BOTH SIDES BENDING EFFORTS IN STRIKE MILITARY BEING CALLED OUT TO PROTECT DOCKS: MILLION MORE STRIKERS

Labor is Predicting That Strike Will be Settled Early Next Week; Hoodlums Smashing Bus Engines

Transportation improved in London and under-ground railway needs no help; looting of stores at Glasgow

BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS ON BUSES

Government claims men are trickling back to work and others asking guarantees of police protection

LONDON, May 7.—Britain went into the fourth day of the general strike with both sides standing pat but guarded predictions were made in labor quarters that the crisis might be passed next week. No indications are given as to what this move will be but it is influenced probably by the fact that Premier Sir John Lomax and J. H. Thomas, Labor leader, have been in conference.

In the meantime the general public are taking the situation with good humor although some apprehension is felt that the beer supply may fail.

The government claims that the workers are trickling back to work or making overtures for protection if they should return and volunteers for the necessary services are increasing.

London underground railways are already posting signs: "No Help Wanted," and transportation as a general rule has improved considerably, one railroad having run 500 trains yesterday. Considerable confusion is developing in vehicular traffic in London and motor buses appeared yesterday with barbed wire entanglements on the hoods in answer to hoodlums who have been stopping buses, uncovering the engines and smashing them with sledgehammers and stones.

The General Omnibus Company reported eighty vehicles damaged yesterday, 47 of which were damaged in street disturbances. Heavy police protection is afforded today. Meantime business is almost at a standstill and it is claimed by the chamber of commerce that the strike is causing a loss of $600 a minute to the country's trade.

Arrests at Glasgow

GLASGOW, May 7.—The east side of the city in the vicinity of the tram stations was the scene of disorders last night, a number of persons being injured and 67 arrests made when the rioters attempted to eject volunteer tram workers who were housed in the depots. Amid showers of stones, bottles and other missiles, the police charged, using batons with effect.

Stores Looted

Looting of stores is reported during the disorders at Edinburgh where the disturbances were renewed, the mobs stoning the houses. The police charged, making several arrests.

Similar disorders broke out at Middlesborough, England, when attempts were made to stop passenger trains, the station master and police sergeant being badly injured.

ROYAL HOTEL COMPANY IS INCORPORATED WITH A CAPITAL OF $10,000

LONDON, May 7.—The Government has decided to increase the police force from 30,000 to 50,000 men at once. The recruiting of 50,000 special constables will proceed as quickly as possible.

PAT HANLEY IS TO BE HANGED

Convicted of Murder of Nurse Neilson Over Year Ago and Must Pay Penalty

NOT IN GOOD HEALTH

Had Nothing to Say and Seemed to be Prepared for Verdict and Sentence

NELSON, May 7.—Placed on trial for the third time on a charge of murdering Mildred Neilson, a nurse in the Traill Hospital on February 6, 1925, Pat Hanley, a Trall insurance man, was found guilty by a jury late yesterday afternoon and sentenced by Mr. Justice J. A. McDonald to be hanged on August 2 next.

Hanley received the verdict calmly and when asked if he had anything to say, replied "Nothing, My Lord."

Two previous trials resulted in disagreement of the jury in each case.

Convicted of murder and admitted by all aliens to be now in perfect mental health, Hanley seemed prepared for the verdict and gave not a quiver or any hint of collapse such as that which featured former trials. After the death sentence had been pronounced, he trotted down the little stairway to the floor below to be taken to the provincial jail.

NO SUBSTANTIAL BUDGET CHANGES ARE TO BE MADE

OTTAWA, May 7.—Hon. J. A. Robb, minister of finance, in answer to a question informed Hon. Arthur Meighen in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that no substantial changes would be made in the budget from the form in which it was first brought down.

Stewart Mine Subject of Litigation in Which Large Sum is Claimed

W. W. Rush and others issue writ against ten defendants including Attorney General Manson and Tacoma Smelter

VANCOUVER, May 7.—Claiming $600,000 "actual and punitive damages" in respect of the exploitation of the Rush Columbia silver-lead mine in the Stewart district, W. W. Rush of Stewart and Arthur L. Bagg, a fruit grower of Oliver, have issued a writ out of the Supreme Court against ten defendants including Attorney-General Manson and the American Smelting & Refining Company of Tacoma.

With the writ was filed a long statement of claim, alleging that plaintiffs had been victims of conspiracy which prevented Colonel A. L. Jacobs, a retired army officer; Arthur Edatoria; Colonel R. D. Davies, a former member of the Soldier's Slingsby, a retired naval officer; Settlement Board of Vancouver; Jock Brown Shaw, a Dominion Government civil engineer; Fred motor of Seattle from securing G. Elliott, a lawyer, all of Victoria possession of the property.

Proposal to Use Turkeys as a Means of Preventing the Spread of Grasshoppers Interior B.C.

VICTORIA, May 7.—Thousands of turkeys will be used to eat the grasshoppers which threaten serious damage to the crops in the interior of British Columbia, if plans suggested to the department of agriculture by the B.C. Poultrymen's Association are approved.

The association proposes that the government should purchase flocks of turkeys in Alberta, which will be loosed under supervision on the ranges of the interior where the insects are now breeding. The birds would be sold to farmers in the infested districts.

Japanese Immigration and the Method of Dealing with Oriental Problem as it Affects Canadians

Address by Paul H. Clyde Formerly of Victoria, B.C., and Now Instructor in European History, Before the Ohio State University

The question of Japanese immigration, so far as the Pacific coast of the United States is concerned, was settled by the passage of the so-called Exclusion Law. The general question of international relations raised by that controversy has by no means been settled, even granting that immigration is a domestic matter to be settled by each country according to its own desires. The point of interest in this problem has simply been shifted and now rests on the northern Pacific coast in the province of British Columbia.

The attitude of the people of British Columbia in regard to all oriental immigration has been settled by resolution of the legislature more than once, the last time being on December 17, 1924, when it was the unanimous opinion of the House that the province is utterly opposed to further influx of Orientals into British Columbia; that the field of industrial and commercial activities of all Orientals in Canada, and particularly in British Columbia, should be restricted by legislation; and that the government of the Dominion of Canada be asked to refuse adhesion on the part of Canada to any treaties or international obligations having the effect of limiting the power of the provinces to regulate social and industrial activities within their boundaries, and that the Dominion government be also requested to take steps to denounce all treaties so far as they have the effect of depriving the Dominion of the power of regulating, controlling or prohibiting Asiatic immigration.

Successful Efforts

Chinese entering Canada were for long subjected to a head tax starting at $50, and eventually raised to $500 before the Chinese Immigration Act of 1923 was passed, excluding Chinese immigration altogether, excepting the common exemption classes. The case of East Indian immigration is effectively checked by a regulation which requires an immigrant to travel by direct route from the country of his origin.

As there is no passenger service direct between India and Canada it is impossible for subjects of Britain's Indian Empire to comply with the act. Japanese immigration is regulated under a Gentlemen's Agreement similar to that which existed between the governments at Washington and Tokio and it is in connection with the alleged ineffectual operation of this agreement that the problem as viewed by British Columbia has arisen.

Traditional Policy

The Canadian policy on the subject of immigration may be best understood if considered in relation to the national problems of the Dominion which are not capable of easy solution. Canada is still in her national infancy and has yet to acquire the background and traditions which establish national types. The briefness of her history, the fact

GOVERNMENT IS SUSTAINED ON APPEAL VOTE

House of Commons Refuses to Take Action to Unseat Peace River Member

OTTAWA, May 7.—Sustaining the ruling by speaker Lemieux, the House of Commons yesterday declined to receive a petition of J. A. Collins asking for the unseating of D. M. Kennedy, Progressive member for Peace River, by a vote of 115 to 107, the vote following strict party lines. Conservatives voted for receiving the petition and all others against it.

The speaker based his decision on the ground that Parliament, under the Controversy Elections Act, delegated its powers to the courts.

Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative member for Calgary, who presented the petition, immediately appealed against the ruling of the speaker in order that "future generations may realize the value of the petition." The House then divided with the result shown.

No Material Changes Made In Budget.

The minister of finance announced yesterday in parliament that no material changes would be made in the budget from the proposals first made when it was brought down. This is along the line of established practice and is the only reasonable one. The budget changes should be thought out so well in advance that no changes should be necessary once it is made public. If other action is taken it is clear that pressure will be brought to bear to change every budget between the time it is announced and the time it is adopted by parliament.

The provisions of the budget, unless otherwise stated, come into effect the day the speech is delivered in the House of Commons. That is to prevent manipulation or hedging. Sometimes it is a little difficult to make changes rapidly but on the whole the provision is a wise one and is adopted by practically all governments where responsible government obtains.

Since the delivery of the budget speech, efforts have been made to induce the government to relinquish the provision reducing the duty on automobiles. This has been consistently refused. It is to be supposed that the change was decided on by the whole cabinet before it was announced and that all the eventualities were well considered. It also was to be anticipated that there would be a strong protest and possibly a demonstration such as has occurred in the east for the purpose of influencing their decision. That there will be no changes in this policy seems clear from the answer of the finance minister to the leader of the opposition when he said there would be no material changes in the budget.

Ruth's Homers More Interesting Than Strike.

To a great many people today the making of a home run by Babe Ruth or the winning of a cup-tie football match is much more interesting than news of the big general strike in Great Britain which is shaking the very foundations of that country and threatens to establish a precedent which may be followed elsewhere. The solidarity of labor as a world force is being shown whether the strike succeeds or fails. The indications from the strike are that the present social system is in a state of flux and it would be a wise prophet who could predict what changes may take place in the next twenty or thirty years. By that time a new and, let us hope, a better educated generation will have taken charge of affairs all over the world. What they will do will depend to a large extent on what the present generation does. In the scheme of evolution one move follows another in a natural way and the evolution of the social system will take time, a much longer time than labor men generally think. Passing laws and changing governments or systems does not mean much unless the race is trained in self-government, the first essential in any democracy.

Task Sometimes Seems Hopeless.

When it is seen what success is attained in the government of a village or town or city or province by a democracy, the task of inculcating in the face those principles necessary in order to make them fit to properly govern themselves seems almost hopeless. Yet to see what are the possibilities, we have to look backward and see what progress has already been made and we then feel that in time, perhaps, a millenial period may develop when laws will be just without being oppressive and will be enforced without fear or favor and when all political bias in electors will be wiped away and every proposal will be considered on its merits. Today self-interest is paramount. Not only are individuals bribed but so are communities and that with their own money. Men and women vote as their self-interest dictates. This applies to labor men just as much as to others for all have the same human weaknesses, the same prejudices and inclinations and can be bribed in a similar manner.

Some people look to religion to change all that and others look to social changes and education. Probably a combination of all forces will be necessary to attain results.

that Federation was only accomplished in the sixties of the last century, a small population scattered over an immense territory, all these have added to the problems of nation building. Furthermore the Dominion has been forced to proceed with caution, for in addition to its lack of a national background of any considerable age, the basic population is not homogeneous and the national type not standardized as a result of two original stocks, French and English.

Canadian policy has sought to obtain settlers from these races but comparatively few French have migrated to Canada since the days of early colonial settlement. Generally speaking Anglo-Saxon stock, British and American settlers have been most welcome by the Dominion because a common cultural background and similar experience in the development of popular institutions made assimilation easy. From continental Europe Canada has welcomed representatives of the Nordic races because of similar origins to those of the Anglo-Saxon, but with a shifting of the sources of European immigration from the north to the south the process of absorption has become less simple. At various times the Dominion has expended money almost lavishly in the pursuit of this policy with the object of stimulating immigration. The year 1913 witnessed the great influx of settlers when more than 400,000 entered the Dominion. Canada spent during the thirteen years preceding 1913 $36,838,336 promoting immigration and made a free gift of 70,000,000 acres of the finest of arable land to the new settlers.

Not Encouraged Asiatics

Canada has never sought to encourage Asiatic immigration. Nevertheless, immigrants have been entering the Dominion from China for nearly a hundred years and from Japan for something less than half that time. So far as the personal life and conduct of these settlers is concerned no problem has arisen. The Asiatic in Canada has shown himself to be possessed of such virtues as frugality, industry, thrift and sobriety. He has established himself as in no sense inferior to the Occidental in either intelligence or integrity. For the most part he lives in conditions which are new and strange to him, yet he respects and observes the law even when that law is distasteful and irritating to him. Furthermore his services to the nation were not lacking in time of war, when he gave freely of manpower and money.

White intelligent Canadian opinion is of one mind on this point, it is less easy to measure on the subject of future policy respecting the admittance of Oriental settlers. There appears to be growing sentiment that the barriers of race, color, language and tradition have proved and are likely to prove insurmountable. The Asiatic has not assimilated with the Canadian and this fact is compelling careful consideration of the effect on the national life of admitting those who through proving unassimilable will naturally expect ultimate and full recognition as citizens for themselves and their children.

Attitude of Anxiety

The increasing Oriental population in British Columbia has created among Canadians an attitude of anxiety. It is the belief that this influx should never be permitted to reach proportions that would endanger the national type or even go so far as to create a problem, the solution of which would probably be to occasion a grave international misunderstanding. Such Canadian opinion as has been expressed publicly has stressed the fact that there is no suggestion in Canada's policy that Western institutions are superior to those of the East. It is a question of institutions that are widely different. The Canadian feels that he is the trustee of a kind of civilization that is adapted to his needs. When he becomes convinced therefore that any group or groups of immigrants cannot become a harmonious part of his form of life, he believes that influx must stop.

The growth of this attitude on the part of Canadians explains the increasing restrictions to which Oriental immigration has been subjected.

Canadian-Japanese Diplomacy

The diplomatic history of Japanese immigration to Canada dates back to July 16, 1894, when Great Britain and Japan signed a treaty of commerce and navigation which granted to the subjects of either party "full liberty to enter, travel and reside in any part of the dominions and possessions of the other contracting party." This treaty did not apply to Canada except upon notice being given by the British government within two years. On August 6, 1895, the Canadian government passed an Order in Council stating that it desired certain additional stipulations relative to Japanese immigration and in February, 1896, the Japanese government agreed to the requests of the Dominion. These negotiations came to nothing, however, for in July, 1896, the Canadian authorities decided not to adhere to the treaty of 1894 because of difficulties arising in connection with the "most-favored-nation" clause. In June, 1905, the Canadian government announced that obstacles that had prevented its acceding to the treaty of 1894 had been removed and on September 25 of that year passed an Order in Council stating that Canada would adhere to the Japanese treaty of 1894 "absolutely and without reserve." Following the signing of a supplementary convention by the British and Japanese governments in January, 1906, which extended the treaty of 1894 to Canada, it was approved by the Canadian parliament in an act of January 30, 1907.

Gentlemen's Agreement

A marked increase in Japanese immigration to Canada during the first ten months of 1907 caused the federal administration no little anxiety and resulted in the visit of the Canadian Minister of Labor to Tokyo to seek a diplomatic adjustment of the problem. The negotiations resulted in a settlement, satisfactory, for the time being at least, to both parties, for the Japanese government agreed not to insist upon its full rights under the treaty and pledged itself to take efficient means to restrict emigration to Canada. The regulations under which this new form of restriction was to become operative provided that passports should be issued only to (1) Japanese previously residents of Canada, and their wives and children, (2) domestic and agricultural laborers, the number of which should not exceed 100 annually and (3) contract emigrants.

Further negotiations followed between the two countries and on April 3, 1911, a new treaty of commerce and navigation was signed by Great Britain and Japan. This time Canada expressed its willingness to adhere to the treaty, subject to the proviso that it should not be deemed to repeal any provisions of the Immigration Act of 1910. This act, while not necessarily discriminatory did give the Governor-General power to exclude any particular racial group. Japan took the view that since the act provided for the exclusion of any aliens, including those from other parts of the British Empire itself, that no discrimination would be made against Japanese subjects. On this basis Canada in 1913 acceded to the treaty of 1911. Japan thereupon declared that the government were fully prepared to maintain with equal effectiveness the limitation and control which they have since 1908 exercised in the regulation of emigration from Japan to Canada.

Heated Debate

Opposition to this settlement was expressed in the Canadian parliament in May, 1922, when a heated debate resulted in the adoption of a resolution that the government should "take immediate action with a view to securing the effective restriction of future Asiatic immigration." The resolution in its original form used the word "exclusion" instead of "effective restriction," and the modified term was substituted at the suggestion of the government. Negotiations with the Japanese government were opened as a result of this resolution and correspondence was laid before the Canadian House of Commons in March, 1924, revealing that the Gentlemen's Agreement had been revised so that the number of Japanese household servants and agricultural laborers entering Canada annually was reduced from 400 to 150.

CROOK MELODRAMA IS UNHOLY THREE WESTHOLME TONIGHT

Lon Chaney is the Sympathetic Heavy and Mae Busch has the Leading Feminine Role

Tod Browning's "The Unholy Three," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is to be seen at the Westholme tonight and tomorrow.

This picture is said to be something entirely new in the way of crook melodramas.

It concerns the adventures of a trio of crooks who leave a lime museum and during their criminal operations give rise to a romance that lends a great quantity of color to the plot.

It is a film adaptation of C. A. Robbins' story and has a peculiar twist that has never been seen in any other play of this type.

Tod Browning, who enjoys the reputation of being the most successful underworld film director in the business was responsible for the direction of this picture. Browning has been directing crook films for many years, one of his outstanding productions of that kind being "Outside the Law."

Leading Parts

Mae Busch, who has done such excellent work in pictures during the last few years notably "Bread" and "The Christian" and who is now a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player portrays the leading feminine role—an Irish-American girl who is in league with the underworld band.

Lon Chaney, the screen's greatest make-up artist and character man, is the leader of the crook trio and appears in the role of a sympathetic heavy.

Hecate Straits Towing Co.'s Lorne was in port this morning for oil and provisions and left for Captain's Cove where she will pick up a couple of Davis rafts of logs she recently brought from Logan Inlet and take them on to Powell River. The company's other tug Cape Scott is at present engaged in towing logs between Logan Inlet and Vancouver. The Lorne before arriving here today, had been held up four or five days at Logan Inlet on account of rough weather.

PRESENTATION MADE REV. WALTER ALLEN

Pair of Gold Cuff Links Given to Clergyman Who is Leaving Next Week

At St. Peter's Church Wednesday evening the teachers and pupils gathered to make a presentation to Rev. Walter Allen, who has been making frequent visits to the school since the time he has been here and has given some very helpful addresses to the children. Acting on their behalf, the superintendent, W. Skinner, handed Mr. Allen a pair of native silver cuff links as a mark of their appreciation of his services.

Mr. Allen suitably replied and gave a very instructive address to the young folks present.

Mr. Allen who is leaving next week, is to be the guest of honor at a farewell gathering in the Cathedral Hall Monday evening.

PILCHARD FISH REDUCTION IS VERY POPULAR

Seventeen Plants to be Operated on West Coast of Vancouver Island this Year

VICTORIA, May 7.—No less than seventeen pilchard fish reduction plants will be operated on the west coast of Vancouver Island this year, as compared with only seven last year.

Expansion of British Columbia's latest development in the fishing industry this year will add millions of dollars to the harvest from the sea. Pilchard fishing was first introduced in British Columbia waters in 1925. The catch the first year was valued at $441,555. This amount was derived from the following output: oil, 495,653 gallons, 874,636; meal, 2,083 tons, 881,383; canned, 37,182 cases $188,526.

This one shown here is a Gruen at $60.00, but we have others in less expensive makes which are good timekeepers at $35.00, $25.00, $15.00.

Also we have a good girl's watch for $10.00.

years following 1921, that is, to March 31, 1924, the immigration of Japanese was 3,288, or 429 annually. By far the greater number of these remained in British Columbia. During the same three years but including to the end of 1924, Japanese born in the Pacific Coast Province numbered 2,680, while deaths approximated 500.

In British Columbia the Japanese are engaged chiefly in the fishing industry, in market gardening, in the logging camps, and saw-mills, while in the cities they have centred their attention on tailoring and household service. Their connection with the fishing industry has been the occasion of the most outspoken opposition, for it has been claimed that their presence brought about the almost total exclusion of both whites and Indians. This problem is now taken care of by a gradual annual reduction in the percentage of licenses granted to Japanese, a measure which came into force two years ago.

Sought Amendment

Although popular opposition to the Japanese has not been confined to the past few years, it assumed concrete form in November, 1921, when the British Columbia Legislature requested the amendment of the Immigration Act so as to exclude Asiatics. In May the following year took place in the House of Commons the debates and the adoption of the resolution already referred to. Two years later the amended application of the Gentlemen's Agreement was made effective, limiting the number of Japanese entering Canada to 150 annually. While perhaps meeting in large measure the wishes of the provinces other than British Columbia, this measure fell far short of the action desired on the Pacific coast and on December 17, 1924, the Legislature again expressed itself in the resolution stated in the opening paragraphs of this paper. If the demands of that resolution are to be regarded as something more than political fireworks (and it would seem that they are, for the action of the Legislature was unanimous), it means that the people of British Columbia have taken a position identical to the vigorous political group in California which was to be satisfied with nothing short of total exclusion. Not only has the Province put itself on record as utterly opposed to further influx of Orientals, but also it favors legislation which shall be unmistakably of a discriminatory nature in that the industrial and commercial activities of Orientals in Canada should be restricted.

Legislature Tested

When the application of such a policy is again brought forward, as it undoubtedly will be in view of the growing anti-Oriental sentiment in British Columbia, there will arise the delicate but inevitable question of how this policy is to be reconciled with the protection afforded to Japanese (aliens) by the treaty of 1911, which places them "in all respects on the same footing as native subjects" in regard to travel and residence, and which gives them most-favored-nation treatment in the acquisition of movable and immovable property upon condition of reciprocity. Legislation of this type was tested in the courts in 1923 when the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council declared invalid a British Columbia statute which declared that in all government contracts, leases and concessions, no Chinese or Japanese should be employed. This judgment was given on the ground that the statute violated the treaty of 1911.

British Columbia legislators will probably find support for their policy toward the Asiatic, and now in particular against the Japanese, in the passage of the Exclusion Law of May, 1924. It is doubtless true that the Provincial Legislature was influenced by that act when it formulated its resolution to the Dominion Government on December 17, 1924.

Exclusion Land

Furthermore there is little reason to question the statement that a considerable section of the electorate would readily

German Professor Advocated

Less Clothing and Necks

Bare Like Women's

Women today are hygienically and artistically dressed, while men are the worst dressed animals on earth, according to

Ernest Freidberger, Professor of Hygiene at the University of Greifswald. The present fashion of women's clothing bares the throat, allows of free circulation of air, and relieves the body from pressure; therefore a number of illnesses to which women previously were inclined have practically disappeared. Men are continually overdressed, and their skin is deprived of the air

it requires. A dog, for instance, even in winter, carries less than 2 per cent of its weight as hair men sometimes wear clothing amounting to a tenth of their weight. Men's fashions, says the Professor, are set in London; they are sometimes attractive but are intended for a climate severer than is found in most parts of Europe and America.

Professor Freidberger proposes that men wear light tropical suits, short trousers or knickerbockers, if possible bare legs and arms, and do without a collar and tie, which are, in his opinion, antiquated and un-healthful. Such clothing should be worn, in all but the coldest weather. It would seem that the Professor has been influenced in his choice by the costume of the Bavarian and Tyrolese mountainaineers or the youthful Wander-vogel who, garbed approximately as he describes, wander in large numbers through Germany and certainly present all the appearances of robust health.

When you see an elderly man eating his dinner with the relish and enjoyment of a school boy, watch him help himself to Mustard. If it is not on the table, he will very quickly ask for it.

Those who acquire the habit of eating Mustard—of keeping their digestion keen and their appetite young—show a decided preference for freshly mixed Mustard.
