NEGLECT is doubtless the cause of most of the ills that afflict humanity. This is so self evident that it seems hardly necessary to tell you. If your eyes are giving trouble, have them attended to-and at once.

OF ALL absurdities in the kingdom of foolishness, surely the loss of eyesight through neglect is the most inexcusable.

Jean Borotra Gives Instances of Spirit of the Game as Played by Opponents

"In business you know a man formlly; in sport you know him informally, aid Jean Borotra, in an interview given to John Tunis and published in the Rotarian. "You know him 'au fond'how shall I say? At the bottom. You come to know his best qualities and his finest feelings. You come to learn that from no matter what race he come he is a fine fellow. Take my friend Malmstrom, tennis champion of Sweden. I was to play him in an important Davis Cup match several years ago. I arrived in Stockholm by airplane from London just a few minutes before we were to go on the court. Naturally was a little 'enerve'-nervous, you know after the trip. After our match my teammate, Henri Cochet, was to play the Swedish second string, Wallenberg, But, as I was hardly fit to play, Malmstrom insisted that they play first i order to give me a couple of hours' rest. That, you see, is the true spirit of the sportsman, which is represented in every land. JAPANESE PLAYER

"I remember another example of fine spirit of sportsmanship. Zenzo Shimidzu was the captain of the Japanese Davis Cup team in 1925. France and Japan, you will recall, had reached the final round to settle which country should challenge the United States. But. unexpectedly. Lacoste, our best player, was defeated in the first match by Harada of Japan, and Cochet was barely able to escape defeat from Tawara. was on shipboard, having been detained in Paris on business, and landed the second day of the matches. I would have been a help to my team-mates, but as I had not been officially nominated was not eligible to play for France. But Mr. Shimidzu suggested that I play the following afternoon in any case. It was fine sportsmanship and generosity, and after such an incident one could not help but have a fine feeling toward the country that produced such players. "Such fine sporting instincts are not confined to any one race or hemisphere. I could give you a hundred such examples that I have noticed in international between nations that commerce can never do.

"Money can't buy anything else like this wonderful herbal Zam-Buk. It's simply priceless!" says one enthusiastic mother. For injuries, Zam-Buk is the indispensable ever-ready healer. . Where there is any skin or scalp disease, Zam-Buk is magical in extracting germs and poisonous impurities and growing new healthy skin. Being prepared exclusively from pure refined herbal essences, all highly concentrated. Zam-Buk retains its medicinal virtues indefinitely. It never goes ranced and useless like fatty salves and ointments do. Yet, whilst so much more safer, purer and reliable, herbal Zam-Buk costs no more to buy.

From Stadacona St., Montreal, Mrs. Villiers, writes :- " For healing, give me Zam-Buk! It is the finest thing I know. It saved me from a poisoned hand, rid my three children of scalp sores, and healed my husband's badly crushed finger. We wouldn't be without it at any price. hore lasting effect on international selings. In business there is always a truggle. I may, for instance, have to nake money at your expense, or you hay have to make money at my exense. The struggle may be friendly, nay even be co-operative; but it is truggle nevertheless. In sport there also a struggle. One is never 'diminue' -let me see, you are never diminished et down. You can never lose. You play your best, you give your best and /ictory or defeat there is the clean, sinhere joy of sport; golf, tennis, football anything you like.

In business you have practically the came rules of fair play. But they are isually not observed both in letter and spirit as in sport. True, I have seen the portsmanlike type of big business man who would prefer to lose everything he had and start all over again at the botom, rather than accept a fee or an nonor which had not been earned fairly contests. This is the one splendid thing But the odds, I will admit, are somethat sport can do to improve relations what in favor of the athlete. Temptation to deceive is perhaps easier to redist on the field of sport with the eyes of the crowd upon you, than behind the the undertaking of the project. "Sport is more powerful and, I believe, closed doors of the business office. But ness all the more worth fighting for. I the man on the corner and his competitor are both playing the game fairly. houldn't they rejoice in seeing each other succeed? Each must give up something in order that both may win.

JOY OF OPPONENT. "Last June I was playing in the final round of the British championships at Wimbledon, outside London, against my dear friend and team-mate, Henri WANTED.-MEN MECHANICALLY IN-Cochet. In the fifth and last set had six-match points. Think of that! Six times when one point would have given me the match. And I did not get them! "'Oh, you had bad luck. Bad luck! That's too bad!' That's what people said to me afterward. But I did not sel so at all. I didn't in the least mind losing, all my feeling was one of joy at that magnificent fight of my friend when he was so close to defeat. fruly, in six years I have never seen anything like it upon the courts. I made me-you know-gasp at his wonderful play, it left me filled with adniration for him. Suppose that it had sappened as it has happened sometimes hat my opponent is a Japanese or a Spaniard. Would I not have the same admiration for him? Of course. f someone in France tried to start a war gainst Japan and told me what wicked ellows they were, would I not be able to say no? Would I not be able to tell hem that I know something of the nen in Japan? And what I know is not at all what you would have me
