Threatened Scene in British House of Commons When Labor and Government Face Each Other

Labor members offered vote of censure and refused to hear any minister answer it except Baldwin who was called "coward"

LONDON, November 16.—Threatening scenes were enacted in the House of Commons today over a vote of censure debate introduced by J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor party in which the Prime Minister held back from replying much to the disgust of the opposition, who felt that a slight was put upon them by the government putting up one of the minor ministers to reply. This man they refused to hear.

Prohibition Organizer Claims That Youth of Country Being Wrongly Educated

VANCOUVER, Nov. 16.—During the past six years the youth of our land have been schooled to wet interests, said R. J. McIntyre, organizer of the British Columbia Prohibition Association, today in his annual report to a convention at St. Andrew's Church. "In the press, upon the street, in social circles they have been taught the fallacy of prohibitionists, that they consist of but few people who are mostly preachers and that they are very narrow. The pulpits and the schools have been largely silent on the evils of the liquor traffic."

UNION COMPANY TO BUILD SHIP

Plans are Under Way to Replace Wrecked s.s. Catala—Salvage Operations Are Now Proceeding

Harold Brown, manager of the Union Steamship Co. which has now abandoned the wreck of the s.s. Catala on Burnt Cliff Island to the underwriters and salvage company as a total loss, has announced in Vancouver that the company is already busy toward replacing the Catala. Plans are under way, he announces, to construct a new vessel. No time will be lost toward this end as the business of the company demands the immediate replacement of a ship of the Catala's class.

In the meantime, salvage operations have now been actively commenced at the scene of the wreck. While the saving of the hull depends to a large extent on what weather conditions may be, immediate attention is being paid to salvaging parts of the ship such as stoves, engines, boilers and general fittings. It may be possible to strip the ship to a mere hull.

S.S. Salvage King is remaining at the wreck for salvage operations being directed by T. C. Warkman, surveyor for Lloyds, and E. F. Cribb, general manager of the Vancouver Dry Dock and Salvage Co. Mr. Warkman has officially reported that the ship is extensively punctured through both inner and outer skins and that all the starboard cabins, lying submerged at practically all stages of the tide, are practically destroyed.

MANSON PUTS ORIENTAL CASE AT CONFERENCE

One feature of the concluding session of the dominion-interprovincial conference at Ottawa was subjected to censorship and cut out of the federal announcement. It was the discussion initiated by Hon. A. M. Manson, attorney-general of British Columbia, regarding the Oriental question.

Mr. Manson, who was instrumental in having the subject placed on the agenda, took very strong grounds in favor of Oriental exclusion. He gave statistics to show how the Oriental population is increasing in British Columbia owing to the fertility of the race and how the number of these children attending the schools is only a comparatively small distance behind white pupils.

Lord Cecil Explains Why Disarmament and Further Arbitration Treaties Needed

LONDON, November 16.—It is only by reduction of armaments by international agreement that there can be hope of enduring peace declared Lord Cecil in an address at Caxton Hall. He continued:

That as a general proposition is not disputed by anyone. But I observe in some utterances both in the press and on the platform a certain tendency to regard disarmament as chiefly of importance to Continental Europe. You will even see a doctrine hinted at that the British Empire is so secure in its power and in its position that it can afford to regard the troubles and dangers of our European neighbors with a kink of Olympian detachment. Sometimes, indeed, this belief is carried to such a point that a kind of antithesis is suggested between the interests of the British Empire and those of the League of Nations.

DOUBTS ABOUT DEMOCRACY

Lord Grey in a recent address in England sheds some doubt on the success of democracy and yet Grey has been one of England's greatest democrats. The London Times says that Lord Grey now sees that the hopes built upon democracy were so high that they were certain to be disappointed, and he admits that in great measure they have been disappointed. He refers to the collapse of parliamentary government in Italy—he might have added its failure in other countries—and the growth of the Minority Movement as symptoms of the doubts of the old panacea which have arisen in different quarters, and he examines some of the current criticisms made upon it.

One criticism is that democracy does not produce Chathams or Pitts or Cannings, or even Peels. The question may be left in suspense. Our democracy may hide such men in its bosom, as the democracy of the United States hid a Lincoln, but Lord Grey gives some reasons why the unchecked rule of the many does not favor their advent. Is it the fact, as he asserts, that our ablest public men are now "guiding rather than shaping," that they are engaged in "gauging correctly currents of public opinion which they have not set in motion," and in "becoming the practical instruments of forces that they have not inspired and which they cannot control?" Is it true, as he suggests, that "this may be the best in which statesmanship can attain"? It is intimated in another passage that in a democracy an instinct prompting to dislike of genius may be "not altogether unsound," and again that "the statesmanship which does not plan or foresee, which takes no account of theories, but of facts," if not the highest, may yet be very serviceable. If this be so, then statesmen of the Chatham stamp are not likely to arise.

WHOLE NATION MUST BE WISE

Again, democracy, he urges, demands too much of ministers and too much of parliament. No statesmanship of theirs can compensate for the lack of statesmanship in trade unions and in employers' federations—a lack so plentifully exhibited last year. Lord Grey thinks that a people fit for democracy will learn their sphere and its limits in other fields as in that of politics, but, like all thinkers, he sees that the fitness implies a very high standard, not necessarily of acquired knowledge, but of practical wisdom. He relies on the national virtues, the love of individual liberty and the love of order, which have served and saved us in the past. Democracy, he truly remarks, must "necessarily" depend on "average men and women." Are average men and women, armed with absolute and irresponsible power, possessed of these civic virtues in the degree required? Are the professional wire-pullers of the party machines, who in practice and under ordinary conditions manipulate and direct the party votes, endowed with them or likely to cultivate them? The wider the franchise, the greater the power of the professionals and the feebler and the less responsible the vote of the individual man or woman. Lord Grey has nothing to say about the "machine," either in politics or in the trade unions and federations where its control is still more conspicuously predominant. But he thinks that democracy is likely to be stable because it is the work of the many. Historical precedents are but imperfectly applicable because the circumstances in which they occurred differ wholly from those in which we live, but stability has not been the distinctive feature of democracies in the past. The United States have indeed been stable—with the interlude of a fierce civil war—but under a written constitution with many checks and balances and the ultimate authority of the Supreme Court as its interpreter and exponent, while the democracy which has been developed differs fundamentally from the democracy which the constitution was framed to protect.

KNOWLEDGE NOT EVERYTHING

Will education in the sense in which it is commonly understood fit people for democracy? Many persons speak as though it were "the supreme and decisive element" in fitting future generations for self-government. Lord Grey does not agree. Education which "leads to strength and stability of character," and to consideration of the opinions of others, may do much to support democracy—as, indeed, it may to support any reasonably just form of government. But of the effect of education as the mere acquisition of knowledge upon national character there is room for doubts. Knowledge, Lord Grey truly says, is "a factor, but not a decisive factor, in influencing a conduct." It certainly is not. The national virtues in which Lord Grey puts his trust were conspicuous for generations before 1870; it may be questioned whether they have become more pronounced since then, and it is at least arguable that the people of Europe with small acquired learning are not the most dangerous to their neighbors, as he thinks an ignorant nation would be. Lord Grey's wide experience has taught him that, in many cases, "men of great knowledge are not the most valuable in practical affairs," and he warns us not to expect mere knowledge to create the character and qualities that make democracy succeed. The warning is by no means superfluous; some people seem to think that the acquisition of knowledge, or at best the education of the intellect, is the essential and all-sufficient preparation for the duties of life and of citizenship. There can be no graver error. It is upon moral training that the development of the moral qualities depends, and in all forms of government, but chief in a democracy, these qualities are the sure foundation and the lasting bulwark of good citizenship.

TRUSTEES MEET WITH TEACHERS

Interesting and Timely Addresses on Educational Matters at Federation Meeting

OBJECT TO EXAMINATIONS

Teachers Lay Before Trustees Professional Point of View on Debatable Subjects

The regular monthly meeting of the Prince Rupert Teachers' Association took place last evening when the subject of the papers was "Unsolved Problems in Education." In addition to a big turnout of teachers there were present by invitation George Bryant, S. D. Jonston and W. Gilchrist, members of the Board of School Trustees. H. B. Rochester was prevented by indisposition and T. McMeekin by business from attending.

The president, J. S. Wilson, welcomed the visitors on behalf of the teachers and said it was only by the complete co-operation of trustees, parents, children and teachers that the cause of education could be advanced. The one common interest of all was the education of the child and it was only by a discussion of the various problems from all points of view that this objective could be attained.

George Stocks of the High School staff gave the first paper on "Mental Tests" and told of the development of this branch of modern education. It dealt with the question of intelligence, what it is and how it may be measured. It is reliable and the results of the tests are of practical value to the teacher, the pupils and the business world. Steps in the method of dealing with sub-normal, the criminal and the mental and moral delinquents were indicated by these tests and modern progress was utilizing these results towards dealing with these problems.

RATING AND PROMOTIONS

H. C. O'Neill dealt with teacher rating. Showing that the most unreliable method of rating teachers was judging by results the speaker referred to the impossibility of doing so fairly unless note was taken of the intelligence capacity of the pupils first. He went on to enumerate the many qualities that go to make up the successful teacher and submitted a plan for grading.

Miss Mercer's subject was promotions. Mechanical grading was not sound. Grading by subjects was a step in the right direction. Examinations in the old sense of the word were a thing of the past and a relic of the dark ages. Educationists and psychologists were unanimous in their denouncement of this iniquitous system. It was not fair to the pupil, the parents nor the teachers and it was a matter of a short time till they would be done away with.

SCHOOL CURRICULA

Miss Rothwell dealt with the curricula of the modern school. Inasmuch as research has shown that there are definite stages in the development of the child there should be corresponding stages in the educational systems. The period of childhood covered the ages of six to twelve years, then the period of early adolescence from 12 to 15 and the period of later adolescence from 15 to 18. The schools should have a corresponding arrangement. Public schools would deal with subjects suitable to the childhood period. An intermediate school would meet the needs of the early adolescent pupils and the High School those of later adolescence. This would mean an extra year at High School but the general complaint is that the work in the High School at present is too heavy for the average pupil.

In dealing with the Unsolved Problem of Discipline, Miss Garnett spoke of the big change in the modern conception of this necessary aspect of school and public life. Children were to be shown the necessity for order in conduct, arrangement in life and organization in thought. These were the underlying principles that were the object of discipline. The teachers tried to keep the children occupied and interested and so take away the desire and the time for getting into mischief.

THANKED BY TRUSTEES

On behalf of the Trustees Major Johnston thanked the teachers for the invitation and said they appreciated the compliment of being asked to the meeting.

Following refreshments, badminton games were played and while in the first game the teachers represented by Miss Mitchell and J. S. Wilson won over the trustees represented by George Bryant and S. Johnston, the latter solved the problem of the unusual court conditions and won over the teachers in two well contested games.

C.N.R. steamer Prince Charles, Capt. Neil McLean, from Vancouver via the Queen Charlotte Islands, is due to arrive tonight.

In order to start a cash fund for the erection of a monument, G. F. Brine has sent his cheque for $10 to the Canadian Legion.

Union steamer Camosun, Capt. J. A. Findlay, returned to port at 10:15 last night from Anyox, Stewart and other northern points of call and sailed about an hour later for Vancouver and waypoints.

The annual donation of $10 by William Goldbloom to the Prince Rupert General Hospital was announced to the board by the finance committee last night. Suitable acknowledgement will be made by the secretary.

It is announced by the Union Steamships Ltd. that the steamer Camosun, which has taken the run of the wrecked steamer Catala, will call only once at Port Simpson on each trip north. This will be on Sunday nights northbound, the former called southbound, which incidentally was the one which proved disastrous for the Catala, being eliminated.

The financial report of the Prince Rupert General Hospital for the month of October was presented to the board at its meeting last night by C. H. Elkins in the absence of the chairman of the finance committee, Ald. G. P. Tinker. The report showed collections for the month totalling $5,703.91 with disbursements of $5,524.21, leaving a surplus of receipts of $179.70. There were 1265 hospital days at an average cost per hospital day of $4.37.

The hospital board was in receipt of a communication last night from the B.C. Hospitals' Association advising that the board was due a refund of $31.19 against the transportation cost of $48.43 involved in sending a local delegate to the Association's recent convention in Victoria. The total transportation cost of delegates representing twenty-five hospitals in the province who attended the convention was pooled, the average being worked out at $7.31 per delegate.

C. H. Elkins, chairman of the hospital board house committee, reported to the board last night that he and Ald. W. J. Greer had looked into the proposal that an outside vestibule be built at the Green Street entrance of the hospital and had decided that, as the doors had now been put in good condition, there would be no necessity for such a structure which, in any case, would probably prove unsightly. A recommendation from the committee that some minor repairs be made to the elevator was adopted.

Mrs. R. Gammon, who has been on a trip to Vancouver, returned to the city on the Prince George this morning.

Most Rev. A. U. DePencier, Archbishop of New Westminster and Metropolitan of the Anglican Church for British Columbia, arrived on the Prince George this morning from Vancouver and continued through to the interior by train. He is to hold confirmation services at Kitwanga, Kitwanoon, Hazelton and Smithers and will return south by way of Jasper Park.

The regular monthly meeting of the Prince Rupert General Hospital board took place last night at the hospital, business being largely of a routine nature. President J. H. Thompson occupied the chair and those present included Ald. W. M. Brown, C. H. Elkins, Leo Waugh and Dr. J. P. Cade, directors; H. W. Birch, managing secretary, and Miss Jean Harrison, R.N., lady superintendent.

BRINGING UP FATHER

consider. It has long been a commonplace of our politics that peace is the greatest of British interests. That has been true in the past. It is still more true now. A hundred years ago it was plausible at any rate to sing "Rule Britannia" and declare that Britain needed no bulwarks. The sea was then a very perfect defence as long as we had the mastery of it. But that is no longer the case. In the first place there is our food supply, of which we heard so much in the three-Power Conference at Geneva. There are also our textile industries, all dependent on imported wool and cotton. Above all we have created by the skill and energy of our people an immense and elaborate system of credit on which our prosperity and almost our life depend. The late war gave it a great shock from which we have not yet recovered. Another war would almost certainly destroy it. Besides these indirect dangers which threaten us, we are now exposed for the first time in our history to the direct attack by air against which there is no real defence except counter-attack. It is therefore essential that we should realize that our position is far more vulnerable than it used to be, and that our interest in peace is consequently far greater. (Hear, hear.)

THE ECONOMIC FACTOR
Compared with the reasons with which I have been dealing that of national economy is perhaps of less importance. But it is one which comes home to us in our individual capacities with even greater clearness than the others. Do not let us forget that out of every pound of taxation we pay 14s. is due to past wars or the preparation for future wars. Eleven shillings of that (pensions and payment of debt) have been already incurred. Three shillings more, or one third of what may be called our current liabilities, are due to the fighting services. And, indeed, that is rather an understatement, because of the remaining 6s. a certain portion goes to administrative expenditure on the fighting departments beyond the actual cost of the army, the navy, and the Air Force. This is a terrible burden, far greater than any other country in the world is bearing at the present time—at any rate in pounds, shillings, and pence. It is without doubt this burden of taxation that is the principal factor in impeding our financial recovery and in causing the great mass of unemployment that exists. Nor must it be forgotten that the present moment we are spending our armaments actually a larger sum, even allowing for the difference in the value of money, than we were in 1914, though there is no fleet in European waters which can in any way compare with the foreign fleets that existed before the war. Indeed, putting aside Russia, where accurate information is unobtainable, we are the only European Great Power whose expenditure on armaments is larger than it was in 1913. In my judgment this terrible burden of taxation is greater than we can bear, and apart from all other international considerations it is our duty to diminish the cost of our fighting services. We must do that, and in the opinion of many people we cannot do that to any great extent unless other countries do the same. The case therefore for disarmament by international agreement appears to me to be complete, and I hear with some impatience arguments and difficulties raised based on the remote possibility of some future risk if we do this, that, or the other, when the present dangers that actually threaten us are so overwhelming. (Cheers.)

WHAT CAN WE DO
What, then, can we do? It is no use merely saying that we think a reduction of armaments by international agreement is in itself desirable. What steps can we take to secure it? In the first place, and quite obviously, we ought to support in every way we can efforts which are in course of being made by what is called the Preparatory Commission of the League of Nations. That body is engaged in drawing up the principles on which general disarmament might take place, and I think we should urge on our Government the necessity of unequivocal support of what is there being tried. What do I mean by unequivocal? I mean that we are not to allow technical prejudices or traditional feelings to interfere with the success of those efforts. (Cheers.) There are many people who say to regard international negotiation as an opportunity for this country to assert what it desires, and for other countries to conform. (Laughter.) That is not the way in which negotiated agreements can be secured. And if we really and genuinely desire agreement we must, not enter on the negotiations in any such spirit as that.

ATTITUDE TO ARBITRATION
Next we must realize that if we are to obtain any genuine reduction and limitation of armaments it must be because we can convince the nations of the world that such a reduction will not imperil their national existence. In other words, we have got to increase the feeling of international security and diminish the prevalence of international suspicion. Obviously, with that object, we must do everything we can to encourage nations to settle their disputes by other than warlike means. Of the expedients for the peaceful settlement of international disputes that have been tried arbitration is undoubtedly the most successful. I doubt whether there is any instance of importance in which responsible nations declined to abide by an arbitral decision, and though some of those decisions have been criticised yet no sane man doubts that the parties to such arbitration have all of them been far better off than if they had gone to war.

Now, there is a considerable movement among the European nations in favor of arbitration, and, so far, we have held back from it. I am not going into reasons for or against our action, but I am going to say this—we take an immense responsibility if we discourage international arbitration—(cheers)—and I should have to be overwhelmingly convinced that acceptance of arbitration was a serious danger to this country before I could agree that we ought not to accept it. In actual practice we have, generally speaking, been ready to accept arbitration when once a dispute has arisen. But something more than that is required from us if we are going to strike a blow at international suspicion.

WITHOUT RECOURSE
But I think we must go further than that. There was a movement at the last Assembly of the League urging that the reference to the Permanent Court of justiciable disputes does not go far enough, and we ought to consider the possibility of entering into arbitration treaties with various States for settling all disputes whatsoever without recourse to war. The particular machinery and the possible reservations that may be required must be studied in each case, and will no doubt be studied by the League and the committee of the Preparatory Commission. It was particularly urged by Dr. Nansen that such agreements should be made under the auspices of the League and, as far as possible, in a common form in order to build up a system of international jurisprudence throughout the civilised world. That is the case for the second resolution.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF HOSPITAL DONATIONS

Some Improvements Around Building Are Suggested in Report of Lady Superintendent to Board

Making her report for the month to the board last night, Miss Jean Harrison, R.N., lady superintendent of the Prince Rupert General Hospital, acknowledged the donation by Hill 60 Chapter, I.O.G.E., of six pillows for the children's ward and the receipt of a bathrobe from Mrs. J. L. Christie which had been placed on the women's floor.

Both hospital and nurses' home had been kept comfortably warm during the recent cold spell. The hardest part of the hospital to keep warm was the north end, the caseroom being not adequately heated. It was suggested by Miss Harrison that an electric heater be installed while some members of the board thought the heating system might possibly be extended. Contrary

FIRE PROTECTION AT HOSPITAL DISCUSSED

Fire Chief Will be Asked to Make Inspection and Separate Domestic Water Line May be Installed

The hospital board last night discussed a complaint made by the fire underwriters that the domestic water service at the institution was taken off one of the fire mains and decided to refer the matter to the house committee with the end in view of possibly making a change.

The matter was brought up in connection with the presentation to the board by C. H. Elkins of the house committee's monthly report. To meet the requirements, Mr. Elkins explained that it would be necessary to make a direct connection for domestic uses, the cost of which might be $50 or $60. In most large cities, buildings were required to have separate mains for domestic purposes but there were very few buildings in Prince Rupert which did not obtain their domestic supply from the fire mains.

The fire chief had given the opinion that the water pressure at the hospital was as good as could be expected, Mr. Birch stated. There was not much use for the hospital to put in larger mains until there was an adequate supply provided on the streets by the city. Already the hospital had 2 in. and 4 in. mains, the latter being fed with a 3 in. city main on Fifth Avenue. Mr. Birch further stated that the assistant fire marshal for the province had recently made an inspection of the hospital and the only recommendation he had to make was that a range in the kitchen be raised higher from the floor.

President Thompson took the view that it would be better to be sure than sorry. He felt that the fire chief should be asked to make an inspection of the hoses in the hospital.

It was left with Ald. Brown to arrange for the fire chief to make an inspection of the hoses and the matter of

"THE BUSINESS OF HOUSEKEEPING"

Aside from the weight of tradition there is no fundamental argument for washing at home. From a social point of view, extra expense, and from an individual standpoint, it involves much waste of labor.

From the larger economic point of view the commercial laundry will be supported by the progressive woman who wants to see home work brought to a higher level of harmony with our present industrial development.

SPORT CHAT

Though splendid play is being put on, basketball in Prince Rupert so far this season has not drawn the usual full mead of patronage. Perhaps, other cold weather attractions outside have somewhat detracted from this line of sport but that should soon be rectified. Certainly the standard of play is such that it should be pleasing to all. As the season advances interest will undoubtedly wax and the usual crowd of followers will pick up enthusiasm not only in the senior league but also in the Intermediate, Ladies' and Junior Leagues all of which are putting up a fine standard of early season play in the hoop game.
