German Man-Wife Journalist Team Tours Canada to Debunk Travel Folder Stories

A German man and wife free-lance journalist team currently on a six-month tour of Canada say this country is the "foremost land of opportunity."
But Mr. and Mrs. Vitalis Pantenburg of Cologne, who stopped briefly in Prince Rupert yesterday en route to Kitimat and Kemano Bay, deplore the practice of transportation companies who paint "too rosy" a picture of Canada.
Many of the pamphlets put out by shipping companies lead us to believe that immigrants can pick dollars off the street in this country," said Mr. Pantenburg last night in an interview at the home of Hugo Kraupner, city business man.
"It is our intention to illustrate to the people in West Germany by our articles in newspapers and magazines, radio lectures and public meetings just what Canada is like."
"I mean," Mr. Pantenburg added hastily with a grin, "what we can see of this huge country in our short trip of six months."
The Pantenburgs, both authors of many literary works in Germany, are widely travelled. They are in Canada under a special permit of the Department of External Affairs.
They are making their cross-country tour by car, a four-cylinder German-made Ford, followed by a trailer.
The car they left in Vancouver, arriving here by plane yesterday. Last night they left by boat for the site of the new Alcan project where they expect to stay for a few days.
Their trailer is at Edmonton, from where they made the circuit of the Alaska highway, returning to Prince George via the new Hart highway, then to Vancouver.

NO ACTS OF VANDALISM REPORTED

City Celebrates Witches' Night Safely and Sanely

The youth of Prince Rupert received praise from all sources today for the safe, sane celebration of Hallowe'en.

There were no reports of vandalism. The fire department was not called out all night. The ambulance remained in readiness without receiving a call.
No one was taken to hospital and the police did not have to arrest one juvenile.
Only activity at the police station concerned arrest of two men on charges of over-imbibing and two others for selling liquor.

Otherwise the city celebrated happily with dozens of parties and dances.
BONFIRES
The Kinsmen Club bonfires were a huge success. As one member said: "There were so many kids, I don't know what happened. All I know is we lit off a lot of rockets and aerial bombs and still they clambered for more."
Most noticeable sign that Hallowe'en had been enjoyed by the young citizens were the soap-marked windows all along Third Avenue and many places on Second.

St. Laurent and the six-year-old boy were uninjured. There were no reports of other persons watching in Central Park, in Burnaby.
The sky rocket exploding over the unsuspecting woman's head and penetrated to her skull.
The woman died on arrival at the hospital. She was Mrs. George Amand, 28, of Hull, Que., pins the badge on his lapel. At right is Allan L. Woodrow of Toronto, who presided at the meeting.

At one time during the fire-cracker lighting stage in the downtown section, one RCMP constable spotted two boys soaping a window. He suggested they clean it off, and to his surprise they agreed.
Slightly taken aback by their willingness, he drove them to the police station where he obtained a bucket of hot water and cloths and returned to the scene to watch the boys clean the window.
Rockets, bombs and fire-crackers of all shape and sizes were set off from early evening until early this morning.
Window-washing boys had a busy and profitable day today.

The WEATHERMAN Says

Synopsis
Storms and gales are developing on the north coast. These strong winds herald the approach of an active Pacific storm. Rain will spread slowly southward along the British Columbia coast today, reaching the lower mainland early tomorrow. Cloudiness will decrease throughout the interior today but will return tomorrow as the storm moves inland. Temperatures will be somewhat warmer tonight in most regions, with little change expected in maximums tomorrow.

Forecast
Gale warning in effect.
Rain today, cloudy with showers tonight and Sunday. Little change in temperature. Wind southeast 20, except 35 in exposed areas, shifting to southwest 25 by evening. Low tonight and high tomorrow at Port Hardy, Sandspit and Prince Rupert, 40 and 50.

LIKES B.C.
Mrs. Pantenburg, who with her husband has picked up a very understandable English in their four months' stay here, has her heart set on British Columbia.
"We hope very much to be back here. We love your mountains and tall trees, the moderate climate."
The gathering at Mr. Kraupner's home included J. C. Glicker, president of Prince Rupert Citizens' Council and J. A. McNaughton, inspector in charge of immigration here.
Both found it easy and most interesting to converse with the Pantenburgs.
The couple will tour Vancouver Island before heading east on the last leg of their journey.

Loggers Want Drink in Camps

Call For Canteens,
All-Night Liquor Stores

VANCOUVER.—A brief presented Friday to the Liquor Inquiry Commission by the "Loggers Local," 171, of the IWA, asked for all-night liquor stores, light lunches in beer parlors, liquor in cafes and canteens in most logging camps.
It was read before the commission by union secretary Fred Fieber, who said he spoke for 5,000 loggers.
"The loggers drink in excess, not because they are loggers, but because they are isolated for long periods from access to liquor," he said.

WANT CANTEENS

For this reason, loggers wanted canteens serving liquor in all except specially isolated camps. At these camps, they believed the question of canteens should be studied by management and labor.

"All-night liquor stores are essential," Mr. Fieber said, because "loggers often arrive in town after the liquor stores are closed and they have no alternative but to go to the boot-leggers."

"Canteens in camp would cut down the logger's tendency to overindulge when he hits town," he concluded.

NO NEW LICENCES

In Victoria, the provincial government announced it will not issue any new club liquor licenses until after the new liquor legislation is framed at next year's session of the Legislature.
Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the ban on issuance of club licences will continue. The ban was instituted in April, 1951, by the former government.

"Until the new liquor legislation is framed, the government feels it would be improper to grant any further licences," Mr. Bonner explained.

Power Lack Shuts Down B.C. Smelter

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company laid off 120 men Friday as a direct result of low water in the Kootenay River which has cut power available to the smelter.
The company announced a 25 per cent reduction in zinc production and reported mines shipping zinc concentrates to Trail have been advised a similar cut in concentrates which will be accepted.
The company expects the power situation to remain serious for several months.

Man Who Joined Police Here Returns to Head Detachment

A hefty six-foot man who joined the old B.C. Police force in Prince Rupert 20 years ago returned today to take over as head of the city detachment, RCMP.
He is Sergeant H. L. (Harry) Norman, who arrived on the Princess Louise to take over from Sergeant Ross Clayton, who has been acting head of the city force since Cpl. W. W. McLeod retired last Saturday.
Sgt. Norman had been relieving as patrol sergeant in Chilliwack until his transfer here.
After joining the Provincial police here in 1930 he was sent to the Peace River country where he remained four years. He then went to Vancouver and later served in Ashcroft, Ocean Falls, Campbell River, Port Alberni and in Burnaby before returning to Vancouver office two years ago.

Convicts Riot On Hallowe'en

COLUMBUS.—Six hours of hell on Hallowe'en — an $1,000,000 "bad food" riot by 2,000 convicts — swept the century old Ohio Penitentiary last night.
Eight buildings went up in flames, furnishings and equipment savagely beaten into wreckage.
A state highway patrolman, mistaken for an escaping convict, was wounded slightly in the head by a quick-shooting guard. No one else was injured.
No prisoner escaped.
No hostages were taken.
The milling convicts, spurred to madness by needling of ring-leaders, threatened for a time to attempt a mass escape over the prison's 30-foot high north wall. Thirty-five guards, armed with sub-machine guns, stood their ground. Somehow, the escape attempt never jelled.

Old-Timers Drive Home Silver Spike

Giant Celebration Tops
Prince George Ceremony

Special to The Daily News

PRINCE GEORGE.—The last spike was driven today in the government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway to link Prince George with Quesnel.

The ceremony took place at Ahbau Bridge, tiny flagstop named after an old Chinese placer miner.
Completion of the 82-mile link brought to realization a connection started 40 years ago and brings closer the day when the grain and oil riches of the Peace River and the coal and ore of northern B.C. and the Yukon will pour through this city on the way to world markets.

On hand to witness the history-making ceremony by two colorful pioneers were Premier W. A. C. Bennett, his cabinet, J. A. Kennedy, general manager of the PGE, and a crowd of more than 500.

SILVER SPIKE

The $13,000,000 link was completed when smiling John Anderson Fraser, 86-year-old Quesnel resident, and L. C. Gunn, an exploratory engineer who has lived in this district since 1907, hammered home a silver spike to make the link official.

A special train carrying 300 oldtimers and city residents left here early this morning for the "last spike" ceremony and joined the government officials at Ahbau.

Mr. Fraser, who came to the Cariboo 61 years ago, is a former member of the B.C. Legislature, serving two terms as a Progressive Conservative party member.

After brief speeches at Ahbau following the spike-driving ritual, the two trains—one bringing the official party, the other with oldtimers and other "PGE fans"—returned to this city to join an estimated 10,000 citizens in a giant celebration.

More than 1,000 visitors were in the city. There were three brass bands which met the inaugural train at the CNR station here.

Premier Bennett and his party were first to alight and after a spontaneous welcome, the Junior Chamber of Commerce-sponsored parade moved up First Avenue and headed through the centre of town to the Civic Arena for the official

Longshore Workers Get Pension Plan

VANCOUVER (CP)—A pension plan for British Columbia longshoremen, believed to be the first in Canada, was announced here.

The agreement between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CCL) and the Shipping Federation of B.C. provides a pension of $60 a month at 65 for maximum of 30 years' service.

The monthly pension starts at $30 after a minimum of 15 years' service and is graded upward to a maximum of $60.

The scheme will affect nearly 1,200 longshoremen at Vancouver, New Westminster, Port Alberni and Chemainus.

Jack Berry, International Union representative, said cost will be borne by the companies with pension fund contributions based on tonnage handled on a yearly basis. The plan will become effective early next year, he said.

Effective Oct. 1, longshoremen won a five-cent hourly increase to bring their basic pay to $2.05 and a welfare plan providing death benefits and weekly indemnity for sick leave.

Miners Sign New Contract

WASHINGTON.—John L. Lewis and hard coal operators signed a new contract today raising the wages of 65,000 anthracite miners at $1.90 a day, effective Nov. 16.

The new contract is subject to approval by the Wage Stabilization Board which recently chopped 40 cents off a similar agreement reached by Lewis and the soft coal industry.

A Contest For Young Canada

ELSEWHERE in the Daily News today there is an announcement of the book review contest open to school children which is to be held in connection with Young Canada's Book Week, Nov. 15-22.

We draw attention to this because we believe that here is a contest which, as a stimulus to young minds, has everything. The prizes for the various grades will not go necessarily to those who have a particular gift for spelling, or grammar, or legible writing. No doubt such attributes will be considered in the judging, but the contest itself makes demands on far more than these.

As we see it, the student who will seriously contend for a prize is the student whose good spelling is employed on words that show comprehension and originality, and whose good grammar has something to say that is clear and discerning.

A competent book review requires that much at least. It calls for insight into what the author is trying to express, and judgment as to whether it is expressed well. It should be an appraisal of the whole context, not a summary of the plot.

The contest merits attention not only because it promotes youthful power of expression, but also because it furthers interest in good literature among the young.

"A generation ago, books were the most popular form of entertainment; but for some years now, books have been only one of many things that compete for the child's interest," Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, the Governor-General, has said in a message. "But it is still true that books are vital to the business of education."

"To be well educated is to be well read; reading makes us familiar with our literature, and our history, responsive to the beauty and power of words, and able to use them well. The taste for good reading is formed in childhood. It is important that Young Canada should read."

In sponsoring Young Canada's Book Week, the Canadian Library Association is performing a valuable service to schoolchildren who, without an additional incentive to read, could easily form an indifference to books that would last through adult years and deprive them of that much companionship and pleasure.

Simultaneously, the Association is awakening public appreciation of the work being done by our public libraries. If recognition of this work were even half as extensive as the work itself, there would be no problem.

In Prince Rupert, for example, the public library last year had a total circulation of approximately 22,300, of which 7,200 was in the juvenile and young people's category. This is a notable achievement, but with more public encouragement this essential service could be expanded immeasurably.

If Young Canada's Book Week lives up to its present promise, it may be that we will have to take a lesson from the children in this respect.

LETTERBOX

COMPLAINT OF A FISHERMAN'S WIFE

Editor,
Daily News:

We hear and read about Communism. What about our problems here in B.C.?

Take, for instance, "union." First the trawler-fish strike starting in February, then the salmon strike. All during these days union representatives hold countless meetings, boasting, promising better living for all. Yet we lose about $1,000 or more average for each fisherman, and listen to this: unions were still collecting fees. Where does this money go?

We can't even draw our unemployment dues, union or non-union.

Why am I writing this? I am so disgusted seeing families breaking up, newly-weds, too. I would suggest Tom Parkin take a walk downtown and see in person. Even respectable married men hanging around or, even worse, landing in jail. I suggest you all consider it over. At present our fishermen are down the west coast trying to scrape up what's left. Yet at this time they would be at home enjoying family life and, even more, earning for our winter needs.

Of course the union steps in again for two per cent of every dollar for the so-called strike fund. It's just like grabbing bread and butter out of our mouths.

I have a family and I should complain. Who knows but my marriage will be a wreck. My husband and I did not say farewell and were not happy when he went. I am left with no money to start with. We are all suffering, both unions and non-unions. Why?

I should complain. After all, I am a

FISHERMAN'S WIFE.

As I See It

by Elmore
Philpott

Crisis President

DURING the term of the next president of the United States the world is bound to go through the deepest crisis of modern times.

For the signs are there so large that all the world may read. Before 1956 we will either get world war three — the outcome and consequences of which no human can even guess, or we will lay the first firm foundations of future peace under world law.

We have a really good chance of getting the beginnings of true world peace if we can work out a genuine and truly-willing basis of co-operation between the United States and the British Commonwealth nations. I say that, not because I imagine that these two groups are any better or more important than others. But the plain facts are that their past history, present interest, and above all, future hopes, have most in common.

If we can't work out a true basis of teamwork between the nations most alike what chance is there of doing the infinitely more difficult job of integrating those who are most unlike?

REGARDLESS of who wins the U.S. elections we are assured of a good top man in the White House. Both men are genuine and understanding friends of the free British nations, including Canada. Both men are in principle convinced of the need for more effective international organization.

But we would be blind to the plain facts if we ignored the difficulties. If General Eisenhower wins, and carries out the crude plan of John Foster Dulles, to which he has given at least a half nod of approval, we will be in for a time of most severe strain on American-British-French relations. For the Dulles plan of actively backing armed underground resistance movements in eastern Europe would either result in a creation and magnification of actual civil war on BOTH sides of the Iron Curtain, or in outright total war. As Elmer Davis put it, in his Indiana radio voice the day after publication of the Dulles plan of active arms-drops, etc.:

"This would be a clear act of war, and we would have to be prepared for the consequences."

BUT IF Stevenson wins the McCormicks and McCarthys will really begin to whop it up for extreme isolationism. More than one shrewd observer remarked after Senator McCarthy's big radio and television show that he had made his first speech intended to get him the Republican nomination in 1956.

Isolationism is far from dead in U.S.A. Congressman Burdick, Republican of North Dakota, is actively campaigning to have the U.S. secede from the United Nations. It is instructive to note that he takes precisely the opposite line from that taken by Canadian critics of U.S. monopoly direction of the war in Korea. Mr. Burdick writes:

"After the U.N. started on its course the first thing that happened was war. This great organization with 60 nation members doesn't seem to realize that through its actions the U.S. was put into that war. After we were thrown into the Korean war we were left there almost alone. We are doing 90 per cent of the fighting, 90 per cent of the dying and paying all the bills. Yet who is directing the negotiations? The U.N., not we. We can't get out of this war remaining in the U.N."

The above is 90 per cent untrue—but ominous.

THE MAIN duty and opportunity for Canada, and the whole British Commonwealth, is to convince the United States government that our countries are in and must remain in a genuine partnership. Canada must win an effective voice in its policies.

UNDER OUR ROOF

By JOHN STURDY

Sometimes there is nothing like having a small child around to make the day brighter and the heart fuller. Of course, there are other times, too, when the little people—especially the neighbors' ones—bring dark clouds and thunder.

But take Col. S. Skeffington-Smuts (Ret.) and Hamish and Little Augie and me. If a little child hadn't been there to lead us, we would be still banned from our house on The Island, which was the case as soon as we returned from our trip to Alaska, the Yukon Territory and Kelowna.

The Colonel's wife Anastasia had mined the property and threatened to blow the Colonel's head off with her elephant-gun. My own wife didn't care one way or the other.

This was the situation when I thought of my small son.

"I think our problem is solved," I said to the Colonel, Hamish, and Little Augie. "We will go to the local school this afternoon and wait for my small son to appear. After all, the boy is my own flesh and blood. He will interfere for us."

"Do you think that will do any good?" Hamish asked doubtfully. "No woman can ignore the pleading of a child," I said. "As soon as the boy sees us and learns that we have been banished, he will go crying home to his mother, begging her to take us back."

"How about my wife, Anastasia?" asked the Colonel.

"My wife is the stronger character," I pointed out.

"Perhaps," the Colonel said, "but your wife doesn't carry an elephant-gun."

Well, anyway, we went to the school as planned, and at three o'clock my son appeared along with his classmates. He recognized me immediately.

HELP FROM SON

"Hi Pop!" he said. "Whatcha doing in town?"

This staggered me slightly, but I replied:

"I've come home to you and mother."

The boy eyed my companions. "I see you're still hanging around with those characters. Where are you living—in the hotel?"

"We're going home, son," I said patiently.

"That's not what Ma tells me."

"Now look here, son, there has been a slight misunderstanding and your mother refuses to answer the telephone. She's probably afraid to be alone in the house."

"She isn't alone," the boy said. "She's there with Mrs. Skeffington-Smuts and an elephant-gun."

Behind me I felt the Colonel shiver.

"Son..."

"See you around, Pop."

I grabbed the boy and took him aside. For twenty minutes I talked to him earnestly as father to son. Then I let him go.

Well, the upshot of it was that the Colonel and Hamish and Little Augie and I returned to the hotel, and Little Augie said, "Pop, you certainly laid an egg that time," and I said, "Just wait and see," and sure enough, in about half an hour the telephone rang and it was my wife on the line.

THE COST

"Our little son is hysterical," she announced. "He's lying on the living-room floor, beating his head on the rug and screaming for his Daddy. I can't stand this, so—you'd better come home. I've convinced Anastasia to put away her elephant-gun."

So that's how we reached home, and I must say I am now very high in the estimation of the Colonel and Hamish and Little Augie.

I don't dare admit the cost to anyone. I mean those things for Christmas. For instance, there's a bicycle and a new Red Ryder outfit and an electric train and a mecano set and five pages of the mail-order catalogue and a pony.

It was cheaper living in the hotel.

Tenders Called For Miller Bay

Tenders are being called for construction of a new basement under the administration offices at Miller Bay Hospital, also for asbestos shingling for most of the building, according to information received today by E. T. Applewhite, MP for Skeena.

Closing date of tenders is Nov. 19, upon which work is to begin immediately.

Once, most Canadians thought of China as a semi-tropical land, for comparatively few had been there. The Korean winter is near, and that means the inclusion of blizzards, snow, rains, and Arctic gales.

Nehru Should Read 'Flook' Says Writer

LONDON (CP) — So Prime Minister Nehru of India doesn't like comic strips? Well, he ought to try reading Flook.

That's the advice given by a columnist in The Times of India, as reported here. The columnist says the strip of which Flook is the hero involves "A dream world more real than life, more imaginative than dreams."

The tip followed Nehru's recent complaint at a press conference that he didn't like comic strips and didn't understand why newspapers paid good money for them.

Flook is drawn by Wally Fawkes, formerly of Vancouver and now living in London. The cartoon character named Flook is a rotund, panda-like creature capable of transforming itself into virtually anything at short notice. The strip mystifies some but has a large following of devoted readers.

Filmland Sad In Death of Susan Peters

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—No event in recent months has saddened Hollywood as much as the death of Susan Peters last Friday.

The movie people had their memories of the brilliant young actress who flashed on the screens during the war years. She appeared opposite Robert Taylor in "Song of Russia" and critics hailed her as a bright new dramatic star.

I first met her in 1945 when she was recovering from the hunting accident wound that paralyzed her from the waist down. She was living in a small Beverly Hills apartment with her husband, Richard Quine.

Susan still had her Irish beauty and spunk. She told proudly of how she had a temperature of 106 after the accident and the doctors gave up hope for her. But she had been able to murmur to her husband, "I just wanted you to know that I'm not going to die."

In her first interview after the accident, she reported she had taken three steps in her new braces. "I ought to be walking pretty well in three months," she enthused.

COMEBACK

Would she act again?

"Just let them try and stop me," she said.

She never was able to walk, but she did act again. Her first job was three months later, on a radio drama with Van Johnson. She came through with flying colors.

Later she was driving her own hand-operated car and even taking flying lessons.

Christmas of 1946 was a joyous one. She and Dick adopted a baby boy, Timmy. The doctors said she might be able to act in a movie.

The picture was "Sign of the Cross" and she played a mean woman in it. "Sign of the Cross" was not a success, and it was Susan's last picture. After that, her marriage to Quine cracked up. Their friends reported that it was entirely her doing. His loyalty remained steadfast, they said, but she did not want to tie his life to a cripple.

Afterwards, Susan made her life alone. She wanted to be independent and worked herself to the limit of her frail health. She toured all over the country in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The Glass Menagerie."

When I saw her for the last time, she proudly brought out her raven tresses.

For the first time, she made no claim that she would walk again.

"How can I—I have no spinal cord," she said. "It will take longer than I live for the doctors to discover how to fix that."

She was running out of hope, and she came to the end of it last week.

"She wouldn't allow anyone to help her recently," said the doctor after she died. "I believe she lost interest in living."

Mr. Champion Shows Us How to 'Play It Safe'

Mr. Muzzy was watching this hand and he didn't seem to like anything about it. First he shook his head sadly over Mr. Dale's one-diamond response.

"Too weak," he muttered to himself. Mr. Muzzy would have bid one no-trump.

wrong, as usual. The response of one in a suit does not promise anything more in high cards than does a one no-trump response. If anything, even a little less. When Mr. Dale bid one diamond, Mr. Champion had no justification to count on him for more than a king and a queen or the equivalent.

Therefore, over the two no-trump bid, Mr. Dale had additional values. Not much, but enough to go on to game.

Mrs. Keen opened the jack of spades, Mr. Abel played his lone king—and Mr. Champion let it hold. Mr. Muzzy, who had moved around to watch the play, made a terrible face that plainly said, "How crazy can you get?"

Undoubtedly he was thinking about the old saw that aces were made to kill kings.

Naturally, Mr. Champion had made a fine play. Not that he knew the king was a singleton. But he had cased the hand and seen that he had to knock out the ace and king of diamonds before he could rack up nine tricks.

If Mr. Abel had a spade to return, then Mrs. Keen could not possibly have more than four spades unless the deck were faulty. And in that case, two spade losers and two diamond losers would not defeat him.

What if Mr. Champion won the first trick and later found that the king was a singleton and Mrs. Keen held both the high diamond honors? In that case, he would be surely set. But that was the situation he was protecting against when he ducked at trick one.

Note that this safety play lost nothing. Mr. Champion could win two spade tricks—no more, no less. He wasn't giving up a trick by letting the king win. He was merely deferring taking his spade winners until the second and third rounds of the suit. In other words his safety play had everything to win and nothing at all to lose.

Last Rites Held Here For Fisherman

Last rites were held Wednesday for veteran fisherman Louis Larsen, who died suddenly last Saturday seconds before entering his home.

Reverend H. O. Olson of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, conducted services in Grenville Court Chapel.

Palbearers were: Harold Heland, Harry Menzies, Olaf Stagg, Olaf Skog, Peter Wold and Erling Wick.

Mr. Larsen had fished out of Prince Rupert and Vancouver for 40 years. He came to this country from Denmark.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. A. E. (Ted) Smith and Louise, both of Prince Rupert.

FRANCOIS LAKE

Dr. Lucht, veterinary surgeon, has left for Prince Rupert, but expects to be back in the Francois Lake district in about 10 days to finish up the T.B. testing of the cattle.

Kay Chapelle returned to Edmonton by train after receiving a wire that Dale had passed away in the University Hospital there. He had been ill for several months.

Mr. MacKenna and Mr. Forsyth of the Burns Lake School Board attended the annual school meeting in the school here on Monday evening. There was a good attendance, and many matters were discussed. Mr. Antilla was chosen to represent the Francois Lake school for the coming year.

The Women's and Farmers' Institutes sponsored a delightful evening's entertainment last Saturday evening in the Hall. It was in the form of a Halloween party, and the youngsters were dressed in weird and intriguing costumes. It was impossible to recognize the children under their disguises as witches, black cats, gnomes and other outlandish small people.

Costumes were made by the children and their parents. It was very difficult to judge the best, who had a prize each. Old and young joined together in games. After some dancing, lunch was served at midnight. A huge iced cake was raffled, and won by Neil Kelly.

Capt. E. Williams of Kelowna will be in charge of the second shift of the ferry until freeze-up.

Natives Hold Presbytery Here, Appoint Klemtu Lay Preacher

Native Indian affairs and native personalities were prominent during the two-day autumn meeting of the Prince Rupert presbytery, United Church of Canada, which completed its sittings in First United Church here Thursday evening.

Delegates from 10 of the 11 churches within the presbytery included five natives elected by their local villages to represent them at the sittings of the presbytery, and four elected to attend the concurrent sittings of the Women's Missionary Society.

Dr. William Robinson, of Klemtu, was given official status as lay preacher, the first such position in many years in this area. Reports and letters presented to the presbytery board showed the increasing extent to which the native people are taking responsibility for the work of the church in the north coast.

Organ music as required was furnished by a native organist and natives served Communion on Thursday morning to the delegates.

Presbytery heard from Dr. W. MacPherson, president, conference, United Church, from Rev. L. G. Sieber, minister, First United Church, Prince Rupert, of first hand reports of the impact of attendance at the gathering in Hamilton, Ont., of the United Church's General Council.

There the church's representatives had examined its activities in Canada, and in Korea, China, Japan, India, Africa, and Trinidad, while electing a missionary from India as its moderator, and being inspired by the spiritual insights of Nels Ferre, a theologian now lecturing at Vanderbilt University in New York state.

Dr. Ferre challenged the United Church to continue its worldwide efforts: "In the light of pure reason you have no cause to hold back from attempting the impossible."

Delegates were told that 1000 professional workers would be needed to fill the church's standing requirements over the next five years, as well as $5 million for construction of essential buildings. Rev. L. G. Sieber urged individual charges to meet their own financial requirements, and not to look elsewhere for assistance.

COLORFUL CEREMONY was conducted at Parliament Hill last week when an "apronful" of 25,000 tulip bulbs was planted in beds fronting the Parliament buildings by Duncan K. MacTavish, OBE, QC, chairman of the Federal District Commission (centre). Bulbs were presented by the Associated Bulb Growers of Holland in tribute to Canada's national Capital Tulip Week. Presentation was made by A. H. J. Lovink, Netherlands ambassador to Canada (right).

B.C. Woman Author Writes Book of Year; Wins Medal

The Canadian Library Association's Medal for "The Book of the Year for Children" has been awarded to Mrs. Catherine Anthony Clark, a British Columbia writer.

Members of the Canadian Association of Children's Librarians have voted "The Sun Horse" the most outstanding book for children written in English by a Canadian citizen and published during 1951.

Clare Bice, distinguished Canadian artist and curator of the London Art Museum, made the illustrations for the book, which was published by the Macmillan Company of Canada, Ltd.

"The Sun Horse" is Mrs. Clark's second book. In it, as in "The Golden Pine Cone" which preceded it, she has combined reality and fantasy, modern tall tales and Indian lore, and, in so doing, has produced a story which Canadian children are reading with enthusiasm.

Though Mrs. Clark was born and educated in England, she has spent most of her life in the Kootenay Lake district of B.C., which provides the background for both her books. In 1914 her father brought his five sons and three daughters to settle on a ranch in Gray Creek, between Nelson and Creston. It was wild country then and young Catherine Smith really pioneered when she mothered her younger brothers and sisters in those years of the First World War.

After the war, she married a returned veteran—"the man next door," she says—and so continued to live at Gray Creek. The Clarks had two children, a boy and a girl (nicknamed "Luddy" and "Parg") and the family's life, as she tells it, sounds warm and friendly, with Christmas parties, winter sports, and lots of books and reading aloud.

The children have grown up now and the son is serving in the Canadian Navy. Perhaps that is why, this year, the Clarks have moved away from their beloved Kootenay Lake. They have left the mountains of the interior and have bought some property near the sea, not far from Victoria and the Esquimalt navy base. Here father, mother and daughter are busy making a new home. Mrs. Clark fortunately finds time to "do some work on a new book," but this time it is one for adults, she says.

Little Theatre group in Prince Rupert will take its production "Ask Me No Questions" on the road, following its presentation here this winter.

The play will be staged in the Terrace Civic Centre and plans for travelling were outlined at Monday night's general meeting by play director Gerry Woodside.

The trip will be made on a non-profit basis as a friendly gesture to Terrace community, which has already expressed its enthusiasm to see the play.

Amateur carpenters and painters soon will be turning to repairing and building of stage "props." All this activity takes place in the furnace room workshop of the Civic Centre.

Prize Relics In Museum

VANCOUVER (CP) — Percy Grainger, famous Australian pianist and composer, has established a "museum of musical personalia" at the University of Melbourne.

Sir Bernard Heinze, conductor of the Melbourne Symphony and Royal Melbourne Philharmonic orchestras, who is in Canada on a busman's holiday, told of Grainger's enterprise.

"It is full of priceless relics such as original scores by Bach and Beethoven, letters and other mementoes of great musicians," said Sir Bernard.

But Grainger, he said, is obsessed by the fear of destruction—by fire, water, electrical combustion or rats, especially rats.

The museum is therefore without light, heat or running water, and it is protected by an intricate maze of rat traps.

Sir Bernard, who as a young man conducted for Dame Nellie Melba then at the height of her fame as the world's leading coloratura soprano, is going to Toronto where he will conduct the CBC Symphony Orchestra and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Later, he will go to London to conduct the BBC Symphony.

A book-review contest for pupils in grades 4 to 8 has been announced by the Prince Rupert Public Library Committee in connection with Young Canada's Book Week, Nov. 15-22.

The contest is open to all pupils within these grades. Winners will be judged on the basis of interpretation merit, that is, on the way the book which is reviewed is interpreted in the reviewer's own words.

A prize of a book will be given to the winner in each grade group and each winning review will be published in this section of the Daily News.

There are four grade groups, 4, 5, 6 and 7-8 who may compete. Closing date for entries is Nov. 10.

Books available for review are:

Nova Scotian's Novel Receives Faint Praise

NEW YORK (CP)—Ernest Buckler's novel about Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley, "The Mountain and the Valley," is described by the New York Times' book reviewer as "A morose and gloomy tale."

The novel, published by Holt, is the first by Buckler, a Nova Scotian farmer.

Orville Prescott describes it in The Times as "One of those earthy tales that seek to bring their readers into intimate contact with all the gory details of pig-killing time and all the dreary strain of clearing fields of rocks and boulders."

Nevertheless, writes Prescott, "its locale is a fresh one and its manner of writing is individual and unusual." The author is described as having an ear for dialogue and his characters, though "neither likable nor interesting," are "completely believable."

Japanese Orange Growers Try For Deadline, Handed Lemon

VANCOUVER. — For 20 years, Japanese horticulturists have been trying to grow an orange that will ripen in time for the Canadian Thanksgiving trade.

This year they did it. A Japanese business man arrived here today with 40,000 cases of fruit—only to find that the Canadian Thanksgiving is two weeks ahead of the American holiday.

The businessman said somebody in his Tokyo office handed him the lemon—the wrong date.

Joe Giordano Bowls Near Perfect Game

Two tough hits ruined a perfect game in the men's five-pin bowling league this week but Joe Giordano still set a new single-game record of 404 for the keggers to shoot at.

Starting with eight strikes, Joe then crashed the 'maples' neatly but left the kingpin. He spared the frame then clicked for a strike on his first ball in the 10th and again on his next ball left the kingpin, which he picked off with his last ball.

His game helped teammates on the General Electric squad trounce Watts & Nickerson, score high game of 1,259 for the night and also take honors for high three with 3,361.

R. Shrubbsall of Masons had high three games with 810 and Rusty Ford was closest to the hidden score of 296 with his 293 count.

Results: Nelson Brothers 3, CNRA 1; CGE 4, Watts & Nickerson 0; North Stars 3, Cooks Jewellers 1; Kaien Industries 3, Industrials 1; JC's 3, Firemen 1; Mansons 3, Sedgewicks 1; Short Circuits 4, Woodbutchers 0; Moose 3, Electrolux 1; Watson Islanders 4, Savoy 0; Family Market 4, 70 Taxi 0.

Suffers Leg Injury at Alcan Site

Roy Hamilton, 44-year-old general pipe foreman for B.C. Bridge and Dredging Company at Kitimat, was brought to hospital here late yesterday with leg injuries suffered when he fell while walking to dinner.

Mr. Hamilton, who lives at 1460 Fell Avenue, North Vancouver, received medical treatment at Kitimat before being flown here and walked into the hospital with the aid of crutches.

Kuzych Gets Re-Instatement In Union After Many Courts

VANCOUVER (CP)—Myron Kuzych, 40-year-old welder, who has sought union membership for seven years, has been given a chance of reinstatement.

In court, his union—the Marine Workers' and Boilermakers' Industrial Union Local No. 1—disclosed it is willing to restore his membership, but maintained his expulsion was legal.

Kuzych, expelled from the union because he opposed its closed shop principles, has been battling through the courts since 1945.

In his latest action in the long legal battle he is suing union president Bill White and four of his executives.

Chief Justice Wendell B. Farris allowed union counsel to amend its defence—conceding Kuzych to be a member of the union.

The defendants further undertake to pay him his costs in the present action.

Costs in previous actions have been taxed at $14,570 against Kuzych, but they have not been paid.

"The plaintiff's membership in the union is a matter of such insignificance that these defendants are not prepared to engage in costly and protracted litigation to now prevent his admission," said Senator J. W. Deb. Farris, union counsel.

KUZYCH OBJECTS

The amendment, however, did not meet with the approval of A. W. Johnson, counsel for Kuzych.

"It amounts to a forced settlement of the action on the terms suggested by the defendants," said Mr. Johnson.

Chief Justice Farris said there was no reason why the amendment should not be granted on the usual terms as to costs.

"Unless the parties can show they are injured by an amend-

Alcan Doubles Shipments To U.S. Plants

MONTREAL. — A spokesman for the Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd., said here the company will double its ingot shipments to United States defence and consumer plants in the first quarter of 1953.

He was commenting on a Washington announcement by Samuel E. Anderson, U.S. deputy production administrator, on a new arrangement between the company and the United States.

The company said in a statement it has reviewed other contract commitments and with the co-operation of the British government arranged to postpone delivery of part of scheduled shipments to the United Kingdom in the next few months.

This agreement will allow the company to divert to the U.S. a total of 77,000,000 pounds of aluminum in December and the first half of 1953. The company has contracted to make up British orders before the end of 1955.

The contract will not affect Canada's defence or industrial program, the company said.

SCREEN ★ FLASHES

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Tallulah Bankhead is again facing the film cameras after seven years in other pursuits. This time she's emoting for "Main Street to Broadway."

It's a double fantasy, and has Taloo all wrapped up.

In the first sequence, she plays a wicked woman who poisoned six persons, including herself. In the second, she is a demure housewife.

This consumed her time and she was not able to chitchat. However, she had presented me with a copy of her new autobiography which answers my questions.

NOT SO HOT

Her confession about her film career in the early '30s:

"I was no great shakes. I was victimized by the mechanics of the whole business. In Hollywood you do nothing for yourself. You don't even apply your own make-up... you play your roles in snips and dribbles, harassed by delays, interruptions and stupidities."

She wrote of her invitation to a "strictly informal" dinner given by Joan Crawford. Taloo arrived in slacks to find La Crawford decked out as if she were attending the Metropolitan Opera. Miss Crawford promised her a "surprise dinner companion." He was Jackie Cooper, aged 8.

Some time later, Walter Wanger arranged a blind date for Tallulah. Her escort turned out to be Gary Cooper, the "strong silent type."

"Silent is right," she adds. "Gary never opened his trap throughout the evening."

The next day a columnist reported the pair engaged. This prompted Reuters to cable from England: "Confirm engagement to Gary Cooper." Tallulah cabled back: "You have it all wrong. Am engaged to Jackie Cooper."

Her engagement to Ronald Colman, a man she had not yet met, was later reported.

Her first movie career was something of a fiasco. But she returned 12 years later and won the New York Critics' Award for her performance in "Lifeboat."
