Asquith of Oxford Ouits Leadership of Liberal Party

loted British statesman for many years took prominent part in affairs of Empire --- is 74 years of age

LONDON, October 15 .- Lord Asquith of Oxford resigned the leadership of day tearing a big hole in her hull un-Liberal party in Great Britain yesterday. He recently was engaged in a ther bitter controversy with former Premier David Lloyd George, once his folwer and who later took the Premiership from him. The dispute was over atters of policy within the party but the split between the two was considered ore or less healed lately. . Lloyd George will undoubtedly be an aspirant for the aderable and, while he enjoys a large measure of popularity, it is very quesenable whether he will suit many of the party leaders. It is possible that old publes may break out again but it is also possible that unity in the party may see again be brought about with a new leader.

Fuller details of the conversations between Germany and France are now available through the British newspapers arriving. One of the best accounts is that given in the Manchester Guardian which says:

In a private conversation held at a small village not far from Geneva, M. (6) The satisfaction of the remaining exigencies of France in the matter of disarmament and Germany's consent to a rather stricter League control than she was obliged to admit.

But this is only the bald skeleton. Germany's claim, which is now admitted in principle by M. Briand, is based not only on the spirit and purpose of Locarno, but upon article 431 of the Versailles Treaty. That article declares ceived, is formal and explicit. B.C. SYSTEM A MODEL TO OTHER PROVINCES.

The British Columbia financial system is looked upon as a model to be used as a standard by others. Alberta is investigating it and will use a good many of its features, it is announced. Yet it is not perfect and never will be although doubtless it will be improved from time to time as experience proves one or another plan better.

Just now the system of taxation in B.C. is under review. For years we have asked for the abolition of the personal property tax. It is proposed to substitute a turnover tax and this also seems to have its objections. The proposal was set out in full in a letter to the Board of Trade recently and also in another received by the local tax collector. Anyone interested should study those docu-

Many people are so afraid of a junction between Canada and the United States that they are always scanning Canadian politics for signs of the tendency. So it is natural that the general election, just over, should be probed for this purpose. Of course it was not a general election issue that bore on this dread of "losing" Canada. # SCHOOL BOARD

REQUEST MADE THAT CHILDREN ON FOURTH AND FIFTH AVENUES WEST BE SENT TO BORDEN STREET

A delegation consisting of A. Haines, Mrs. H. J. Bradbury and Mrs. W. G. Hughes appeared before the school board last night with the request that resident on Fourth and Fifth Avenues just east of Fulton Street to Booth Memorial School instead of Borden St. School be reconsidered.

It was stated by Mr. Haines that Borden Street school, which they had been previously attending, was the logical school for the children of the particular section of town referred to. To go to Booth School there was a walk of ten blocks as compared with three blocks to Borden. In the rainy weather of winter the difference meant a great

Mrs. Bradbury, in voicing her objection, suggested that the board might open the Section Two school to relieve the congestion at Borden Street. This would be preferable to opening the room in the United Church which she had heard was poorly lighted and damp. As for the walk to Booth School, Mrs. Bradbury stated that on rainy days it was necessary to change her clothes right through. The walk tool felt that if it was the trustees' own children something would be done about it.

It would only be for a year anyway "should Labor rule?" as the board intended to have another room ready for operation in Borden Street next year.

Principal Hartness stated that the children referred to were in one of the best rooms in Booth School. As for took an adult only 25 minutes to walk right from Borden Street to Booth stated that, after Christmas, it would be a one grade room.

Mrs. Bradbury's active part in the discussion drew the remark from Trustee Rochester that she should run for the school board. Mrs. Bradbury was not so sure that she wished to take on those responsibilities.

The delegation retired when Chairman Rochester gave assurance that the board would go into the matter and give such relief as was possible.

dents were returned. An unprecedented political situation confronted Great Britain. 'No party had the necessary majority to form a government. Labor was knocking at the door as the second strongest party.

With characteristic composure Asquith met the new crisis and on January 17. 1924, he announced that Liberals would support the Labor vote of no confidence in the Baldwin government. Baldwin resigned. Labor was inducted to power and the two-century precedent of England's two-party system was destroyed. Thus at the age of 72 Asquith met another great crisis and dealt with it with the vigorous fresh viewpoint of the youth who had entered the House of Commons nearly 40 years before.

START IN LIFE

Asquith started life with no advantages of fortune. He was born on September 12, 1852 of a middle-class, Nonconformist Yorkshire family. His father died when he was eight and the boy went to London to school. At school he won prize after prize. Then two scholaarships to Balliol College came his way. At Oxford he developed as an orator, and like Lords Curzon, Grey and Milner belonged to the famous Oxford intellectual clique influenced by Jowett. Young Asquith made no profession toward athletics but was more human than John Morley, who never knew any physical recreation but walking. Asquith played quoits. In later l'fe golf was his recreation.

In 1876 Asquith was admitted to the
