1923 ALASKA ROBBERY BELIEVED SOLVED

INDEPENDENT MEMBER INQUIRES WHAT SENATE DID WITH PENSION BILL

Man and Woman Under Arrest on a Charge of Theft from Mails

FAIRBANKS, June 15.—Advises say that William G. Schermier and Nellie Beattie were arrested at Flat, Alaska, for the robbery of $33,173 from a dog team mail sled near Flat, which is 340 miles northwest of here, in November, 1923. They have been bound over until the Grand Jury is convened there. Officials say that Schermier confessed and implicated the woman.

The money stolen included $27,500 sent from Seattle to Thomas McGrath who lives near Flat and $2,250 consigned from Becker Bros., New York fur buyers, to Ed. Gjolme. The Beattie woman was a passenger in the mail sled which set out from a point on the Alaska railroad south of Nina for the Iditarod mining section in which the town of Flat is situated. The team stopped at a roadhouse maintained by Schermier.

NEW SERVICE TO VANCOUVER

Canadian National Railway Putting on Another Train From Jasper South

VANCOUVER, June 15.—Commencing Sunday, June 27, the Canadian National Railways will establish a new daily train service between Vancouver and Jasper, Alberta, the schedule being arranged as to have the train pass along the Fraser River and canyon and Cariboo trail in daylight on both east and west journeys.

The establishment of this new service is due to two factors. The first is to relieve the pressure on the Continental Limited on which passenger accommodation is at a premium during the height of the tourist season. The second is to meet an ever increasing demand on the part of tourists who desire to view the Fraser canyon and Cariboo trail, both of which are considered to be as spectacular as the Rockies themselves.

REDEMPTION ARMY CENTRE BOMBED

Forty Men Hurlled From Beds and Knocked Down in Explosion at Seattle

SEATTLE, June 15.—A dozen men were hurled from their beds and several were knocked down by flying furniture when a bomb exploded in the Salvation Army social centre where forty persons were asleep or at work last night.

A man had been seen to peer into the engine room on the first floor of the three storey building several minutes before the detonation. He was carrying a bundle under his arm. The bomb was apparently thrown through the front entrance of the building up a stairway leading to the second floor.

FISHERIES OF THIS PROVINCE

Value in 1925 Exceeded Year Previous Year by $1,250,000

OTTAWA, June 15.—The fisheries production of British Columbia in 1925 had a total value of $22,420,253, about a million and a quarter more than 1924. This represented the value of the fish marketed. The value in 1925 exceeded that of any previous year except 1918 and 1919. Salmon was of the chief importance in value amounting to $14,966,445. The total pack of salmon was 1,720,622 cases.

Postal inspectors worked three and a half years on the case and said that they found Schermier in Los Angeles where he is reported to have boasted of the robbery and told how the woman aided him.

Only Canadian halibut was offered at the Fish Exchange this morning 62,000 pounds being landed by seven boats at bids ranging from 41c to 44c for first class fish and 8c in all cases for seconds.

The landings were as follows: Ingrid H., 9,500; Imperieuse, 12,000; and Kaien, 13,000, to the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. Aiken, 9,000, and Bingo, 5,000, to the Athl Fisheries.

Meighen is Wrathful Over Neill's Suggestion of Prearrangement on Part of Tories in Higher House

OTTAWA, June 15.—A. W. Neill, independent member for Comox Alberni, made a motion in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that the House take the necessary steps to search the journals of the Senate to ascertain if the upper house had taken action respecting old age pensions. According to newspaper reports, Mr. Neill said, the measure was totally rejected by the Senate in which case no report had been made to the House. He said that, according to the report, all Conservative senators with the exception of one voted against the bill which indicated "prearrangement."

Replying, Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the opposition, said that Neill's speech reeked with insult and offence from the first word to the last, and that the motion had come in violent conflict with House rules. The motion carried.

After Long Hearing, Jury in Local Assault Case Considers Its Verdict This Afternoon

Addresses of counsel and the charge of the presiding judge occupied the time of the Supreme Court Assizes from 10 o'clock this morning until 12:05 noon when the jury retired to consider its verdict in the case of Rex vs. Murdoch Mackenzie, Darrow Casey and Lawrence Capstick. Court was then adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon. The feature of the defence evidence, which was presented yesterday afternoon and evening, was the admission of the three accused boys that a garment of the girl, Florence Morrison, had been removed. This had been done, however, on the spur of the moment and there had been no intention to harm the girl. The happenings in the park on the night in question had all been in fun, one thing having led to another until the admitted occurrence when one of the boys at least realized that they had gone too far.

Taking of evidence in the case occupied the entire time of the court yesterday in three sessions—morning, afternoon and evening until 10:30 last night. The public section of the courtroom was filled throughout and in the evening the spectators were overflowing into the corridors.

Florence Morrison was still on the stand for cross-examination when court resumed yesterday afternoon. She said she usually went home from the park at 9:30 but had remained on the evening in question because Pearl Thompson had asked her to. Mr. Gonzales drew attention to the fact that witness, at the preliminary trial, had said she had remained because David Hudema had asked her to, he promising her that nobody would hurt her if she did. The girl finally said that both the Thompson girl and Hudema had asked her to stay. When Mackenzie pulled her down, witness stated that Hudema, George Shenton, Tom Howe, Marion and Pearl Thompson, George Casey and possibly Ned Burns were all within a few feet of her as well as Capstick and Casey. She admitted her previous statement in the police court that they had been used to "having a little loving without any bad intentions" in the park. They just "fooled around and teased each other."

Before leaving the stand, in answer to a question by Mr. Johnson, the girl swore that at no time had she allowed any of the accused to become familiar with her.

Doctor's Examination
Dr. H. E. Tremayne told of being called to the residence of Jarvis McLeod, a few days after the alleged occurrence, to examine the girl's injuries. He found some bruises on her body and limbs as well as some scratches. The girl also complained of soreness of the neck. The bruises were fairly severe and probably a few days old. They evidenced violence, probably inflicted a few days previous.

Jarvis H. McLeod was placed on the stand to give evidence as to a statement the girl had made to him after she had reached home from the park. This evidence was objected to by Mr. Gonzales on the ground that the girl had already laid her complaint with the police. His Lordship, however, allowed the evidence to be admitted. Mr. McLeod told of a conversation he had had with the girl in the course of which she had said that "three young men had insulted her and she would see they were put in jail." They could not do what they liked (continued on page four)

Terrace Berries Coming To Town.

Terrace strawberries are beginning to come to Prince Rupert and from this on for the next month it should be possible to get the real fresh fruit, something that has not been possible so far.

To the Terrace shippers it may be said that it would be worth their while to put up the fruit in such a manner that the reputation of the community for the best berries obtainable is kept up. Each shipper should remember that on him rests the reputation of the whole place. A few boxes of poor berries sent to market gives the place a black eye. Second grade fruit should be made into jam or sold in such a way that there is no doubt for what it is intended. If the output of Terrace continues to increase a small jam factory ought to be a profitable enterprise, especially during a wet season when it is difficult to send the crop to market.

Always Finding Something New.

This is an age of progress. New inventions are welcomed and improvements are the order of the day. Yesterday the dispatches told of the use of the gyroscope on a giant airship which kept her steady and on her course even though the pilot left the lever and read a newspaper for half an hour.

Progress is shown admirably in the improvements of instruments for reproducing music. We all remember the old fashioned harsh blaring gramophones. Compare them with the fine instruments of last year and the contrast is very great. Compare again those of last year with the newest product of this year and once again progress of a very marked kind is recorded. Perfection is our ideal in everything, but happily perfection is never reached in anything. If it were progress would end.

Why Worry Over Small Things?

Why worry over small things? Needless we fuss and fume when there is really nothing to fuss about. We magnify defects and fail to get improvement because we worry. Nothing kills so quickly as worry. If we do our best at our work, act the best we know how in our spare time and eliminate worry, life will be worth a lot more to a great many of us.

You all know men and women who are never happy because they are not doing the right thing themselves or they fear somebody else is not doing the right thing. Cultivating a habit of tolerance is a great help. Worry leads to inefficiency and inefficiency leads to failure. People who worry are usually the ones who fail.

The World Is Not Against Anybody.

The world is not against anybody. The person who fails does so because of failure in himself and not through outside influences. A rebuff to a strong man is only an impetus to further and stronger effort. Often it is the best stimulus leading to success. Strong men build on their failures and cash in on their mistakes.

The world is looking for men who can do things and who are willing to work and strive for great things. The man who is a failure should for a whole hour sit down and analyze himself. He should locate the weak spot and then set resolutely to work to eliminate that weakness and rise above his depressing surroundings. The only real enemy a person has is himself. Let him look himself in the face, straighten his shoulders, grit his teeth, close his fists and declare that he will succeed and that nothing in God's wide world shall prevent it. If he does this three times a day and in the intervals work, and work still harder, nothing can hold him back. Success is already achieved.

STRIKE MEANT REVOLUTION IN GREAT BRITAIN

Sir John Simon and J. R. Clynes Speak on Great Struggle

LIBERTY IN DANGER

Success Would Have Raised Reactionary Movement and Civil War

LONDON, June 15.—Following the failure of the general strike a number of speeches were made by prominent men in regard to it but those of Sir John Simon, and J. R. Clynes were among the most important.

Sir John Simon, speaking at the Town Hall, Cleckheaton, said:—

There are many workmen and trade unionists in this country who still do not clearly see the essential difference between a general strike such as this and the exercise of the undoubted right to strike, whether on a small or large scale, which is perfectly lawful and which liberal-minded men of all parties have recognised as a legitimate weapon in a conflict with employers.

Before we pass from the subject, I hope, for ever—for the collapse of the general strike and the demonstration that it is fundamentally illegal have made it certain that in the future, it can always be stopped alike by the courts and by public opinion before it begins—I want to make plain what the distinction is. It does not turn merely on the failure to give notice, though this was a very serious matter, but the real distinction lies deeper. It does not depend on some legal quibble, but on considerations of common sense and an understanding of the Constitution under which we live and which is the only source of all our liberties. The law in matters like this is not nearly so technical as some people suppose. I did not speak in the House of Commons a fortnight ago as a lawyer but as a citizen and a Liberal who believes tremendously in the right of wage-earners to combine and to strike as a means of putting pressure, if they think it necessary to do so, on their employers. I insisted strongly upon these trade union rights in the first speech I made on the general strike, but unfortunately that part of what I said did not receive the same amount of publicity as some other portions.

It is just because these valuable and legitimate rights were put in jeopardy by the general strike and would certainly have been the object of reactionary attack if it had gone on that it is so essential for everybody to appreciate its distinction. The essential difference is this. The right to strike is the right of workmen, after giving due notice, to put pressure on their employer by withholding their labor. A trade dispute, properly understood, is a dispute in which workmen combine to try to make their employers do something. But a general strike like this is a perfectly different operation, for it necessarily works in an entirely different way. If it succeeds, the effect of it is to make not employers but the government do something and Parliament, if Parliament survives, do something.

The question is not whether the people—a sensible man believes that the ordinary British workman wants revolution—the question is not whether they were not trying to help the miners, the question is whether the success of a general strike does not necessarily involve the substitution of the strikers' will of Parliament, and therefore the overthrow of constitutional government.

What Labor Said

In this sense, therefore, a general strike is not a trade dispute, but inevitably involves—whether those who decide upon it intend it or not—a wholly unconstitutional use of power. Nobody has put this more clearly in time past than some of the most respected leaders of labor. Mr. Clynes made a courageous speech at the Trade Union Congress at Glasgow in September, 1919, when he said: "I have no doubt that we shall be told that this new-found and ill-digested policy is worth a trial. Those who have thought this matter out know that in giving it a trial they would begin by paralysing our industries and our whole social system. That paralysis would affect first and worst the masses of the poorer population. You cannot do it without anticipating a condition of civil war." J. H. Thomas said at Hartlepool on April 18, 1925: "The suggested mass attack by all the unions must by the very nature of things be an attack upon the community as a whole." Ramsay MacDonald wrote in April, 1924: "All my life I have been opposed to the sympathetic strike. It has no practical value. It is simply beating the air. It has no certain result, a bitter and binding reaction."

Confusion of Ideas

It has nothing whatever to do with it that many trade unionists who have lent themselves to this departure profess, no doubt sincerely, a deep regard for the constitution. The means which is being adopted is not the means which Parliament authorised when it gave exceptional privileges to those conducting a trade dispute, and it is a confusion of ideas, though a most dangerous confusion, which I hope recent events have done something to clear away, to imagine that all that recently happened is a proclamation of an ordinary strike on a large scale.

All my public life, ever since I made my first speech in the House of Commons exactly twenty years ago, I have stood up for the just rights of organized labor. Those rights were put in danger by the mistakes of the last fortnight, but it will be the business of Liberals like myself, if reactionaries attempt to exploit recent events in their own interest, to take up our old task and throw all our influence into the scale to unite the use of industrial combination with the realities of freedom.

Mr. Clynes' Position

J. R. Clynes, in his presidential address to the annual conference of the National Union of General and Municipal Workers, said he opposed the idea of a general strike as soon as he heard it was proposed, on the ground that it was futile and wasteful and because it could not succeed and has never succeeded elsewhere.

He said it raises false issues, and the proper industrial purpose is represented as some nefarious political design. Instead of a struggle with the employers it becomes a struggle with the Government, which is backed by unlimited resources.

A national strike would starve the poorest first, and an appeal to force would be answered by superior force. Groups of workers would soon be detached from the main body, and the worst of all forms of a class war would speedily develop—namely, war between sections of workers. Manifestations of solidarity are admirable, but solidarity without wisdom becomes worthless.

AFTER LONG HEARING, JURY IN LOCAL ASSAULT CASE CONSIDERS ITS VERDICT THIS AFTERNOON.

with her. The court would not allow Mrs. McLeod to take the witness stand.

Sergeant McGlinchey, at the time on the city police force, told of Florence Morrison telephoning to the police station and stating that Murdoch Mackenzie had torn off her clothing in McClymont Park and taken it away. The officer got in touch over the telephone with Mackenzie and told him to come to the police station and bring the clothing with him. At 12:30 (midnight) he arrived at the station and produced the clothing. He was then duly warned and placed under arrest.

Mr. Gonzales asked the officer if he had not "bawled" Mackenzie out and forced him to make certain statements before he had been warned. Sergeant McGlinchey denied this and stated that statements made by Mackenzie had been voluntary. At this point, Mackenzie was called to the stand. He stated that McGlinchey had been "pretty severe" over the telephone and, when he had given him the girl's clothing in the station, McGlinchey had called him a "big bum" and asked him, if he wanted to treat a girl like that, why he did not go to Comox Avenue. The officer had been rough with him and he (Mackenzie), before being warned and before knowing that he was going to be arrested, had answered certain questions. Later he received a warning and was forthwith locked up.

Asked by Mr. Johnson specifically what McGlinchey's "bullying" had consisted of, Mackenzie said it had been calling him "a big bum" in a gruff voice and suggesting why he had not gone to Comox Avenue. There had been no other remark constituting "bullying."

Sergeant McGlinchey took the stand and disagreed with Mackenzie that he had asked him questions before warning him. His Lordship gave the accused the benefit of the doubt and the questions and answers at the time of Mackenzie's arrest were not admitted. Casey and Capstick were arrested later the same night.

David Hudema, 21, who was present in the park on the night in question, was the next witness. He told of the group of girls and boys that had been in the park and their movements. Florence Morrison remained sitting on a bench with one of the accused while he (witness) and others went to the plank roadway. They were watching a dog fight when Florence was heard to scream "Dave, help me." He voice seemed to be in agony but she had often screamed before and he (witness) did not think it necessary to return to her assistance. No further screams were heard before the witness and the others left after Casey and Capstick had come running up to the roadway.

Under cross-examination, witness denied asking the girl to remain in the park. He was not sure if he had asked her to come along when he and the others were leaving the park. At one time, while they were near the swimming pool, she had asked him to take her away from Mackenzie. He had seen no reason why she could not have left at any time if she had wanted to. If, when the girl had yelled, he had thought she was in danger he would have returned to her rescue. Asked if it had been a common practice for girls and boys to "sit down and love each other in the park without serious intentions," witness admitted that it had been. He had not seen Florence Morrison sitting down with different boys in the park.

George Shenton, 24, also told of the evening in the park. He had heard the screams after the girl had been left sitting with Mackenzie, Capstick and Casey being about ten feet away. The screams sounded as if the girl was in pain or frightened. She had cried, 'Oh, for God's Sake, Dave.' Nobody returned to her rescue.

When he heard the first scream he thought something was wrong; and then he changed his opinion. It was getting dusk at the time but was not dark. Shenton said in answer to questions that he did not remember Murdoch sitting and fooling with the girl at any other time the same evening. He saw Pearl Thompson stop and talk to her. There was nothing to have stopped her going with the other girls at that time if she wished. She was just fooling around and spooning on the bench. While the others were there the girl seemed content to sit with Mackenzie.

In answer to the judge, Shenton said the girl was sitting four feet away from Mackenzie. He did not see them with their arms around each other. When he left for home Florence was the only girl in the park left with five boys. She did not suggest to him that she wanted to go home.

Thomas Howe said he knew the accused boys well and also the girl. He was there in company with the Thompson girls, Hudema and Shenton. He heard screams coming from where Florence Morrison was sitting with the three boys. She "hollered" for help saying "Help, Dave, Help." They did not go to her help. Asked why he did not do so he said: "I figured I should get into trouble."

Asked what he meant by getting into trouble witness said he meant he would get into a fight. He also urged Dave Hudema not to go as he was staying out of it. He did not think it was anything serious. He did not consider he had any right to interfere. Cross-examined, Howe said he thought there was some trouble going on. He knew the girl and she screamed quite often and these were pretty nearly the same kind of screams he had heard before. He had seen her in the park several times before. That evening he had seen her with her arm around Mackenzie. They were at that time close together and she seemed quite satisfied.

Howe said he had heard someone ask Florence to come home and she said she was going to stay. She was still seated on the seat with Mackenzie's arm around her when he left. He said he was not worried at her staying with the boys.

Mr. Gonzales then drew attention to the answers witness gave in the police court trial which differed from what he had

Eczema Was So Bad Could Hardly Sleep

Mrs. G. Jones, Kitsooty, Alta., writes: "I had eczema on my left hand, and my first finger was so swollen, sore and itchy I could hardly sleep at night."

I got a prescription from my doctor, but it did me no good, so I finally began to take given on that occasion.

Defence Evidence

Mr. Gonzales then outlined the evidence he intended to produce for the defence. He called Pearl Thompson, a girl 20 years of age employed as a maid at the hospital. She said she was in the park that evening with her sister. They went in by the cedar path and met the boys on the centre of the bridge. She had asked Florence to come home with her after she had been swinging awhile. Her sister was sitting at the table with the boys and Florence. The boys were Mackenzie and Casey. She said she thought one of the boys had his arm around Florence. She did not answer when asked to come home. She did not make any move to come. She could have gone home if she wanted to. She thought Dave Hudema also asked her to go.

The judge asked what was this concern about getting her home. In answer to another question witness said Florence often yelled a great deal without cause. She did not pay much attention to her screams as it was quite a natural yell.

Cross-examined in regard to the screams she repeated that it was a natural yell. She did not hear her say "Help, Dave, help." She had met Florence at dances and she considered her character was "perfectly all right." She never heard a word against her.

"Kidding Her Along"

George Casey was the first witness for the defence after the dinner adjournment. Florence had been swinging and she came to where witness and Ned Burns were. The latter told her to "get to H— out of here." She then went to a bench and sat down, Murdoch Mackenzie sitting down beside her. Casey and Capstick were over at a table. Witness sat down beside Florence and Mackenzie. She was not being held and there was nothing to prevent her getting away had she wished to do so. In fact she had been asked by a girl and a boy if she was going to leave but she had said nothing and made no movement as if to go. After the others had gone, Florence said "Let's go and sit with the rest of the boys." They then went to the table—George Casey, Mackenzie and the girl—the latter not being carried. When they got to the table, Florence told one of the boys to get up and give somebody else a seat. Capstick got up and Florence sat down beside Darrow Casey, giving him a push. To support himself, Darrow put his arm around the girl and they bumped into Mackenzie who also put his arm around her. They bumped back and forth for a while and the girl put her arm around Murdoch and Darrow. They were

Always Screaming

Edward Burns gave evidence of a similar nature to that of George Casey. He had told her to "get to H— out" because she was always screaming and making a noise in the park. While Murdoch, George and the girl were sitting on the bench they were "loving each other up and making a lot of noise." She had her arms around the two boys. There was no reason that she could not have gone had she wanted to. The girl was not carried from bench to table. She had made no protest as to what was going on. No handkerchiefs had been placed in her mouth. He heard her scream a couple of times but it was her usual habit to scream. If he had heard the girl yell as if in danger he would have gone back.

Under cross-examination, witness said he had seen nothing wrong that evening unless it was wrong for "a young man to have his arm around a young lady."

Accused on Stand

Murdoch Mackenzie was then called to the stand to give his story of the events in the park on the night in question. While Florence Morrison was sitting near the swimming tank he had made a motion as if to push her in. She yelled twice then and asked Dave Hudema to help her. They then went to the bench where he seated himself after the girl. He had not pushed or pulled her down. He told her she looked "kind of lonely" and asked if he could sit down beside her. She made no objection. Later George Casey sat down. Asked twice if she was going, the girl made no answer nor movement to go. Mackenzie denied picking the girl up and carrying her to the table. She had proposed to go to the table where the others were. After they were seated at the table, witness and Darrow Casey pushed the girl back and forth. She raised no objection. Some one proposed that they remove an article of her clothing and this was done by Capstick. They had no intention of doing anything wrong. Witness admitted that his and Darrow Casey's arms were around the girl at this time. Darrow and Lawrence then left for the dog fight and he, witness, was left with the girl. There had been no handkerchief placed in her mouth. After Darrow and Lawrence left, witness stated that he and Florence had a cigarette. Later he suggested it was time for Florence

COLD STORAGE WINS SOCCER

Inflicted First Defeat of Season on Terminals in Dominion Day Cup Series

The Cold Storage beat the Grand Terminals by a score of 1-0 in the first game of the Dominion Cup football series played on the Acropolis Hill grounds last night before a good crowd of soccer fans. This was the first time the Grand Terminal boys have suffered defeat this season and the Cold Storage aggregation fully earned their victory. The winning tally was scored by Erskine for the Cold Storage team midway through the second half of the game. Pat O'Donnell missed a penalty for the Terminals ten minutes after Erskine scored. Both teams missed some good scoring opportunities throughout the game. It was a keen game although ragged football was displayed in spots. The outstanding players on the field were O'Donnell and Harris, at half back for the Terminals and Cold Storage respectively, while Haig at full back for the Storage played a sterling game.

George Russell refereed the game. A. Clapperton and J. Tournay acted as linesmen.

The teams took the field as follows:

Gold Storage—A. Murray, goal; Haig and Kelsey, full backs; Carlson, Harris and McDonald, half backs; Doherty, Corbett, Erskine, Johnson and Norrington, forwards.

Grand Terminals—Spiro Guryel, goal; Dickens and V. Menzies, full backs; Wallace, O'Donnell and Stiekney, half backs; Hill, Walters, De Jong, Mitchell and Farquhar, forwards.

TERRACE HOSPITAL BENEFITS FROM SALE

Continuous Program Saturday Afternoon Under Canadian Legion Ladies

The committee in charge had the large upstairs auditorium of G.W.V.A. Hall very prettily decorated and the home cooking and candy stalls as well as the tea room were very attractive. A musical program was carried on throughout the afternoon, those taking part being Mesdames Haney, Von Bees, Munro and Allen, Miss Kathleen Burnett, and Rev. Wm. Allen. The Well-Managed Home

THE manager of a household is the purchasing agent for a large proportion of the family needs. In order to do a good job she must know what, when and where to buy. She must put her home on a business basis and run it on business principles in order to make the most of the family income.

Information is the only basis for intelligent purchasing. And the right way to get the greatest amount of necessary information is to read the advertisements.

ence to go home. She asked for the clothing that had been removed and he, to tease her, said he thought he would keep them. Then she walked off "in a huff" and he tried to follow her and give her the clothing. Then he heard a car coming and he picked up his coat hurriedly and caught a ride. The girl had not been hit, abused or treated intentionally rough. The statement that he had threatened to "biff her on the jaw" was false, also the remark about what would happen if she didn't "come through."

After he had gone home and gone to bed, Sergeant McGlinchey telephoned and told him that he had been accused of tearing a girl's clothing off. As a result of the conversation with the officer, accused went to the park, got the girl's clothing where they had been left, and took them to the station.

Showing Affection

Accused was cross-examined by Mr. Johnson as to his intentions in putting his arm around the girl. On one occasion this had been to hold her on a swing and show his affection. Their conduct on the night in question might have appeared unseemly but it was "just for fun."

"I suppose it was showing your affection," suggested His Lordship. Asked by Mr. Johnson if the girl had ever encouraged him to be familiar, witness said she had never objected to his being around. The girl had not been manhandled by the three accused on the night in question. The girl had smoked cigarettes with other boys in the park previously.

Lawrence Capstick was then placed on the stand. His evidence was similar to that of girl's story and that of the accused. Even the crown witnesses had admitted that the girl could have gone away any time she had chose. Her evidence on this point contradicted that of other witnesses in the case.

Why then had the girl lied asked Mr. Gonzales? Because she had not expected when she made her complaint to the police that the matter would go any further and, when she found proceedings started against the boys, she had made up a worse story to save her own name. If she had been carried to the table and gagged and smothered, why had not the assault been completed? Could intent on the part of the boys be believed when, two seconds after the occurrence, they had gone off to a dog fight? Later the girl was seen, apparently contented, still seated with Mackenzie on the table. The fact of the matter was if the clothes had been returned by Mackenzie, the boys would never have been in court today. No one was more sorry today regarding what happened to the accused boys themselves. In considering the story of the girl and of the accused boys, Mr. Gonzales asked the jury only to be fair, reasonable and last but not least, human.

Mr. Johnson

Mr. Johnson, in addressing the jury, emphasized the fact that there was no conflict or question as to an assault having been committed. As to whether or not there had been intent it was for the jury to decide. This would guide in differentiating between the first and second counts on the indictment. If one of the boys was guilty of such intent and the others had raised no objection then all were equally guilty. Mr. Johnson asked the jury to consider the probability of the girl's story and that of the accused.

Mr. Johnson claimed the character of the girl had never been attacked and two of the boys were strangers to her. From the evidence the jury had heard the girl was normal, had been in domestic service for four years and had been in the habit of going out and amusing herself. Any woman was entitled to go out and stay in the park until 2 o'clock in the morning without being approached and insulted by anyone. When the girl screamed "For God's sake Dave, help me" it had been a yell which meant something more than an ordinary scream. He did not think it was a very insignificant fact that the girl had made a statement to the effect the boys had stated that if she did not "come through" in ten minutes that they would come back. If it had all been a joke why had the girl telephoned to McGlinchey. If it was a joke there would have been no object in telephoning the police. Had the defence satisfied the jury that the girl had been a consenting party? Even were the girl a bad character that did not justify the assault. There had been no single incident brought forward by the defence to show that the girl was in any way immoral. The fact that she had smoked a cigarette and obtained cigarettes from men was no particular slight on the girl. "Ever if she smoked a packet of cigarettes it did not follow that she was to be attacked" exclaimed counsel.

Judge's Charge

Mr. Justice W. A. MacDonald, in charging the jury, repeated the indictments
