NEWPORT, Wash. (AP)-A man who won his freedom only three weeks ago after spending 27 years in the state prison as an habitual criminal is back in jail.

The man, Wallace Ketterman, 57, was held for questioning in connection with the burglary of a summer cabin at nearby Diamond Lake.

Ketterman was sent to the Washington State Penitentiary in the spring of 1925 after being convicted of stealing harness. Later that year he was charged with being an habitual criminal and was sentenced to life.

Ketterman fought 27 years and made 20 separate appeals in an effort to gain his freedom. Finally on Oct. 7 of this year, Judge Dolph Burnett ruled there was an error in the habitual criminal judgment and Ketterman was freed.

It Took a Long Time

NTRANCE of the Pacific Great Eastern Rail-- way into Prince George is now official and that city stands on the threshold of a bright new era.

Completion of the line is the happy outcome of a struggle that dates so far back and brought so many disappointments that the driving of the last spike comes almost as an anti-climax. There are, in fact, many old-timers who regard it with indifference. Having seen Prince George grow and prosper without the help of the PGE, they are inclined to feel that the railway has arrived almost as a fairweather friend.

Those who were there 32 years ago, for example, read these various items in the Prince George Citizen:

"We have some assurance of welcoming the completed line to Vancouver next year."

"When the PGE reaches Prince George next year we should plan a celebration unparallelled in the history of our city."

"Welch contracting crews are now working only 12 miles south of Quesnel."

"Harry Perry has gone to Victoria to press for a speeding up in PGE construction to Prince George."

Anti-climax though it may be, the joining of the PGE to Prince George is even more important now than it was then. The railway has been carrying heavy traffic in spite of its incompleted state, and Prince George will now get its much deserved share.

We congratulate our neighbors to the east on its arrival into fresh prosperity.

Where Credit is Due

DEFORE Hallowe'en 1952 recedes too far back D into history, a word of tribute is in order for those who made it a success.

Although the cooperation of every individual is, in the final analysis the indispensable ingredient in keeping a celebration of this sort under control, there has to be some central plan for eliminating disorganized capers in favor of a main attraction which all can enjoy.

Such a plan was provided by the Kinsmen Club, and to that group must go special credit for a Hallowe'en that will go on the records as safe, sane and a lot of fun.

Thanks must also go to the police for their protective watch on activities. Although their presence was felt sufficiently to check any ill-advised notions, their duties were carried out in such a way that the buoyancy of the evening was in no way dampened. By being ready in force to handle any alarm, the fire department also made its valuable contribution to the security of the city.

For all those who helped, the success of the evening must be an agreeable reward.

Our Future Underground

THE UNITED STATES should take a lesson from Canada in promoting mining development, according to the Ketchikan Alaska Chronicle which observes that this country is bringing back mining as an important part of its economy.

"Not only do the Canadians provide grubstake money, a premium price for gold produced in new mines and some tax concessions, but there are in most of the provinces additional benefits," the paper remarks. "Free classes in geology and prospecting are offered. In Saskatchewan they are shown how to use technical equipment so they can look for uranium. They are flown free of charge to the prospecting areas. The province loans them tents, canoes and maps. At 30-day intervals a government plane flies in supplies and picks up ore samples for assaying."

There is every reason that Canada should do its utmost to attract exploration of its mineral resources. In a very literal sense, its future lies underground and its mining prospects are, perhaps more than any other single factor, the cause of its present rapid development. Due to the encouragement being offered to prospectors, 2000 new claims were staked last year. This year the figure is expected to reach 3000.

If its manufacturing processes and its population can catch up to its output of raw material, Canada will be well on its way to an economy which could be the wonder of the 20th century.

As I See It

Picks Stevenson

A WIT once wrote that a columnist gets paid for explaining to readers why things did not turn out the way he said they would last week.

Sir John A. Macdonald, our most astute Canadian politician said: "You can never tell how : horse race or an election will turn out." But long experience has taught me that readers want a writer on public affairs to give his guess on forthcom ing events-above all of elections. Many want this to have the laugh on the writer, if and when he is wrong—as he inevitably often is.

So, notwithstanding that was so long since taught to be cautious at this game of political prediction. I hereby go out on the old limb again:

One week before the presidential contest I predict that Governor Stevenson will be elected, and by a margin of most impressive proportions.

MY CHIEF reason for figuring that Governor Stevenson will third more. beat even the well loved General Eisenhower is because the Dawson pays upward of $150 United States is now divided on month for groceries and class lines, as never before in Whitehorse upwards of $100. politics is neat and tidy.

But broadly speaking, the employee who works in overalls, or even white collar, is more likely to figure that his interests are better looked after by the Democrats than by the Republicans and the very reverse is true of most of the employers. More over, the bigger and richer the employer, and the further away who work with their hands, the more certain he is to be a Republican.

The mathematical fact is that the wage earners and suchlike considerably outnumber the others; and this is the most fundamental of all facts in U.S. politics since the invisible Roosevelt revolution deepened the lines of economic division.

ABOVE ALL, I figure Stevenson will win because the great mass of the people associate the Republican party with th Great Depression-just as the associate Roosevelt with brave, clumsy attempts to it. I would bet that the same fact applies in Canada.

Take any group of 10 or 20 was no laughing matter. people and play the game the A young lady planted a rockel

Response to Partner's First Bid Usually Vital

Prince Rupert Daily News

Monday, November 3, 1952

The first response you make to your partner's opening bid is usually of vital importance in reaching the correct final contract. When partner opens the bidding with one of a suit, your best response with a weakish hand is one in a higher ranking-not one no trump.

West

(Mr. Abel)

In today's deal, for example, if Mrs. Keen had responded with one no trump, Mr. Dale would have been reluctant to jump to game on his big hand because! of the possibility that his opponents would run the entire diamond suit against him.

Probably he would have rebid three clubs and that would have D-K 7 5 4 been the final contract. As you see, game at no trump is cold as

All Fired in Paint Firm Experiment

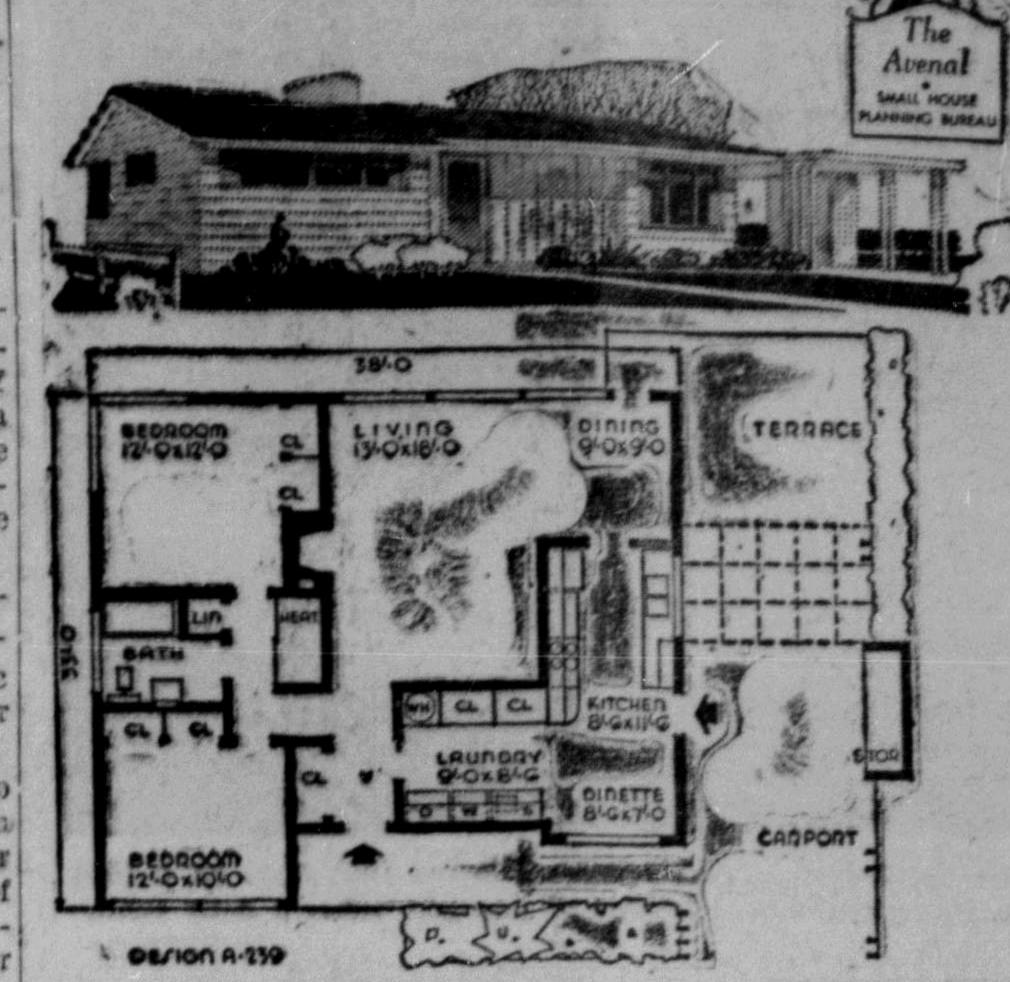

OLDHAM, Lancashire (CP) A 250-year-old local paint manufacturing firm whose entire staff of 70 employees was dismissed a nonth ago because of "collective" inefficiency," reports a 70-percent boost in production since ceorganization.

W. Pethybridge, managing director of the company, Cartwright Limited, said the drastic action had produced results far beyond his expectations.

When notices were handed to: the workmen, they were given the opportunity of applying for reinstatement. Ninety per cent of the employees did so and subsequently returned to their

Under the reorganized scheme of operations, Pethybridge said the employees were being trained to think for themselves. Foremen had been dispensed with: while pay rates beyond the prevailing union scale were introduced, with additional bonus incentives.

"The policy we introduced is definitely not one of slave driving," Pethybridge said. "Our present staff is 100 per cent in favor of the step we took and I think it has proved conclusively that once a British workman has been told what to do, he does it better than anyone else in the

THE AVENAL has a floor construction consisting of a concrete slab laid over a gravel or cinder bed and the superstructure is frame with wide siding, asphalt shingles and vertical siding in front recess and on storage room walls.

The furnace is centrally located near the fireplace, laundry equipment and storage closets in the utility room off the kitchen-dinette, stove and refrigerator on the inside wall, sink and counter under side windows and dinette in front.

A combination living-dining room to the rear, two bedrooms wardrobe closets, bathroom, linen cabinet and coat closet complete the floor plan.

The carport is connected to the front entrance by a covered walk behind the raised planting box.

Floor plan measures 38 feet by 33 feet. Overall area totals 1,138 square feet, while the cubage totals 12,859 cubic feet.
