as he has had experience with those who try to pad their circulation.

Any newspaper that has padded its circulation figures does not ask for an audit. To do so would be fatal.

Get Together Without Opposition.

The advice of Mayor Taylor that the Pacific ports should get together for their mutual benefit without opposition to each other, is the kind of advice we should follow. We have everything to gain by standing shoulder to shoulder to fight for our rights. We have been gradually getting better treatment in regard to freight rates but there is still more to get before we have equal treatment.

Just now the grain is going out by Eastern United States ports when it should be coming out by Western Canadian ports. By uniting our efforts we can force the East to give us that justice which we have so long been demanding.

READING ROOM FUTURE POLICY

Recommendation That it be Combined With Library and Housed in Same Building

COMMITTEE NOT EFFECTIVE

Only Three Members Present at Only Meeting of Year Alderman Stephens Says

That the reading room be placed under the management of the library board and that steps be taken in the near future to house the reading room and library in the same building was the recommendation made last night by the reading room committee to the city council and adopted by them. Also it was decided to continue all the magazines and papers for the reading room the same as last year and to add two new ones, the Manitoba Free Press and the Toronto Saturday Night.

Discussion Over Papers

The list of magazines and papers recommended by the committee omitted the Daily Herald, of London, England, organ of the labor party there and also the Socialist Review. Alderman Larsen asked that these be retained. They had been put on the list by special request. The Socialist Review had on its staff high class writers and was educational in nature.

Alderman Stephens said if they went into the list they would see there were three other labor papers and that ought to be enough for any one class.

No Labor Paper Left

Alderman Larsen urged that if these were taken off there was not a labor paper left.

Alderman Stephens said complaint had been made that there were not enough Canadian papers. Labor was represented on the committee and there had been no objection to the change.

Alderman Larsen said labor people here took a great interest in labor affairs in the Old Country and he thought the city could well afford to purchase these papers. He moved that they be allowed to remain. Alderman Brown seconded and it was carried, after Acting Mayor Casey had urged its adoption.

Amalgamation

Alderman Casey then drew attention to the proposal to amalgamate the reading room with the library. The reading room was taken advantage of by men who had no homes. It was a sort of club room where they read and discussed and made general use of it. The work of the library was quite different.

To take the reading room away would inconvenience a lot of patrons.

Alderman Stephens said the reading room committee was a joke as it met only once a year. The library committee met once a month and was functioning. They should pass the reading room out of the joke stage and put it under a committee that functioned. The two should run hand in hand, be looked after by the same librarian and janitor and the heating plant should be the same. Sooner or later they would require to house both in a building. The library building was small and they did not know how long they would be allowed to use it.

Alderman Greer said considerable money would have to be spent as the building was in bad shape.

Alderman Brown said they would be loath to see the men lose their club room. There were always men there.

The report, which was carried follows:

The Report

Your reading room committee met on the 24th instant for the consideration of the business of the year 1926.

Those in attendance were Ald. M. M. Stephens, chairman; Fred Lauza, and J. J. Gillis.

The following recommendations are respectfully submitted for your consideration; all having been unanimously passed by the committee:

That in the interest of efficiency the council be asked to consider the combining of the duties of the reading room committee with those of the library committee whose duties are similar;

That the reading room and library be permanently housed in the same building, under the same management as soon as it

MILITARY TRAINING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND THE COLLEGES

Resolution Against it Before General Council of the United Church and Referred Back to Presbyteries

TORONTO, March 3.—A resolution on military training for youths in schools, colleges and universities, referred back to its constituency by the General Council of the United Church of Canada, is now coming before the presbyteries and may result in putting that church on record for or against this phase of preparedness for war. The resolution was moved in the Council by Judge S. A. Chesley of Nova Scotia and seconded by Mrs. L. C. McKinney of Alberta in the following terms:

"That whereas we believe that the training of our young men for war is contrary to the spirit of Christ, therefore, resolved that we take steps to discontinue all the officers' training corps in the colleges of the United Church and that we urge the government to abolish cadet training in the public schools of the Dominion."

An enjoyable whist drive was given last evening in the Metropole Hall by the Daughters and Maids of England. There were 53 tables and prize winners were: ladies' first, Mrs. G. ## BRINGING UP FATHER

NELLIE McCUNG IN LEGISLATURE

Takes Own Audience With Her When She Makes Speech in Alberta House

Nellie McClung, Edmonton's woman member, is the Sphinx of the session, says W. A. De Graves in the Edmonton Bulletin. No one knows from the lady member's demeanor or her utterances whether she is contemplating entering the lists again next election. Mrs. McClung is now resident in Calgary, and political forecasters believe that she may be found taking the stump as an Independent on a Prohibitionist ticket in that city, but there is nothing to indicate that this a correct forecast.

Mrs. McClung has another bid for fame. She is the only legislator who brings her own audience with her, and when "Our Nellie" finishes speaking the exodus from the public galleries is very marked. On Wednesday Joe Dechene, of Beaver River, threw a monkey wrench into the machinery when he spoke for the entire afternoon, while Mrs. McClung's gallery waited vainly for their champion to enter the arena. But on Thursday it was a different tale, and the Edmonton woman member was not caught napping. Before Sam Brown, of High River, was in his chair, she was on her feet with "Mr. Speaker," and as she caught Mr. Speaker's eye her faithful gallery, in attendance for the second time in two days, settled down for the expected onslaught on the beer parlors. They may have been satisfied, but the general gallery impression was that "Our Nellie" has made far more vigorous and telling speeches than the one made Thursday. However, the gallery stayed to the bitter end.

and cut down the proportion of Canada's export grain crop that is diverted to United States routes from two-thirds of the total to about half. The development of the westward route is the factor that made the difference. The year that saw the heavy slump in our shipments via United States channels was the first year in which Vancouver came into action as a great grain shipping port. And last year, when less grain went to the Pacific, a larger proportion of the Canadian crop went through the United States than in the previous year.

Those who fancy that the increase of grain shipments westward means less business for Canadian routes and ports in eastern Canada are laboring under a delusion. Vancouver does not take grain away from eastern Canadian ports. It takes grain away from United States ports. The year when Vancouver handled the most grain that has yet gone that way, Montreal shipped more Canadian grain than had ever shipped in a year before. And last year, when Vancouver shipped less grain than the year before, Montreal shipped less grain also, though still more than in any other previous year.

W. Etris, Vancouver, was a business visitor on Tuesday.

Draws From U.S.

It is from United States ports that the westward route draws Canadian grain. For the last three years there has been a steady and rapid shrinkage in the amount of Canadian grain going through the republic; from 159 million bushels to 126 million bushels. The argument that Canadian grain should be kept in Canadian channels is sound. It is also a sound reason why Alberta grain should be shipped to Vancouver or Prince Rupert, for the development of the westward movement is accompanied by a corresponding shrinkage in the overflow of the Canadian crop which finds its way to the world markets through the trade routes of the United States.

It is also to be considered that the farmers of Alberta lose millions of dollars annually by shipping their grain eastward, and add just that many millions to their net incomes by shipping grain westward. A part of the money they lose in shipping eastward goes to pay dividends on U.S. railways and wages to U.S. labor. Every dollar they save by shipping westward adds a dollar to Canada's purchasing power.

STEWART

AUCTION BRIDGE RULES REVISED

New York Clubs Make Sweeping Change in Honor Counts

NEW YORK, March 3.—Representatives of the Whist Club of New York, the American Whist League, the Knickerbocker Whist Club and the New York Bridge Whist Club have agreed upon a revision of the rules of auction bridge.

The change in the manner of scoring relates only to honors. It was decided to equalize all suits as to honors, clubs counting as much as spades, hearts or diamonds, according to the following rule:

"Honors are scored in the honor score of the side to which they are dealt; their value is not changed by doubling or redoubling. All honors held by each are scored according to the following table:

"0 in one hand, 3 in the other, count 30 points.

"1 in one hand, 2 in the other, count 30 points.

"1 in one hand, 3 in the other, count 40 points.

"2 in one hand, 2 in the other, count 40 points.

"2 in one hand, 3 in the other, count 50 points.

"0 in one hand, 4 in the other, count 80 points.

"1 in one hand, 4 in the other, count 90 points.

"0 in one hand, 5 in the other, count 100 points.

"No change is suggested in honors at no trump."

SPORT CHAT

The reasons for the failure of the New York professional hockey team may be sentimental and mental, says the New York Times in a sport editorial in which the newspaper attempts to account for the failure of the Gotham National Hockey League club to scale the hockey heights. The newspaper says: "This New York hockey team was transported here en masse over night and set down in the midst of the country's greatest sporting metropolis. There was no bond of civic pride connecting the team and its home. Hippodromes and band drumming landed them high in public estimation. There was no inspiring local sympathy such as that which keys up the Senators to play their heads off for dear old Ottawa or the Maroons to give their last gasp of effort for equally dear old Montreal. There is no sentiment, evidently, among the New York players to do and die for the dear old Garden or dear old Broadway. Not at all.

"Even Boston and Pittsburgh, the other United States clubs in the league, have a lot of local pride behind them even if most of the players have been imported. These cities have never lost their hockey, while New Yorkers went without it for years, finding expression for their urge for indoor sports in more trivial pastimes. So perhaps it wasn't to be expected that the New York hockey team would burn up the league and beat Canada at its own game on the Garden ice pond the very first year out. Those who didn't expect it, consequently, are about the only ones who are satisfied with New York's present somnambulistic siesta in the cellar."

The utilities committee had referred back to them last night by the city council the question of reducing the water bill for the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Company, which was considered excessive, it having been considerably increased recently.

Alderman Stephens said he thought serious consideration should be given to the request. The Cold Storage plant was the best friend Prince Rupert had. It anchored the fish business here. When the cost of any utility was raised 40 p.c. it meant quite a bump and they should consider his effect on business here. They were sometimes accused of not doing what they could for the fishing industry here. The water in question was used largely for washing down fishing boats and he thought they should revise the bylaw if it was injuring the fishing business. They had found a way to give the sawmill a rate for water and he thought they should give the Cold Storage plant a compliment and congratulations on the excellence of the show in every detail.

A farce in which practically every character becomes involved in an affair of the heart, "Wedding Bells" gives rise to continuous mirth provoking situations presented in a way embodying many novel turns. The result is that the audience is kept in steady merriment and, when the final curtain rings down after three hours of solid enjoyment, every one is in a high state of glee.

Leading Parts

The leading role of Reginald Carter is taken by Alex. A. Connon in whose house in New York City the scene is set. The motif of the play comprises the events transpiring during the few hours previous to his intended marriage and consequent upon the unexpected appearance of a former wife. Probably the most arduous role in the play, Mr. Connon handles the part with marked natural ability and displays talents that would do credit to any stage.

Hooper, a sentimental though self-possessed lady's maid, is portrayed in splendid manner by Miss Florence Atchison; W. Mack takes the part of a most bumptious though much married butler, and S. Suga appears as a Japanese manservant, the only member of the entire cast who does not become involved matrimonially or nearly so in the course of the play.

Responsible to a large degree for the excellence of the manner in which the play is staged and the arrangement of the scenes are J. S. Wilson, under whose direction, it is staged, and W. H. P. Fleming, stage manager. The make-ups are in charge of Mrs. L. O. Larsen and the prompting is in the hands of Miss E. MacKay who, as far as the audience could see last night, had little to do.

H. F. Thompson was cashier and the ushers were the Misses Agnes Donaldson, Caroline Mitchell, Frances Cross, Lillian Worsfold, Phyllis Creighton and V. Armstrong.

The Westholme Orchestra played opening and between act selections. Stage furnishings were loaned by George D. Tite & Co.

In Spite of Mild Winter, 11,000 Tons Was Taken Reports Contractor Who Is Visiting City

As a confirmed though debonair bachelor, wary of though apparently willing for adventures with the gentler sex, W. M. Watts carries out the role of Spencer Wells in a sophisticated manner. He is Carter's bosom and confidential friend, willing but sometimes unable to extricate his chum from the entanglements that arise.
