Tang in the Air Reminds Us of Winter.

The last two days, with its pleasant crispness, reminds us that winter is coming and will be here soon. The question posed celebration should have three Eastern Canada. then is how are we going to spend our time? What shall we do during the dull damp days for exercise and recreation? what way shall we develop intellectually and physically and what will be the nature of the social activities that we shall enjoy? [ With all these questions and many others we are met at this time of year.

It is well to have some definite plans in view and not to depend upon the impulse of the moment, which really means ada is joining together in a big birthdrifting. A drifter may be lucky and drift into good company and a good line of activities, but the chances are against such a result. The tendency is to drift into a life of useless light amusement, if not worse. The wise person is the one who at this time of year lays plans for the winter and tries to follow them out. A purpose is just as desirable in the recreational hours as in those devoted to earning a living.

Sports Will Occupy Some of the Tme.

With a great many, especially the young people, sports and winter games will occupy a good proportion of the spare time. They will engage in such games as basketball, badminton, gymnasium stunts, hiking and billiards. The difficulty is that more people cannot play.

The tendency in this northern latitude with its long evenings and spells of damp weather is to get fat and lazy in winter. To offset this indoor sports are desirable wherever possible.

Badminton Promises To Become Popular.

Last year badminton had almost replaced basketball as a child under 10, of the family in the hours spent among the mountains of popular indoor sport and the promise is that its popularity will community with the longest record of Portland Canal and Observatory Inlet me mcreased this coming winter. There are few as healthful games as this that can be played without much made irrespective of class, creed or terial for a book on the islands of preparation and without much expense. The chief difficulty color. is that no provision is made for spectators at the various halls devoted to it.

Doubtfull Advantage of Spectators.

There is a doubtful advantage in having spectators, many think. Young people today want to be playing to a gallery all the time and forget the sport in the desire to please the spec- cial capitals, to be breadcast locally, on the Prince Charles for Skidegate. tators. There has been no gallery. Spectators have been conspicuous by their absence, yet the game has flourished and large numbers have benefited from taking part in it.

It is to be hoped that during the coming winter this and if possible at the same hour, so that and other aids to navigation. The other sports will be carried on, that basketball will be revived and that possibly other sports will be initiated.

On reflection, "Mr. Higginson admitted that it might have been the elephant's fondness for him which had been the cause of him taking up the pursuit of the profession of agriculture to replenish his depleted purse.

Tilly or Myrtle

Camped in the jungle near Cranbrook about a month ago, life looked fair to the industrious pair. They had a cabin near a creek which swarmed with fish; chickens and corn on the cob were a commonplace item! on the daily menu and a large case of tomatoes put the crowning touch on their joy. This was until Tilly came along. Or it may have been Myrtle. The pariners are not sure which of the twain it might have been, because the animal answered to hone of the names they called
