PEACE RIVER OUTLET IS DISCUSSED

ANOTHER HALIBUT Schooner SUFFERS FROM STORMS

Experts Agree That Use of Present Lines Affords Most Economical Means of Access

Obed route favored in preference to Monkman or Peace Pass at session of investigating committee in Ottawa

OTTAWA, March 16.—Proposed railway routes for the Pacific coast outlet from the Peace River district were discussed this morning at a sitting of the railway and canals committee which has been delegated to make an investigation into the problem.

Engineers from the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways, who prepared joint reports on the situation, were examined and all agreed that it would be more economical to handle Peace River business over existing lines until traffic is many times what it is at present.

STATEMENT BY C.N.R. OFFICIAL

RESULT OF TAX APPEAL SHOULD BE SATISFACTORY TO ALL SAYS R. R. NICHOL

Commenting on the decision given in the Canadian National Railways appeal, R. R. Nichol, C.N.R. taxation commissioner, before leaving for Winnipeg today said: "It seems to me the result should be satisfactory to all parties concerned. While it upholds the company's contention that the property was greatly over assessed, the city at the same time will receive an increase in taxes over the amount paid by the company for 1926.

"It is to be hoped that the air has now been cleared and that the matter will be considered as closed and will not in any way affect the friendly relations between the city and the railway company.

"The company values highly the goodwill of the people of Prince Rupert and would not willingly do anything to jeopardize the same.

"The prosperity of the city or the railway company will reflect on each other, and it is the desire of the railway company to co-operate with the city.

HARVEY FRASER IS SERIOUSLY ILL IN SOUTHERN CITY

A private wire received from Vancouver this morning indicated that Harvey Fraser, who went south about ten days ago to attend a meeting in Seattle of the Sheet Metal Workers Union, and subsequently the Liberal Convention in Vancouver, had been taken seriously ill in the latter city. While information in the wire was not explicit, it intimated that spinal meningitis was suspected. He was intermittently conscious and unconscious.

Harvey Fraser is one of the real old timers in Prince Rupert and has always been actively engaged in political and athletic matters. It is hoped that later information will be reassuring and that the illness may not prove as serious as the message would indicate.

RETAIL MERCHANTS' MONTHLY MEETING

Diamond Jubilee of Confederation and Governor General's Visit Among Matters Discussed

The Retail Merchants' Association had a well attended dinner meeting last evening in the Commodore Cafe when various matters relating to the future policy of the association were discussed.

A letter from the Native Sons of Canada asking that a delegate attend a meeting of the committee to arrange for the fitting celebration of Canada's Diamond Jubilee was read and the association will be represented at the next meeting of the committee.

The visit of the Governor General and party to Prince Rupert on April 16 and 17 was also referred to by members of the Association and it was finally decided that store proprietors would be asked to close their shops for an hour on the Saturday morning when the boat arrived from the south in order that all might have an opportunity to join in the welcome given by the citizens.

The meeting, which provoked much discussion as to various matters of policy, lasted until nearly 9 o'clock.

BRADY ASKS ABOUT ESTIMATES FOR HIS DISTRICT OF SKEENA

In the course of committee of supply at the House of Commons last week, J. C. Brady, M.P. for Skeena, spoke as follows:

As the hon. minister of public works at the outset stated that he was not very sure that the money voted in the supplementary estimates which were passed by the House would be utilized, I am naturally interested to find out what will be the conditions in the district I represent. I find in the supplementary estimates there were items to the extent of $62,200. In the main, estimates these items are eliminated, and the only items I notice in my district are two very small amounts, one of $2,300 and one of $1,300. I am rather more surprised than I can express at this omission, and I feel that something is wrong. If these items comprising $62,000 were considered essential last year, surely they are essential this year. The minister said a few moments ago that only urgent works had been included in the supplementaries. I am quite sure that the same considerations should govern the inclusion of these items in the main estimates. If I am in error, perhaps the minister will advise me whether these items will be included in the main estimates.

According to explanation by the minister of public works, Hon. J. C. Elliott, the sums referred to by Mr. Brady were still carried in supplementary estimates so were not contained in main estimates.

CONVENTION WAS GREAT SUCCESS

OPTIMISM PERVADED AIR AT LIBERAL MEETING IN VANCOUVER AND DISCUSSION WAS FREE AND FRANK

DELEGATES RETURN

Optimism pervaded the air at the recent provincial Liberal convention in Vancouver and the prospects of the party in British Columbia are exceedingly bright declared Ald. W. M. Brown, one of the delegates from Prince Rupert to the big gathering, who returned to the city by today's steamer from the south.

Studied consideration was given various matters of importance and there was decided lack of tendency to railroad things through such as often features such gatherings. The meeting, nevertheless, was of one accord as respected matters pertaining to the internal affairs of the party.

There was particularly free and frank discussion on the matter of campaign funds and the convention went on record as being in favor of publication in future of such contributions.

There were three hundred and twenty-five accredited delegates from all parts of the province at the meeting. Ald. Brown was a member of the resolutions committee while H. F. Giessey was on the credentials committee. Other delegates from Prince Rupert district were W. D. Vance of the city and A. R. Malory of Port Clements.

Labor Agitators in Shanghai Win Favor of Unions and Are Conducting Terror Campaign

SHANGHAI, March 16.—There was little change in the military situation today although the Cantonese armies are continuing their drive toward the city.

One hundred and fifty specially trained agitators from Hankow have apparently completely won the good graces of local Labor Unions and are conducting a campaign of intimidation and murder with the object in view of ensuring a solid and prompt response for a general strike when the call is issued. Under the direction of these agitators, labor unrest in Shanghai is increasing daily. The chief method of the agitators is to work on their fellow countrymen's fears of personal injury to their families, thus creating terrorism throughout the ranks of labor.

BAPTIST GIRLS HAVE ENJOYABLE EVENING

Successful Affair at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Mussallem Last Night

A very happy time was spent last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mussallem, the occasion being an "at home" given by members of the Young Ladies' Auxiliary of the Baptist Church to their friends.

Mrs. W. F. Price gave an inspiring address urging the girls to make the best of themselves. She told the story of Miss Mary Slessor, a poor Scotch girl, whose father was a drunkard, working her way up from a factory girl to, as she was called, "the uncrowned queen of Africa" because of the wonderful work done by her among the natives of Africa.

A "Mother-Daughter" dialogue given by six girls—Misses Aletta McKinley, Edna Gilker, Mabel Ivarson, Muriel Lindsay, Catherine Mussallem and Yvonne Terrien, was very effective. Musical numbers were given by Misses Aletta McKinley and Mabel Ivarson.

A good offering for the work the girls are doing was received.

Ketchikan Fish Boat Limp to Port After Fight with Elements

PILOTHOUSE AND MASTS OF AMERICAN VESSEL CAROLAN WERE SWEEPED OVERBOARD—CREW, AFTER PERILS, SAFE IN PETERSBURG

PETERSBURG, Alaska, March 16.—Battered and practically crippled following a five-day combat with storms on the open sea, the halibut vessel Carolan of Ketchikan crept into port here yesterday. Members of the crew were suffering from the effects of long exposure to the sub-Arctic blizzard in watersoaked clothing, eating raw food.

A giant wave swept the masts and pilot house overboard in a blinding snowstorm southwest of Yakutat, 150 miles northwest of here on Friday. Jan Blythe, taking a midnight turn at the wheel, followed the deck gear over the side but saved himself by grasping a line. The crew battled for thirty-six hours before they made sufficient repairs to enable the craft to head for port. The forecastle was flooded, the cooking of food being thus prevented.

PRAIRIES STILL HAVING BLIZZARD

Heavy Blanket of Snow Lies Over Alberta and Saskatchewan and Traffic is Dislocated

WINNIPEG, March 16.—Blizzard conditions prevailed again today in Alberta and Saskatchewan where a heavy blanket of snow covered the ground. Street car and automobile traffic in the cities has been badly dislocated.

At many points traffic was almost completely paralyzed owing to huge snowdrifts. In Northern Saskatchewan, it is reported, passenger trains were tied up awaiting the aid of snow plows.

In Alberta, Edmonton in the north and Lethbridge in the south had only light snowfall but the central and eastern sections of the province were virtually smothered under drifts.

The storm is conceded by old timers to be the worst in twenty-five years.

Manitoba pretty well escaped the storm.

AVIATION IN CANADA.

Civil aviation in Canada is almost unknown to the majority of her people, as its operations are carried out in the vast hinterland for the purposes of forest and fish conservation, air survey and the rapid transport of prospectors and scientists in their work of the development of natural resources, says the Royal Bank of Canada's monthly letter. The press carry many despatches about the development of air transportation throughout the Empire, yet few Canadians realize that Canada has the only two self-sustaining private air transport routes in the Empire. These are on an absolutely commercial basis, having no government subsidy or contract whatsoever. Means of transportation, their relative difficulty or ease, their speed, safety and comfort play a great part in the history of civilization. The railway, steamship, automobile, telegraph, telephone and radio have greatly modified our political, industrial and social conditions. Air transportation, in its turn, must now be added to those mechanical influences which are changing modern life so radically. The Great War temporarily diverted the progress of aviation from its natural course, but this science has now resumed its place as a constructive agency in our economic structure. Its preparedness for national defense will be strongest where its constructive use in civil life is most wide-spread. Both in war and in peace, aviation requires a trained personnel for both piloting and maintenance.

WIDE FIELD FOR OPERATIONS.

After the Armistice, Canada found a wide field for flying operations awaiting development. To the north of the railways lies a vast extent of virgin country where modern means of transportation are non-existent and methods of travel have changed little in the past two centuries. The growing importance of the forests of Canada, the need for their better conservation, and the approaching depletion of the more accessible stands of timber through the immense demands of the growing pulp and paper industry, were attracting public attention to the need for improved forest services. Flying has provided for this want, and the government of Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia have established air services for this control. One hundred and sixty-six million acres of forests are now protected by regular air patrols in Canada.

The Royal Canadian Air Force, through its various stations throughout the country, is doing most valuable service in many lines of activity. Fire detection and forest inventory work are carried on over the Crown Lands of the prairie provinces. During the fishing seasons, patrols are maintained along the Pacific Coast for fishery protection; these patrols have done much to prevent the use of illegal nets, fishing during closed seasons, or without license or in restricted areas.

The aerial survey work of this service has been of inestimable value to the prospector and to various branches of government service. A photograph taken during the investigation of the water power possibilities of a river may contain information as to the topographical features of the district which may be invaluable in map revision. It may, at the same time, show clearly the nature of the forest cover and therefore be of value to the forest services; or, the geological features shown in the picture may be of interest to the Department of Mines.

HAS BEEN AN UPHILL STRUGGLE.

So far as private services are concerned, the development of aviation in Canada, as elsewhere, has been an uphill struggle. Formerly, one great handicap to the development of commercial flying in Canada was the short operating season. Several companies, however, have now overcome this handicap, and are operating throughout the winter months with success. These commercial services operate in various capacities, the principal work being fire protective services for various pulp, paper and lumber companies, and the transport of men and supplies from the railways to the more remote mining camps. Examples of winter work being carried on this season, include the patrol of the Hudson Straits, in order to determine ice conditions during the winter months, the transport of men and material from the railhead to Port Nelson, and the scouting of seal schools in the North Atlantic for the sealing fleet. Commercial flying may be said to have passed beyond the pioneer stage; and, given efficient management and suitable types of aircraft, its extension will come naturally on an economic basis.

Kitwancool Valley, Place of Desolation, is Described by Writer in Railway Magazine

Few parts of the western world present identical opportunities for picturesque and exciting tales as does Canada's Pacific Province, British Columbia, says W. B. Gray, writing in Canadian National Railways magazine. Despite a thousand stories garbed in fiction, despite many thousand words which have been written in special articles, and despite a wealth of folk lore and native legend which has been handed down from immemorial times, there is, in Northern British Columbia, one of the strangest communities that can be found in this modern day and generation; a community of which little is known less written about, and which has escaped the eye and interest of thousands of close by travellers, for within a few miles of a transcontinental railway exists a tribe of Indians who have withdrawn themselves into almost complete isolation and who are unto themselves alone a law.

Along the famous Grease Trail, the first passable trail between the Skeena and the Naas Rivers, famed for their salmon fisheries, and only a matter of five miles from the Canadian National Railways lies Kitwancool Indian reserve and village. Almost due north of Kitwancool, of totem pole fame whose beauties have been yearly enjoyed by travellers along the railway line, lies this secluded village, snuggling in the valley of the Kitwancool River, a tributary to the Skeena. Here, the Kitwancools live, forming a community of some five hundred people. It is a village typical of almost all Indian settlements in British Columbia. Bizarre "grave houses," of fantastic and weird design, wooden homes sheltering individual families (differentiating from the older form of community dwelling), lean and crooked dogs, children none too well clothed and traditionally dirty, are all to be found within its confines, but this village and its people are unique in that they exist in an aloofness that is incomparable at this stage of Canadian civilization.

PRESENT INTERFERENCE

The Kitwancools resent the interference of any officials, government or otherwise; they passively accept the occasional visit of police, and suffer neither the advice nor assistance from church, municipal or other persons, openly showing their dislike for the white person who intrudes on their domain, so that these visits are few and far between. Most of the visitors who have managed to evade the outer fringe of "sentries," who guard the limits of the reserve, have been unceremoniously asked to vacate the place, as the following incident will demonstrate: In 1924, a man named Horne, representing private interests, went into the territory ostensibly to look over the timber of which there is a valuable stand. He was suddenly apprehended by two members of the tribe, who led him to the village headquarters, where an ancient bugle was blown, the tribe assembled, headed by the chief and council. A form of "third degree" was adopted in questioning him as to his business. This completed, the hastily convened court vaguely warned him to keep away and with an escort he was led to the edge of the reserve.

Some two years ago Archbishop A. U. DePencier with a party of ecclesiastics visited the tribe. He was accorded a warm welcome, but that same feeling of distance, which has characterized the actions of the Kitwancools in their dealings with the white man for many years, was discernible.

HOW LADIES FARED

In 1925, three Seattle ladies ventured into the territory. It was during the summer months, when most of the male members of the tribe were absent on fishing expeditions. Those who remained suffered these visitors to stay for a short time and to take the accompanying photographs, which it is believed are almost the only ones extant. Certain it is that whenever a camera has been exposed by visitors they have been ordered away. For this reason, these pictures are unique, as few if any others have been brought from the village.

Within more recent times a report was circulated that the tribe had taken drastic action against the members of the police who went into the reserve to investigate certain charges. The reports grew in magnitude until in certain quarters it was said murder had been committed. The happening in itself was not thrilling in any way, but exemplifies the feeling which exists in the minds of these people against law and order. Reports emanated from the surrounding district that the natives of Kitwancool were obtaining "fire-water." Owing to the attitude of the tribe and the usual silence of the members regarding matters affecting what they consider their rights, definite evidence was hard to obtain. Eventually, however, charges of violating the liquor laws of the Province of British Columbia, as well as the sections of the Indian Act which pertain, were laid against Alexander Smith, the head chief of the tribe. Armed with the proper authority, police officers went into the village, arrested Smith and brought him out to Kitwancool for incarceration, pending trial. From the moment of their arrival until they had left the confines of the reserve the officers were subjected to a series of annoying incidents, while female members of the tribe followed along the trail shouting invective and haranguing the party in typical Indian style. From this incident grew the story that there was more trouble at Kitwancool but the affair petered out and once more the proverbial quiet of the place returned.

And, what may be asked, has brought about this strange situation in a civilized country and within a few miles of a progressive and thriving community like Kitwancool?

OLD TROUBLE

The only answer to this question and to the attitude of the tribe to officialdom or white man's interference would appear to be trouble which originated nearly forty years ago, when an outbreak of measles startled the aboriginal lands of the tribe. Like a forest fire, this epidemic ran through the Kitwancool people, with the result that nearly every family suffered. In many cases death visited the home taking its toll of much cherished young lives. For this the tribesmen blamed a medicine man called Itoo, who, caught up in the queer ramifications of the feud which had been kindled by the sickness, was one day found murdered. A tribesman, Kitwancool Jim, who had suffered the loss of a beloved son, was caught in the tangled skein of evidence which apparently was not overly clear, involving as it did witch-craft and high feeling. From Victoria, the capital of the Province, came members of the old B.C. Constabulary, who endeavored to unravel the mystery. During this period Kitwancool Jim, as if to accentuate his guilt, fled to the mountains and wooded country which surrounds the area and for many months remained in hiding. While no definite evidence was ever adduced which would be sufficiently strong to convict him of the crime, his flight was accepted as proof of some withheld knowledge. On the advice of one of the traders, who at that time was accepted in a friendly manner the fugitive eventually showed himself at the edge of the clearing, apparently ready to come and help in the clearing up of the mystery. In the excitement, an overzealous policeman, fearing that he might be armed, shot Kitwancool Jim dead. And so was engendered the trouble between the government and the Kitwancools, a trouble which has been kept alive by more than two generations and which will probably exist for many years to come, for the younger people are quietly but constantly told of the incident and taught distrust of the white man, his government, or his offers of assistance or advice.

Albeit the Kitwancools are not lacking in the attributes which are much to be desired in the upbuilding of modern cities. They have a distinct community spirit, commendable in any people and, perhaps, worthy of an example to many white communities. Although they refuse aid in the building of roads, churches, schools or other enterprises they have, through their own efforts and funds, erected a creditable town hall, a dance hall, and a church. The roads and bridges which permit egress to the Skeena River they keep in repair themselves without governmental aid. In the completion of these works they have maintained their usual attitude, permitting no help nor advice.

PICTURESQUE SITUATION

The village is picturesquely situated in the midst of mountains, which tower in mighty majesty, while the logged off lands, which are cultivated, are fertile and highly productive. Some years ago a representative of the Canadian National Railways investigated the area with the idea of settling immigrants on the land. The project, however, was abandoned, largely, it is said, owing to the hostile aspect of the tribe.

The country round about the reserve is a wild and fascinating one; valuable stands of timber are to be found in various sections; it abounds in game of all kinds; while fur bearing animals are plentiful. In fact, trapping forms a part of the winter occupation of the natives and the returns from this make up a goodly part of their annual income. In order to obtain the best skins they venture far afield from these reserve limits, which have been set by the government. The pronouncement setting definitely the boundaries of this reserve is not accepted in very good part by the members of the tribe, who claim a much larger area and, unofficially, what are almost sovereign rights over the lands on which they live and which are adjacent to them. While no overt acts have been committed as a consequence of this ruling, there is an undercurrent of feeling amongst the tribe, according to those few outsiders who have come into close touch with the Kitwancools, that they have been rather shabbily treated in this part of their relations with the government. Claiming that in earlier days they wandered without let or hindrance over the

FISHING INDUSTRY.

Prince Rupert, B.C. March 16, 1927.

Editor, Daily News. Allow me a little space in your valuable paper. In looking over that fine new fishing vessel, Helen II, Captain Hevmluer, with its line coiler and net to catch halibut, we must give him great credit in going to work to try an easier method of catching fish. An individual has spent the amount of $3,000 in an experiment like that so we must watch with interest. He told us he had done it in Denmark and he always wanted to try it in this country but he never had the money till now. He made good last year so he built this new boat Helen II and bought the gear. Of course, there are always people who shake their heads and say it won't work. I tell them to wait and see before condemning anything. If it was the Cold Storgae or some other corporation, they would be making a holler to the government for subsidy toward the undertaking. I always like to give credit to any man who tries to improve things.

As I look back some time in the eighty's I landed in New York from Hong Kong, China, in a ship called the Imperial of Boston, U.S.A. Then I shipped in a four master ship called the Sir Robert Firnie of London and left New York with a cargo of case oil for Calcutta, India. While lying in the river Hoolie we were alongside a ship called the Savanka of Liverpool. It was in the southwest monsoons you had to send down yards and mast in sailing ships in those days. This ship Savanka took a whole day to send down two yards, topgallant and royal. I was at that time what they called the boat-swan of this ship. I pointed out to the chief officer how long they took and he gave me orders to send down our yards tomorrow morning. I told him if he would give me full power, I would have the ten yards down on deck before 5 a.m. He was a fine man and said "go ahead." I had learned a new method of sending yards down in Hong Kong in the last Yankee ship. Topgallant, Royal and Skysail yards were all on deck that evening. The captain came on board and sent for me. He had been told how I sent down the yards. He said I had done nothing according to the book and had broken all laws governing the British Merchant Marine. He was very angry with me about what I had done. He pointed to Nelson and Admiral Drake. I pointed out to him the yards lying on deck. "They are on deck and no one is hurt though perhaps I did not do it according to the book," I said. "Where did you see such a way to do it as that?" he asked.

I told him lying in Hong Kong in an American ship. That finished it. Then he got real mad. He was one of those human beings prejudiced against anything Yankee. He ordered me out of the cabin to the chief officer to make up my time and pay me off. So I got paid off for trying something new. The captain, a bullheaded Englishman, and I, a strong headed Scotchman, I don't think any one of the two knew much.

Hoping that Capt. Hevmluer makes a success of his undertaking, hoping he is entitled to the name they give him—the Danish Prince.

ROBERT HANNA, Fisherman.

HIS NATIONALITY

Editor, Daily News:

Will you please allow me space through the medium of your paper. I have been called all kinds of pet names of every nationality in the world. I want to enlighten any who may be in doubt of what I am. I am a Canadian-born British subject. I did my bit and was disabled both in the South African and the World War, and, if called upon, I am ready again for the next. There is so much discussion throughout the whole Dominion about nationality that I am outlining my own opinion. Those who come to live in any province in Canada, in my estimation, are good Canadians. If they are not, they should be.

Thanking you for space, I am a booster for Prince Rupert and for the whole Dominion.

G. F. BRINE.

Canada First (By John Hackett)

Much racy literature we read. Of every nation, every creed. Some all fiction, some all fact. While some both fact and fiction lack.

Of Canada we want to hear. The things we're doing far and near. Along the line from Coast to Coast. We're doing things, but never boast.

Why do Canadian papers flare. A head line with a rosy glare. And rave about the wit and grace Of people of a foreign race?

There's no check on space or time. That's given to some rippling rhyme. About Bill Blue or Timbucktoo. Who drank a pint of liquid glue.

We like to read the foreign news. Of Uncle Sam and moonshine booze. And how John Bull is proud to blow Of our possessions, don't you know.

But don't repeat it o'er and o'er. Don't spread it out and make us sore. We have no time to read that stuff. Canadian news is good enough.

Canucks don't care a tinker's dam. For King Alphonse or Uncle Sam; Or any other foreign guys. Who try to force before our eyes. Some fessel tale or staler joke. Of why Lord Hinkedink went broke. Of what the Chinks in China do. If Bolsheviks are red or blue. Or France is fed on musty peas. Or Turkey's turks are full of fleas.

That truck will do to fill up space. But tell us what is taking place. And what the real Canadian thinks. About deporting Japs and Chinks.

OONA RIVER SCHOOL NEEDS SOME REPAIRS

H. F. Anderson of Forcher Island Settlement is Business Visitor in City

H. F. Anderson of Oona River is a business visitor in the city. Mr. Anderson states that the condition of the public school at Oona River is not satisfactory. The place needs the stumps in the ground pulled and a fence put in for the protection of the children. The building, too, needs painting. Neither are conditions inside the school room of the best. It requires better ventilation and the walls and window sashes are also in need of paint. The school is prettily located.

Everybody at Oona River is busy now with gardens and fixing up boats in readiness for the opening of the fishing season.

There is going to be a big St. Patrick's dance at Oona River tomorrow night.

Development work on the Devlin zinc property during the coming year will include the continuation of the present tunnel which has not yet been driven far enough to encounter the ore body. Word to this effect has been received by C. Williams from J. J. Murphy, who inspected the property two years ago and who expects to be here in June.

Having taken in his supplies to Camp 8 over the snow, A. Davidson will commence development work on the Silver Board property this month. He will continue the tunnel started last year and expects to encounter surface showings at depth.

Two silver grey fox skins, one red fox and some mink and martin skins were shipped south on Monday by J. Flynn, who is engaged in trapping on the east side of Kitsault flats. The fox skins, which were caught on the flats early in the winter, were beautiful specimens.

GOT HER FEET WET CAUGHT BAD COLD

Mrs. Ernest Hall, Cardinal, Ont., writes: "Last winter I got my feet wet and I caught a terrible cold. I took different kinds of medicine, but none did me any good and I seemed to be getting worse all the time.

One day I was reading about what your medicine had done for others, so I thought I would get a bottle. After I had taken a few doses I found it was helping me, so I took a few bottles and was completely restored to health. I cannot praise

JUDGMENT IN APPEAL CASE

WAS LENGTHY DOCUMENT — COMMENTS OF MR. JUSTICE GREGORY

Basing his decision largely on the evidence of G. H. Arnold, local broker, and D. W. Reeve, Vancouver valuator, Mr. Justice Gregory reduced the municipal assessment of the Canadian National Railway Co., from $2,924,360.00 to $1,289,164.00 in a lengthy judgment handed down in the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon. On the parcels of land between Moresby and Park Avenues and also on the land near the mouth of Hays Creek, His Lordship placed a different valuation than either Mr. Arnold or Mr. Reeve. With these exceptions, however, he accepted the figures of Mr. Arnold of $1,223,978.00 and the valuation of Mr. Reeve at $1,077,634.00 and added the two together. Dividing this total by two, he then added on 12 1/2 per cent to reach the total which later had to be computed. This assessment of His Lordship includes the leasehold property. From which for the past few years the city has received some additional taxation in addition to the agreement calling for a flat rate of $45,000 per year. Taking all this into consideration it is estimated that the city will receive in the neighborhood of $1,600 more in taxes from the company this year than under the old agreement which expired in February. At the conclusion of His Lordship's decision, counsel argued the matter of costs of the action, which were fixed at $1,500 and were awarded to the company to be paid by the city.

When court convened at 2.30, His Lordship commenced to read his findings and was occupied fully thirty minutes before reaching the point of announcing his decision. He reviewed the evidence of the various witnesses, pointing out the facts which had impressed him and, except in minor instances, attached little importance to the evidence of many of the city's witnesses. To him, he said, it had been a very trying case and he was indebted to counsel for the manner in which they had conducted themselves. He had immediately retired to his chamber after the session of the court Monday night and continued there until 1.30 going over the notes and exhibits. It had been impossible to have the stenographer transcribe the evidence, and he had been compelled to go on his own notes. It was a regrettable thing, however, in his opinion, that the city and the company could not settle their differences amicably and not resort to the courts. His Lordship then proceeded to refer to the evidence in connection with the assessment in 1922 and in 1927 in which there was a great change from the value of the city's property as compared with the holdings of the company.

GOOD OLD DAYS
Several times in his findings, His Lordship referred to the good old days of the real estate boom and suggested that many probably thought those days were nearer at hand again than the evidence would indicate. The city had not grown as rapidly as expected and the situation must be considered in arriving at values. Later on, he expressed the hope that Prince Rupert would grow so that industrial plants would be crowding one another on the waterfront. "One cannot but admire the faith of many in the city's future," he said. Possibly the wheel of fortune might change at any time.

From the evidence, it appeared to His Lordship that the land spoken of as residential property by the city's witnesses was only the fringes left over after the town had been subdivided and represented very poor residential property. On the other hand, the areas which were considered would be suitable for trackage or railroad facilities were not needed for the present or the immediate future, according to the evidence of Mr. Tobey, who had said that there would be no need of anything further in this line until the city had grown to have a population of 50,000. There was also, it seemed, plenty of subdivided property available at the present time for residences. Further, the number of lots which had reverted to the city for taxes had greatly increased from 1922 to 1927.

In referring to the manner of assessing the waterfront the judge said it appeared that the assessor had placed a value on the land and which adjoined the water and also on the land under the water which adjoined the foreshore. In other words it appeared to him that there had been a duplication of the assessment of the waterfront.

REVIEWING EVIDENCE.
In going over the evidence of the several witnesses, His Lordship seemed to value only the evidence of T. McClymont for the city, who had sworn as to actual sales made. It should be remembered that these lots were subdivided and ready for use in most cases and were on streets. The land which was compared with these in value was not divided and very often was far removed from streets. The evidence of the assessor had been very frank and was based chiefly on a comparison of values as between city property and the railway company. He could not agree, however, with his judgment.

The evidence of H. C. Wright, of North Vancouver, His Lordship said, was chiefly of value as it showed the manner of assessment there. He did not think that it was a fair comparison however, to take values in that city, situated on Burrard Inlet, with the values in Prince Rupert. The evidence of G. C. Walker and Theo. Collart was very briefly referred to, and His Lordship placed no value on it. Alderman Stephens, in his opinion, was prejudiced and was not a frank witness. His answers were evasive and not direct. On the other hand, G. H. Arnold and D. W. Reeve were complimented very highly by His Lordship, who placed great reliance in their computations. They both showed that they had examined the property in question very carefully and gave very direct answers to all questions. Mr. Reeve had also been given a very high rating by H. C. Wright, witness for the city.

RUPERT'S DESTINY
After dealing in detail with the evidence, His Lordship gave his judgment and then said, "I believe that Prince Rupert is destined to become a great city. However, it is necessary to get together and pull together and some of you may still see the day when the waterfront is crowded with industrial plants."

KITWANCOOL VALLEY, PLACE OF DESOLATION, IS DESCRIBED BY WRITER IN WESTERN MAGAZINE.

the tribal customs and rituals which have been handed down for centuries from father to son. They are, according to native legend, members of the Eagle Crest clan, which in former times was a strong and important branch of the Tsimshian family. They are hard workers, industriously storing up, during the summer, supplies for the winter. The young men go to the fishing grounds, while the younger females work in the canneries along the river. At home only the older people are left, and these jealously guard the approaches to the village summoning all inhabitants by bugle call upon the arrival of any stranger.

Proud of Lineage

Proud of their lineage as Tsimshians, they have adhered to many of the arts and crafts of the tribe, who in former days were noted for their handicraft in the primitive works peculiar to Pacific Coast Indians. Differentiating somewhat from many of the tribes, the younger Kitwanoos have been taught the ancient and intricate work of basket weaving, as well as the making of many of the household articles from grasses and roots of trees. Some few examples of the work which have been brought out from the reserve stamp themselves as genuinely valuable and collectors are anxious to obtain them. There has been a tendency among the younger generation to be weaned away from the old fashioned arts with which their forebears have been associated. The braves and squaws prefer more modern and less tedious money-making methods, with the result that only the older members of family still patiently weave and work into designs and articles the native grasses and roots.

It is said, however, that the Kitwanoos insist that younger members of the tribe be schooled in the finer work of basket weaving. Examples of this work show baskets so skilfully twined with cedar roots and bark and bound with grasses that water can be held in them, and they are used as kitchen utensils in many households. These better-worked examples, of this art are fast disappearing into collectors' hands, as well as those of other tribes who barter or sell their product; but provided the Kitwanoos continue to be instructed in this work, there is hope that the present supply of the arts and crafts, representing the handicraft of a disappearing people, may survive.

TRIBAL TRADITIONS

The traditions of the tribe have been perpetuated in the usual manner by carved totem poles. The poles in Kitwanoos number 28 and, while not so massive as some to be seen at Kitwanga or at other points along the line of the Canadian National Railways, are, to students of the subject, excellent exhibits, with workmanship as neat and

The Well-Managed Home

THE manager of a household is the purchasing agent for a large proportion of the family needs. In order to do a good job she must know what, when and where to buy. She must study goods and the concerns which make goods and have them to sell. She must put her home on a business basis and run it on business principles in order to make the most of the family income.

Information is the only basis for intelligent purchasing. And the right way to get the greatest amount of necessary information is to read the advertisements.

Advertisements tell you what is new and good in merchandise. They reveal improvements and inventions to make your home life easier, more comfortable and more convenient. They give you information about a thousand and one things that are useful.

Every manager of a household—every member of the household who shares the responsibility for the family's welfare—should make a habit of reading the ads.

THREE TEAMS MAY BE TIED WHEN CRIBBAGE LEAGUE SEASON ENDS

The Native Sons of Canada defeated the Knights of Columbus last night in a postponed Cribbage League game by a score of 14 to 13.

The final game of the League schedule will take place next week. The Canadian National Operators and Cold Storage will meet and, should the former win, there will be a tie for leadership of the second half of the season. Should the Moose also win, there would be three teams tied. On the other hand, if the Cold Storage team wins, it will take first place and will play the Canadian National Operators, winners of the first half, in a play-off for city championship.

The league standing is as follows:

DENTISTRY

Dr. Jos. Maguire Returns!

I told you I would come back after a year. I have kept my promise.

HONESTY, TRUTH AND JUSTICE IN ALL MY DEALINGS HAS RETAINED MY FRIENDS AND PATIENTS HERE.

I have tested this friendship and my patients have tested my skill, care and judgment in all their dental work. I deserve your patronage.

While in the south and east, I have taken many post graduate courses and I am better prepared to take care of your dental needs.

Infected teeth have caused no end of suffering and decline in health. Various diseases that have to do with poor health can be traced to the infected teeth of the individual. X-Rays tell the story but do not cure. The cause must be removed to give the body a chance to come back to normal.

I AM HERE TO SERVE YOU AGAIN. YOUR APPOINTMENT SHOULD BE MADE AT ONCE, BY MAIL OR PHONE.

TWO-DAY SERVICE FOR OUT-OF-TOWN PATIENTS.

Anesthetics given under the supervision of the physicians of Prince Rupert—no better in the Dominion of Canada. Remember—we have two scholarships here in a town of 5,000.

COME TODAY.
