No Isolationists

ASTLEGAR in the Kootenay district is - shortly to have the same good fortune that came to Prince Rupert. There the Celgar Development Company, an affiliate of Columbia Cellulose, is to establish a $65,000,000 integrated forest industry.

If Celgar shows the same remarkable community spirit that characterizes Columbia Cellulose, the future of Castlegar is indeed bright. In every way the big concern at Port Edward has proved a benefit to Prince Rupert, and the same can be said for the effect of its woods department on Terrace.

Too often today there is a tendency of large companies to regard themselves as a cut or two above the townfolk near whom they have had the graciousness to establish themselves. Frequently they will have no truck with them at all, which policy has led to that peculiar 20th century form of community known as a company town.

There is nothing wrong with company towns. Usually, in fact, they are attractively laid out and capably administered. But the spirit which leads to their formation leaves something to be desired. It smacks a little of totalitarianism in which the company seeks to control not only the working lives of its employees, but their private lives as well.

There is, of course, many an occasion in which an industry, obliged to set itself up in a isolated area, has no alternative but to create its own community. There are also, however, many cases of a company deliberately avoiding previously established habitation so that it may govern the affairs of its personnel exactly as it requires.

In this respect Columbia Cellulose is strictly not guilty. On the contrary, it has made every effort to merge itself with Prince Rupert. Its employees have blended into the city's populace to a point where there is no distinction between the two, and their children go to the city's schools, for which the company pays a high percentage of the taxes.

The effect on the city has been one of enormous benefit. Castlegar is fortunate that it is to be the site of an industry governed by such an enlightened public relations policy.

A Costly Repetition

V/HILE it is most conscientious of Health and W Welfare Minister Eric Martin to take time out for a personal tour of investigation through central and northern B.C. in connection with hospital insurance, it raises once more the question of what has happened to the findings of the inquiry board created by the previous government.

At the cost of time and money, this board travelled throughout the province for exactly the same purpose that Mr. Martin now has in mind. After holding 31 hearings in the course of its travels, visiting 39 hospitals, receiving representations from 17 others, and studying an untold number of written submissions, it came up with a 107-page report which is presumably now on the health minister's desk.

It is curious, therefore, that Mr. Martin should feel obliged to learn for himself what the report can already tell him. It is also a little disturbing that the restless subject of hospital insurance is apparently due for some more tossing around.

Pleased as we will be to see Mr. Martin, who is a stranger to most of us, we would be even more pleased if he would inject something firm and permanent into hospital insurance without further delay.

The Black Giant Stirs

IF YOU want proof of the truth of the Biblical teaching that the sins of the fathers are visited unto the children, to the third and fourth generation, take a look at Africa today.

The black grant is stirring with the grievances of centuries in his heart. The last of the continents to win home rule is getting ready to take it. Everything that has happened in Africa for the past three or four hundred years is working in reverse. Even the many good things the white man has done for the black man are now being used as, tools to end white supremacy. And the incredibly bad things being done by that old die-hard Boer, Premier Malan, are boomeranging against all whites deep into the heart of the vast dark contin-

ALAN PATON'S beautiful little novel "Cry the Beloved Coun try," illustrates the tragic paradox of all life. The sins of the white race cause economic conditions which force young negroes into lawlessness. But in Paton's book the victim of the murder is the most enlightened individual in all white South Africa-one man who, had he been allowed to live, might have led the two races into a new road of brotherhood and true! humanity.

You could use that tragedy to illustrate what is going on in the British colony of Kenya right now. There is no part of Africa where the white man has LATELY made such intelligent moves to enable the two races to live in harmony and future equality. Unfortunately, here again are the "sins of the fathers." Back in the twenties remember writing articles on the then-new policy of the British colonial office in Kenya. The white settlers were going in, and getting reat grants of fine land -exactly as our own forefathers did here in Canada and U.S.A. centuries ago. But the Kenya settlers ran into difficulty. To make their land pay they needed cheap labor. But the black men did not like labor. He saw no sense it it. His own needs were simple. He needed few clothes. simple housing, and nature provided his food with no more exertion than in any other hunting-and-gathering society.

The Kenya government of that day ended the difficulty by imposing a heavy "hut tax" on the natives. The only way natives could get enough money to pay the heavy tax was to work for the white man, on the white man's farms.

WE IN North America have no more right to feel superior to the white man in Africa. We had fewer natives to displace-and in the days when our forefathers were replacing them the prevail- homes. ing sentiment in U.S.A. was "the only good Injun is a dead Injun."

The whites in Africa had more populous race to contend with. But above all, they came later in history when the conscience of the whole human race had been greatly sensitized.

The real question in Africa today is how the black man can g real equality in his own country, without having to fight for by the age old methods of war.

Even in 1952, he said, as he looked back from a cosy seat his time machine, business men were guilty under the law if they sold at the same price as one another, or if they sold at differing prices.

"No one could charge or quote the same price as his competition because, if he did, he was guilty of 'conscious parallelism of action. And if a defendant's prices fluctuated with the exigencies of the competitive market, he might land in jail

Moving Ahead With Canada

Prince Rupert Daily News Monday, October 27, 1952 5

ENEDAL

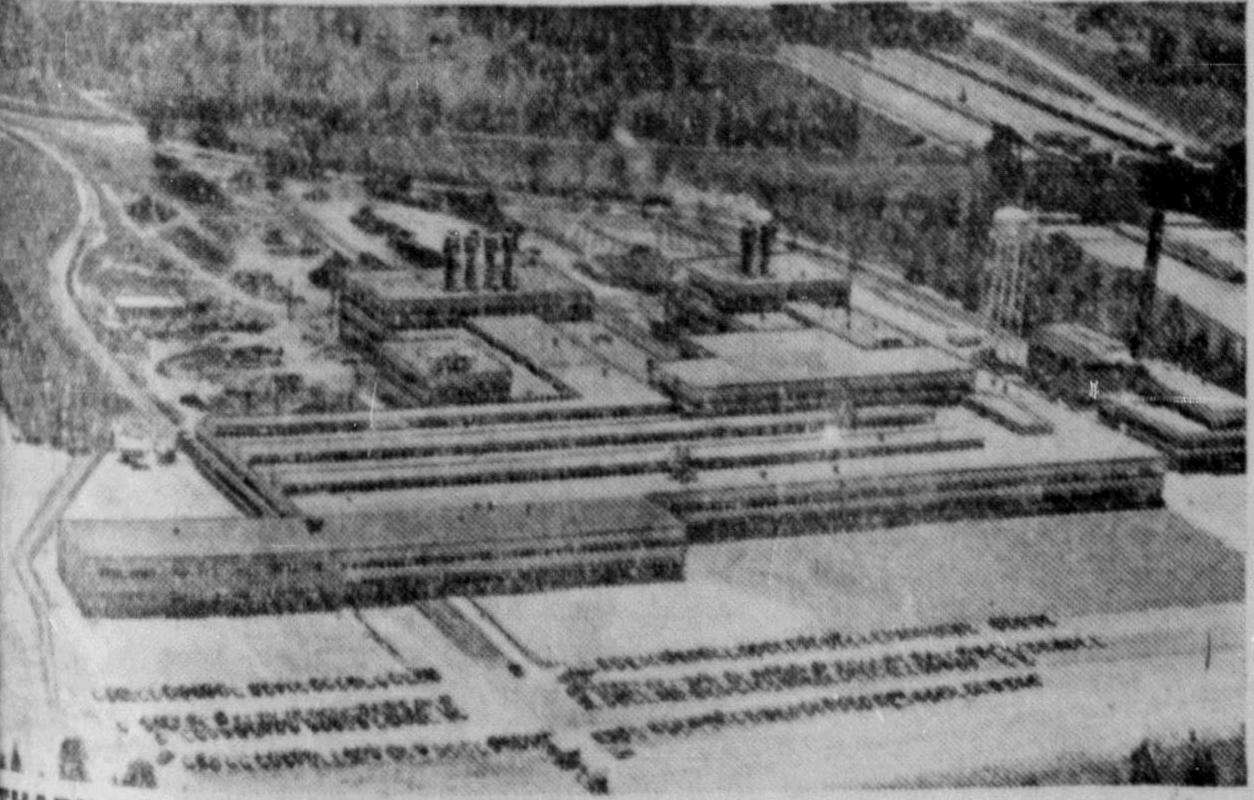

OSHAWA—General Motors of Canada Limited moves ahead with Canada, turning out more and better cars and trucks in the tradition of fine craftsmanship established more than 80 years ago by carriage maker Robert McLaughlin. The plant shown has 50 acres of floor space. In addition a new 17-acre truck plant will be opened in 1953... a new six-acre central parts warehouse was opened in 1951, and other new parts warehouses built or under construction are at Vancouver, Winnipeg, London, Montreal and Moncton.

This new 11-acre plant in Scarborough was opened officially on 16th. In addition, a large plant at Leaside is occupied on defence

WINDSOR—The GM Engine
Producing more engines than every stantive expanding to meet produce.

WINDSOR—The GM Engine Plant moves ahead with Canada. Producing more engines than ever before, the Engine Plant is constantly expanding to meet production demands at Oshawa. It covers 8 acres.

ON-General Motors Diesel Limited moves ahead with Canada. This seven acre ened in 1950 has already announced plans for an 85,000 square foot addition, llenable it to provide the most modern service facilities for locomotives.

MARINES AND GRANTHAM—The Mckinnon Industries move Canada. This vast new foundry, opened in Grantham Township on October 15th, sible the construction of heavy engine components impossible before. Together main plant in the city of St. Catharines, the McKinnon enterprise now has 35 acres fand contracts are being let for additional building covering eight acres.

General Motors builds more cars and trucks in Canada than any other manufacturer... and because of GM's unchallenged leadership in motor vehicles, many people think of GM as only an automotive firm. But there is much more than that to the GM story.

True, GM's largest contribution to Canada's industrial strength is in the vast group of plants in Oshawa, which last year turned out 185,000 cars and trucks. But in London, Ontario, the new plant of General Motors Diesel Limited is building every type of diesel locomotive—quick, efficient switchers, mammoth high-speed road locomotives. In St. Catharines, Ontario, the two plants of The McKinnon Industries Limited turn out varied products from heavy malleable and gray iron custings to small electric motors—Delco motors that power a high percentage of home appliances in Canada. Frigidaire Products of Canada Limited, at Scarborough and Leaside plants, builds world-famous home appliances, as well as commercial refrigeration, air-conditioning and humidity control equipment. In Windsor, the GM Engine Plant builds and tests the power plants for GM's Canadian-built cars and trucks.

Pictured here are representative plants of GM's Canadian divisions. They have been growing impressively—in output, in number of employees, in size of plant...striding ahead with our country. Today GM gives employment to over 20,000 Canadians. And what does GM's great industrial strength mean to any one citizen of Canada? It means more things made at home—less to import and thus more to be shared among ourselves in Canada. In addition to turning out more and better things for Canadians, General Motors plants are also contributing to the nation's defence program and to its expanding export markets. That is our proud story. That is General Motors in Canada.

House Design Competition Opens Nov. 1

A house design competition with awards totalling some $4000 will be open to Canadian architects and student architects alike beginning Nov. 1.

Furpose of the competition is to fully explore the unique characteristics of Douglas fir plywood as a building material," according to the sponsors, the Plywood Manufacturers Association of British Columbia.

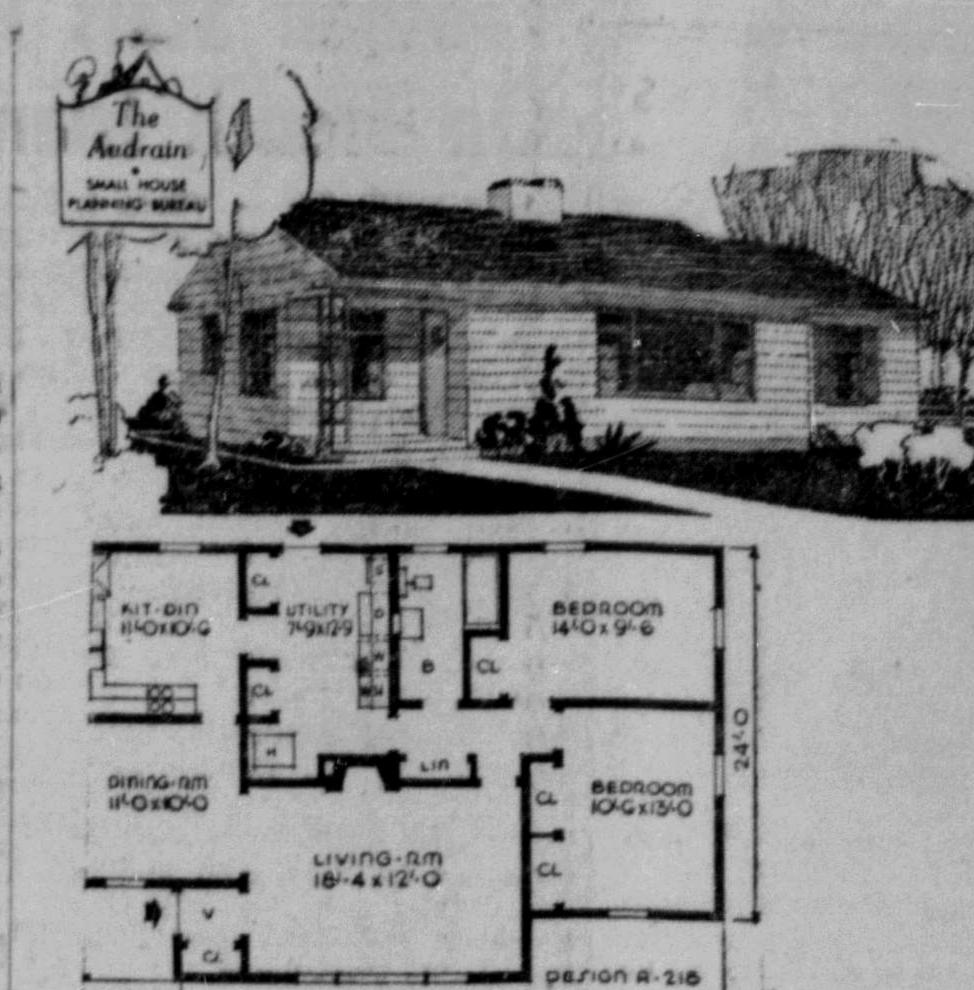

With an eye to bringing this B.C. product to the attention of building designers across the Dominion the plywood group are conducting contests in three areas - Eastern Canada, the Prairies and British Columbia.

First prize in each are is $1000 with $250 second prizes. In addition, special $100 prizes will be given for best designs showing use of plywood in structural, decorative and furnishing appli-

On hand to show citizens through the home were L. C. Eby, founder of the contracting firm, and his sons, Bob, Don and Buck.

Explaining construction to a group of citizens, Bob Eby showed how every bit of space has been utilized to give the owner plenty of cupboard space and clearance.

A high ceiling in the basement also has made it possible for the building of a rumpus room.

With the exception of a small amount of material, all the lumber for the home was purchased from Terrace. To speed construction certain things were

There's plenty of cement imported from the United States, but contractors, if possible, avoid it because of the cost-$1.25 a bag at Vancouver, $1.92 at Edmonton and $2 at Winnipeg.

This compares with $1.29, $1.23 and $1.25 a bag for Canadian cement when available at the respective cities.

The shortage of Canadian cement, termed "serious" everywhere, has temporarily set back private house building. In some ases workers in construction nd allied trades have threatened with layoffs. Construction officials say winter employment is doubtful for at least 6,000 men in Greater Winnipeg and part of another 4,000 at Edmonton.

The cement is needed in October and November. Otherwise cold weather interferes with pouring.

An expert riding team from the famous law-enforcement body is currently playing the Los Angeles horse show. Between performances, the Mounties have had a chance to tour the studios and see how movies are made.

The leader of the group, Inspector A. S. McNeil of Regina, said there is considerable difference between the Mounties of the movies and those in real life. "There have been some fine pictures about the service," he said. "But most of them have certain things that any Mountie would know were false. There is one thing that always rankles me. The Mountie in movies is generally shown with long sideburns and hair that looks like a beaver-hut. The fact is that we require regular haircuts, even in the north country. Most Mounties have a crew cut."

LESS GUNFIRE PLEASE

McNeil also mentioned that Mounties snicker at films about them that show "gun play all over the place and bodies falling out of every closet."

"The fact is that Mountie seldem uses his gun. In Canada, we have strict control of the possession of firearms. They have to be registered and recorded every time they are bought and sold. Violations are punished severely.

'We also have the lash to punoffences such as armed robbery. A criminal fears the lash while he may not worry about a prison sentence."

The inspctor brought out a disillusioning fact: few Mounties ride horses any more.

"You'll find them on horseback in the national parks," he explained. "Also some patrol near the parliament buildings and other points of interest so the tourists won't be disappointed."
