Need of Smelter at Prince Rupert Made Clear At Meeting Yesterday Discuss Matter With Pat Daly

Prince Rupert is in the centre of a district that has the mines, the rail and water transportation, the site, the water power possibilities, and everything which seems necessary except the capital and the moving spirit to bring all these together and establish a smelter with which to treat the ore which is produced. At present most of it goes out of the district and the rest goes to Anyox. The difficulty is that Anyox has no customs smelter suited to treat the varied ores of the district. The question is whether Prince Rupert people can co-ordinate their efforts and bring about the desired result.

The matter was brought before a group of local citizens, George Nickerson presiding, yesterday afternoon in the city hall by Pat Daly, Stewart prospector, miner, and promoter, head of the Pat Daly Mining Company of Montreal, which is today developing the Mountain Boy on Bear River.

Mr. Daly says he sees five or six new mines becoming regular shippers at Stewart within the next few years sending out five to six thousand tons of ore or concentrates a day and he cannot see why Prince Rupert does not get busy and secure a smelter here. While they might not get the business of the Premier Company or of the Consolidated, there will be plenty of independent shippers to make a customs smelter a paying proposition. The city is in the heart of the greatest mineral country in Canada yet no plant had yet been started in the district to handle the ores. It was the enterprise of the C.P.R. that had started the smelter at Trail. If the railway had not backed it, the present industry would not have been established. Here was one of the greatest opportunities in the world for a paying business, one that would pay better than a gold mine.

At Stewart the George Copper and the Big Missouri had already been taken and both these mines would produce a large amount of low grade ore. It had been said that any time there was a good mine opened, one of the big companies would grab it. His experience did not prove this to be true. Most of the good mines had been turned down by some big company. The Premier Company did not do a thing in the way of reaching out for other properties until the Consolidated came into Stewart. The Imperial Oil people had been trying to get control of the Mountain Boy but he had given the first chance to the Amoco. "It is my opinion without a doubt that the properties on Portland Canal would provide plenty of ore to keep a smelter in operation. A plant to treat 100 tons a day would cost about $300,000." He suggested that the citizens of Prince Rupert, the government and the railway should co-operate to secure the plant. There was no question about the supply of ore.

It was pointed out by some of those present that there were suitable sites available which could be secured by a reputable concern practically free of cost, that water was available and power could be developed. It was also mentioned that there would be a considerable supply of ore from interior points as well as from Portland Canal. An effort will be made to get all the data in connection with these so that a concrete proposal may be made to any likely to be interested.

MAYOR TAYLOR IS ACCUSED BY A CLERGYMAN

REV. WILLIAM OGDEN SAYS HE IS ROOT OF WHOLE TROUBLE IN VANCOUVER

HEATED DENIAL MADE

EMPHATIC DECLARATION IN REGARD TO OPEN TOWN BY CHIEF MAGISTRATE

VANCOUVER, Aug. 31.—A heated passage took place between Mayor Taylor and Rev. William Ogden, a Vancouver clergyman, during the meeting of the police commission yesterday. Commissioner Garbutt had moved that Chief Long and Sergeant Detective McLaughlin be asked to resume office and the mayor had seconded it when Rev. Mr. Ogden, who was among the audience, broke in: "Are you sincere. You know what you are doing, Mr. Taylor. Is it right that the man who is responsible for the whole trouble, who is the root of the corruption should adjudicate in his own case?"

Rising from his seat, the mayor replied: "Anybody who says I am the root of the trouble is a liar." Although the mayor's remarks could not be heard above the general uproar he remarked emphatically that he had never advocated an open town.

SIX KILLED FERNIE MINE

BLOWOUT CAUSED GAS TO PENETRATE WORKING WHERE MEN EMPLOYED

TWO HUNDRED ESCAPE

MEN WERE FOUND AT SOME DISTANCE FROM THE FACE OF THE COAL

FERNIE, Aug. 31.—Six miners lost their lives at Coal Creek yesterday at noon when a blowout of gas occurred in Number 1 East mine. Two hundred men were employed in the workings at the time and all but six victims were able to make their way to the surface uninjured. The dead are Peter Dowie, of Coal Creek; Tony Cascoia, Joseph Sedrovitch, Tony Sprlak, and Tony Degeorgia, all of Fernie, and George Perkins Sr. of West Fernie. All the bodies were recovered.

The blowout is believed to have occurred at the working face in Number 16 slope but this is not definitely determined as debris and hundreds of tons of coal dust were thrown about the affected part of the mine by the blowout and prevented penetration by officials.

The strikers men apparently made unsuccessful attempts to reach safety as the bodies were found in some cases at considerable distance from the coal faces. A horse two thousand feet away from the blowout was found suffocated by poisonous gas.

James Dickson, chief inspector of mines, left Victoria last night for the scene and will arrive tomorrow morning.

Gold Sticking Out in Large Yellow Globules on Jewellery Rock Taken From A Mine Near Seward, Alaska

Stated That Ore Supply, Site, Water Power, Transportation and Everything Available Except Capital

SEWARD, August 31.—Having just placed 25 pounds of gold in a bank here, Tom Babcock, partner of D. W. Downey, miners of Nuka Bay, 80 miles from here, exhibited specimens of jewellery rock as rich as any found in Alaska. The gold sticking out in large yellow globules was taken from a 30 inch lead stripped along the surface. He said he planned to send some to the Seattle and Vancouver mining exchanges where he believed they would cause a sensation.

Engineers who examined the Nuka Bay district declared that a number of veins uncovered there place the camp on a parity with Treadwell Mine, near Juneau.

Clear Evidences of Prosperity Seen in Britain by Local Man Who Addressed Rotary Club

Colonel Nicholls Tells of Progress in That Country and of Excellent Results From Unemployment Insurance

That Great Britain is not decadent but prosperous and that the dole system was not ruining the country nor was unemployment much greater than usual was the statements made by Colonel J. W. Nicholls to the Rotary Club at its luncheon yesterday afternoon, George Bryant presiding.

Col. Nicholls said that on his recent visit to England he found that instead of pessimism as he expected, there was the greatest optimism in that country. The reason there was said to be so much unemployment was because today the figures were being collated and published monthly whereas formerly no figures were available. While there was depression in the coal trade, there was great progress in the manufacture of dyes, a business formerly controlled by Germany. The big dye trust last year made a profit of twenty million dollars. Other smaller companies had done well. The older textiles were depressed but on the other hand the manufacture of fibre silk had developed to such an extent that the fibre silk business of the world was controlled by England. While formerly the manufacturing had been concentrated in the midlands or north, today many of them were around London.

Speaking of what is known here as the dole system, Mr. Nicholls said this was really unemployment insurance. It was the finest legislation passed in years. He was heartily in favor of it and thought that with modifications it should be adopted here. There were abuses but these were much offset by the benefits. There were no longer bread lines in Britain. Workmen had a feeling of security instead of being kept servile by fear of unemployment. This did not exist today. There was no servility but at the same time the employers were getting better results from their men. British workmen produced more units per man than any in the world today whereas before the war they were only sixth on the list.

Colonel Nicholls also spoke of the advance of London in the financial world. He believed it was not correct that the financial centre of the world had shifted to New York. Banking houses were growing and there was every evidence of great progress. Britain loaned abroad last year a billion dollars in new loans and a little less than that to their own manufacturing plants. That did not indicate decadence. The speaker then spoke most inter-

Prince Rupert People Gave Hearty Greeting to British Statesman

Ramsay Macdonald and Daughters Met by Officials of City and Expressed Himself Pleased With Gardens and Air of Prosperity

Welcomed by sunny skies and the cheers of hundreds of Prince Rupert people, J. Ramsay Macdonald, former premier of Great Britain, and his daughters, arrived in Prince Rupert this morning, landing to the music of the pipes and being received by the Mayor and Mrs. McMordie and members of the city council, S. D. Macdonald, president of the Trades and Labor Council, Mrs. J. C. McLennan, the president of the Women's Canadian Club, Mrs. Dorton, regent of the Municipal Chapter, I.O.D.E., and Mrs. Brady, wife of the sitting member for Skeena. The young ladies were presented each with a beautiful bouquet of flowers and a miniature totam by Mrs. McMordie on behalf of the city. Some brief speeches were made and the party was driven around the city.

Prince Rupert turned out in full force to welcome the distinguished visitors. With a brilliant sun shining and the water of the harbor looking its bluest, the scene that met Mr. Macdonald's party was exceedingly attractive and the Ex-premier of Great Britain seemed to be enjoying it to the full as he stood on the bridge of the boat as it drew up to the wharf.

Two pipers, Alex MacDonald and Hugh Smith, welcomed the party with a skirl of the pipes and a hearty cheer rang out as they descended the gangplank. Mayor McMordie met them and escorted the party to the station where in a short speech Mr. McMordie expressed the pleasure the city enjoyed in welcoming them. They had a double pleasure, for they enjoyed welcoming the visitors as visitors and also because of the fact that Mr. Macdonald had directed the destinies of the British Empire for a time.

VISITORS LOOKED WELL. Mr. Macdonald, who looked well, sunburnt and energetic, with an interest in everything and everyone, thanked the mayor and the people of Prince Rupert for their kind welcome. The journey had been a continuous pleasure. They had enjoyed every minute of the journey right across Canada and the trip on the boat from Vancouver. The strong similarity between the coast of British Columbia and the west coast of Scotland was especially noticeable and gave them a real Scottish welcome in itself. He was not going to make a speech, as a matter of fact it was partly to avoid making speeches that he had come on the trip. And this was the turning point in their journey for now they were heading for England and home, with London as their goal.

Were he a young man said the visitor, he would be tempted to stay here. Everyone had an air of prosperity and of hope and he felt sure that he could make his fortune right here in Prince Rupert. Their journey across Canada had shown them the great harvests and he hoped that it would mean a reduction in the price of bread in the old land. He hoped that prosperity was ahead of all and that all his hearers would find life more than tolerable.

Mr. Macdonald said they would always have a warm corner in their hearts for Prince Rupert. He also ventured to thank the people of Prince Rupert on behalf of his daughters, though they were well able to speak for themselves.

Mr. Macdonald was then introduced to the members of the city council, the Trades and Labor Council and very many of the citizens. Mrs. McMordie introduced the Misses Macdonald to many of the ladies and the party left for a drive round the city.

PLEASED WITH GARDENS. During the drive the visitors expressed great pleasure at the fine showing of flowers in the various gardens and the ex-premier remarked on the great amount of work that the citizens must have done in order to produce such a display especially so in view of the handicap of muskeg and rock.

The city itself had every appearance of a progressive community and he was surprised at its size and modern character. There was a large crowd at the station to see the visitors again before they left on the eastbound train which pulled out at 11:30. F. W. Dawson, director of the railway, accompanied the party east.

Before the arrival of the party, the Prince Rupert Boys' Band, under Bandmaster Thomas Wilson rendered several numbers and played as the boat drew to the wharf. They also played again before the party drove off round the city and the visitors remarked on the quality of the music by the band.

LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

The annual Labor Day celebration takes place Monday, Labor Day. There is a general holiday and a program of sports and games has been prepared which will prove of interest.

Labor Day is designed as a recognition of the importance of labor in a democratic community and we take great pleasure in commending the celebration to the people of Prince Rupert as one worthy of wholehearted support.

NO BANK AMALGAMATION

We strongly urge on the dominion government that they exercise their right in preventing the amalgamation of the Bank of Commerce with the Standard Bank as against the best interests of the banking system and of the people of Canada.

Should the time come when the banking systems of Canada get into so few hands that competition is eliminated, there is grave danger that steps may be taken by the people to curtail their rights as wholly unnecessary. As it is they get a great many privileges which would undoubtedly be denied to a monopoly.

If there was need of this particular amalgamation, we should offer no objection but we are told there is no real need. The merger is simply in the interests of economy. To that we are opposed and we believe the people of the country will also be opposed if it is explained to them.

Cut Throat Fishing In Lakelse

Subject of Article by Visitor

In Canadian Outdoor Magazine

(By James Clyde Gilbert in Rod and Gun in Canada)

We left Edmonton early in the evening. I promised Jim that by daybreak we would be in the mountains. This was his first trip west and he was all eagerness. We had five pieces of baggage besides a wardrobe trunk. Most of this was fishing and hunting gear and his greatest anxiety was that we would in some manner leave one of the five. He had to follow the porter with his truck full of bags and trunks to make sure his beloved rods were riding safely. At thirteen o'clock we were on our way.

At daylight we were in the foothills but it was well along toward nine o'clock when we slid into Jasper amid the high snow-capped peaks of the Canadian Rockies. Jim was lost in wonderment and could not believe they were real. When he saw Mount Robson, with its great snowy crown shining in the summer sunshine he was speechless. When he was told we would soon be whipping the rivers and lakes of the inland mountains his enthusiasm knew no bounds. Even Donald, the five-year-old brother, was enthusiastic and almost buried his mother with questions.

From the observation car we saw much of interest. We followed the shore line of Jasper Lake, and the winding course of the Athabasca River. At the summit we saw mighty waterfalls dropping sheer into Moose Lake, the headwaters of the Fraser River. Next day, near Prince George we left the Fraser and followed the Nechako. We were told of excellent fishing in Stuart Lake about forty-five miles from Vanderhoof, the nearest town on the Canadian National railroad. This lake contains rainbow trout up to twenty-five pounds and lake trout up to forty pounds. A twenty-eight-pound rainbow was caught in Stuart three years ago. Such tales as these drifted about the observation car. Our train roared in to the Bulkley river valley and on down to the Skeena. Jim was impatient to get out and fish. There were many fishermen as we could see from the wide windows of the club car. There were many fishermen and they were catching fish. At the longer stops it was with difficulty I could restrain him from fishing. It's in his blood like fire. At Skagway, Alaska, later on he left the hotel and followed the Dewey Lake trail alone to fish brook trout. And I did not know where he was until he returned with a mess of trout.

TERRACE THRIVING TOWN

It was nearing noon when we stopped at our destination, Terrace, British Columbia. Terrace is a thriving little city on the shores of the Skeena river. The Skeena empties into the sea at Prince Rupert on the British Columbia coast. We were met by Mr. Burnett, who very kindly arranged our transportation to the fishing grounds. We expected Stan Parker and his son Bob in from Prince Rupert about three o'clock. We had two or three hours wait and in this interval we drove north of Terrace on the Kitsumgallum Lake road. We did not go to the lake, much to my regret. We did not have time. We travelled through British Columbia on are peculiar things. In appearance they resemble an overgrown red raspberry. When ripe they are nearly flat in shape, somewhat flat as to taste and insipid. The leaves are exactly like those of the eastern red raspberry only much larger. When green they are not bad as they are then a bit tart.

KITSUMGALLUM RIVER

We crossed a brawling stream, the Kitsumgallum River, which drains the lakes of the same name and empties into the Skeena just west of Terrace. We were told that a little later in the season the salmon would be running up this stream in thousands. It is not a pretty sight for the salmon are in very bad condition by the time they reach the upper waters of the Kitsumgallum. They receive many injuries by striking against rocks and in other ways while en route to their spawning grounds, and as a result of these injuries, those which go long distances from the sea die after once spawning. Mutilations resulting from abrasions received on the spawning beds while pushing the gravel about or rubbing against it, and from fighting with each other, soon weaken the fish and they die, float down stream where they lodge against driftwood and rocks in such numbers that the air is polluted with the odor of decaying fish. It is then the bears come down to feast and lay on fat with which to hibernate. An enterprising farmer of Terrace was seen hauling wagonloads of these Kitsumgallum salmon home. Wonder was expressed as to what he intended to do with his strange cargo. This wonder was dispelled late that fall when the populace ate fresh pork. It had a decidedly fishy flavor.

We returned to Terrace where we met Stan Parker and his boy Bob, a cheery lad of thirteen. He and Jim became fast friends. Both loved fishing and all true fishermen are friends. Gathering up our poles, Kennedy kit and other duff, we piled into Mr. Burnett's car and started for Lakelse Lake some twenty-five miles south of the railroad. Mrs. Burnett followed us with Mrs. Gilbert and Baby Donald.

We crossed the Skeena, turned south and entered a wild, rocky country, fire scorched and desolate. We skirted the base of Copper Mountain, a huge mass overlooking the entire valley. So fierce had the fires of past years burned that the forest floor in spots had been consumed. Only the fine dry mineral soil remained. Wild raspberries grew in profusion and the fire scars were rapidly being covered with scrub growth where the cover was not entirely destroyed. No doubt 20 years hence the trees will be again large enough to shelter game. This barren is not large. We soon entered a deep, green woods. This is the real coast forest. Giant firs and cedars stand by the roadside, their heads towering high above the smaller forest cover. Immense ferns droop over the roadway like palms in the tropics. We were climbing steadily through this beautiful forest. It resembled a vast cathedral of old. Outside the sun was scorching the grass dry. The vegetation in Terrace was dying for lack of water. Here it was cool as an underground cellar. Moss and fungus growth was all about. Under the giant tree trunks were slim, lofty hemlocks. Red sunsplashes on the road wavered as the breeze waved the branches above. We came to a mountain brook hurrying to join the big river. Ferns, mosses, lichens were everywhere. We stopped to drink at a brook. The water was icy cold. Tiny trout darted here and there in the rushing stream. Larger trout leaped farther down under the shade of red elder berries in bloom. The same old red elder berries I knew in northern Michigan. Salmon berries as large as a lady's wrist watch hung over the brook. And all about the blessed mountain-damp. We rested at the brook until the women came up in the other car. All drank from an old tin can. Then we resumed our way. Finally we broke through the forest and there before us lay Lakelse in all her glory.

ARRIVAL AT LAKEELSE

Here is a forest ranger's mail box and a wharf. At the wharf was tied Mr. Burnett's launch. We piled in our duff and cast off. The craft is equipped with a Ford engine which runs smoothly as we shot south down the length of the lake, nine miles in length. The lake is high in the mountains. The peaks tower on each side. From the east rivers pour into the lake from melting snow fields high on the mountains. Mr. Fulton has a summer home on the east shore of the lake. This is the only building on the 20 miles of shore line. We made arrangements for him to join us in a fishing trip that evening. He was ready in an instant and we towed his boat behind the launch to the wharf of the Lakelse Hot Springs Lodge. A be-whiskered gentleman somewhat resembling King George—and a mighty fine man by the way whose name is Hart—came down to get our bags. We decided to start fishing at once so he escorted the women and children to the Lodge, which lay about a half a mile back from the lake at the springs. Jim, Bob, Stan and I accompanied Burnett and Fulton in two boats to a point about 300 yards north of the wharf. Near the mouth of a creek we found the trout leaping all about the boat.

I lost two leaders in the savage rush of several fish and finally put on a heavy six foot gut leader. I was fishing with Mr. Fulton who is an attorney of Prince Rupert. He is a man after my own heart. With a promising business, in fact a very lucrative business, he prefers to spend about nine months of the year at Lakelse fishing trout. He lives with his family on the eastern shore where he can see the sunsets gliding the western mountains each evening. The only resident on the lake, he is "monarch of all he surveys" and it is a kingdom worth surveying I can assure you. Wild goats swarm on the mountains back of his cabin. Farther back are grizzlies. He raises enough vegetables to supply his needs. He is always ready to fish but never wastes a fish.

"We haven't much money but we're living," he said.

HAPPY OLD MAN

I wish I had the nerve to do as he is doing. He will be a happy old man living in the memories of the day when Lakelse teemed with trout and he was the sole inhabitant on its shores, when I have passed away, worn down by a hurrying, rushing workaday world.

The trout were biting viciously and continued to do so for about an hour. We were keeping only the largest for we wanted to make a showing. Others we carefully replaced after first wetting our hands in the lake. Finally the fish quit biting and we moved up to the mouth of a glacial stream that surged into the lake from the east. We cast from shore about the stream but did not get any fish of any size. Then Stan waded out into the icy stream and cast off into the current where it swept out into the lake. He was rewarded by a vicious tug that told of fish. He landed a beauty. Then I stepped into the current. We waded out to where the river rushed into the lake and threw our flies in. The current would carry them into the lake and the fish fairly swarmed about them. The water was like ice. My legs pained and my head throbbled but I stayed with it and five minutes later, due either to the excitement or acclimation, or both, I was as warm as ever. We caught many trout. When darkness fell we rowed to the wharf and by the aid of a flashlight made our way to Lakelse Lodge where the proprietress, Mrs. Bosa, had prepared a most bountiful dinner of trout and other delicious food. Mrs. Gilbert and Baby Don had already eaten and as we were planning on a big day following we retired early. But not before we had all taken a delightful bath in hot water piped from the hot springs.

Early next morning we examined the hot springs. About 30 rods south of the Lodge is a large pool, a quarter of an acre in extent. The water comes out of this hole in the earth boiling hot. It is piped in a long flume to the Lodge where large wooden tubs are used for bathing. We drank the water and bathed in it. There is something about this water that exhilarates. Ordinarily I do not care to drink hot water but I found this different from the ordinary hot water heated at home. After saying good-bye to our hostess we took our way down the old punch-on footpath to the lake. Donnie and his mother came later. This punch-on trail is one of the most charming walks I have ever taken. Years ago someone put a mint of money into this Hot Springs proposition and built a half mile or more of walk made from split logs with the flat centres face up. This is still in existence. The timber and undergrowth lean far over the pathway. Birds and little animals scamper and leap about and the woods are alive with game. There are 310 acres of green timber and the Hot Springs. Part of this property borders on Lakelse Lake. The Canadian National railroad is only twenty-five miles north on a good highway. Lakelse with its hot springs is verily a wilderness paradise. When it becomes known many holiday parties will venture into its hidden silences. Some day a blaring resort may be built there. All that will spoil it for the true lover of the woodlands and waters. Unassailed seclusion is the charm of the place now. So many vacationists seek Nature to desecrate her rather than to woo her. But when Lakelse becomes a popular resort, messed up with jazz, flappers and sheiks we will seek another hot spring where the clothes we were born in will still be the fashion. There are others but not so accessible as Lakelse.

ALL THEY WANTED

We fished until we had sufficient for our needs and then departed. We arrived in Terrace in time to catch the train through to Prince Rupert where we were to remain until our boat came up from Vancouver on its way to Alaska. We did not catch any unusually large fish in Lakelse but we caught many and could have caught many more had we desired to do so. In Prince Rupert we made many new friends, fished remote lakes and rivers and when the time came to leave we did so with reluctance. But the lure Hockey is to be the big game on the coast this winter if the plans of the Patricks succeed. Already good progress has been made in organizing the teams for the Pacific Hockey League. When the Athletics and Yanks meet in a four-game stand, the second week in September, things are liable to happen. Everything will depend on this series. It will be the last between the two contenders for the American League pennant and if Walberg is still effective against Babe Ruth and his hard-hitting play-mates, Connie Mack is likely to bring home a winner after 13 years. Its exactly that long since Connie had a winner.

DISRESPECT TO FLAG KETCHIKAN

FINED $500 AND GIVEN YEAR IN JAIL FOR BEING DRUNK.

KETCHIKAN, Aug. 31.—Disclosure of gross disrespect for the American flag was made today when John Stevenson, 38, was held into commissioner's court on a charge of being drunk in a public place. Stevenson was sentenced by Judge J. W. Kehoe to a year in jail and a fine of $500.

It was revealed at the trial that Stevenson came upon several children among them the small son of Dr. R. V. Hills who was playing with a flag. According to the evidence, Stevenson took the flag from the boy, tore it from the stick to which it was fastened, wiped his nose with it, and then threw it to the ground. Subsequently he was arrested by Charles Smith of the cable office who turned Stevenson over to the marshal's office.

The evidence was furnished principally by the children. Stevenson would say little in his own behalf. It was revealed that he has been in the United States since 1903, but never has taken out citizenship papers. Apparently Stevenson worked on a railroad during the war.

It was said also that he had been member of the I.W.O.

The trial also disclosed that Stevenson, although he had no funds in the bank, attempted to cash a check at a local bank shortly before the incident occurred which resulted in his arrest.

LONDON POLICE
TROUBLE AGAIN

COMPLICATED CASE BEING TRIED IN COURT IN WHICH CONSTABLES ARE CHARGED

LONDON, Aug. 31.—London's police force is again in trouble. This time it is charged that two policemen, John Clayton and Charles Stevenson, conspired to make a false charge against a girl because she refused improper advances made by one of them.

The incident out of which the present case arose took place in a taxicab in a garage where the girl went to sleep because it was too late to get into her lodgings. According to her story the policemen came to the garage and to the taxicab in which she was sitting and after questioning her, Clayton made improper proposals which were repulsed. He then laid charges against her with the assistance of Stevenson. Percival Clarke is pressing the case for the director of public prosecutions, and Harvey Ricketts, another noted lawyer is defending.

The cross-examination of Miss Adele which lasted over seven hours, was completed today, ending with a denial by the girl that she had conspired the story against the police, or of ever having said that if she was arrested she would say that the arresting officers had interfered with her. She also denied that when questioned by a man who had contributed to her support, and asked how she had got on at the police court, she replied "You know how I can talk, I spoofed the whole lot."

Miss Adele also denied that this man said he expected the police to be after him also, and that he was getting away to Southend. She, herself, went to Southend daily, she said, and received money from the man mentioned. His name was given as Hayes. Received money from the man mentioned. If the man was friendly to her, the girl stated that he was now unfriendly.

NOT FRIENDLY NOW
"I asked her the question because this man seems to be supplying you with information for cross-examination," said the magistrate, turning to Mr. Ricketts, who is defending the men charged. Mr. Ricketts said he did not pretend that Hayes was friendly with the girl now.

"He appears to be running in double harness as far as this case is concerned," commented the bench. It is alleged that police influence is being used on the man to make him set for the defendants and that he has been threatened.

The girl was also questioned regarding a married man named Tom Abbott who had associated with her and who is to appear to support her story. In cross-examination the girl stated that Hayes became unfriendly to her because he was jealous of Abbott and for other reasons, and declared that after the case started Hayes had told her he would "make things hot for her."

A sergeant of police, who was called, stated that the garage where the incident is alleged to have taken place, was on Constable Clayton's beat between two and six o'clock in the morning, but it was not on Stevenson's beat and that the latter should not have been there at the time.

Big crowds are following the case daily and it is being reported in full in the London papers, being regarded as the sensational story of the day.

PREPARATIONS FOR LABOR DAY

FOOTBALL, LACROSSE AND FIELD AND TRACK SPORTS ARE ARRANGED

The Labor Day sports are sure to be big attractions on this year. The committee has made a special study of events and has so arranged the program that only events that will appeal to the public have been included.

The comparison between the times made by the local athletes on a measured distance and the times made by the English schools will be of particular interest. There may be future Olympic Games candidates in Prince Rupert and in any case the competitors will see how they compare with the outside world.

Those who have followed the progress of junior lacrosse and football in the city these last few years will be interested in the two games for that date.

The football game will bring into play members of the public school teams who put up such a fine showing before the schools broke up in June. The series between High and Booth schools is one that is still talked about and most of these players will be in action on Monday afternoon. Several of these boys have made an appearance in senior football already and have done well. Teams will be announced tomorrow.

MINOR TEAMS TAKE MEASURE OF ASPIRANTS TO BASEBALL CROWN

The last month of the season is usually rich in drama for it is then the cellar or near cellar dwellers delight in knocking the props from under the pretenders to baseball's major crowns. Yesterday the Athletics and Yankees, fighting for the American League leadership, were cut down by Boston and Washington respectively, two clubs they should defeat without any trouble. It was announced yesterday that Rogers Hornsby has signed a six-year contract to manage the Boston Braves.

RANGERS WON AT LACROSSE

WILL MAKE EFFORT TO TAKE NEXT TWO GAMES FROM ROVERS

The lacrosse game between Rangers and Rovers in the Junior Lacrosse series resulted in a win for Rangers 4-0 last evening.

The game was a well-contested event with checking keen all the way through. Goal scorers for Rangers were P. Calderoni 2, E. Johnson 1, C. Woods 1. The Rangers owe most of their success to the fine display of their newcomers, R. Wilson, J. Yeager, P. Calderoni, and J. Morrison. Their fine display is directly due to their constant practice and shows what can be done by staying with a game and practicing all the time. Calderoni was outstanding. His stickhandling was good, he played his position well and shot right on the mark.

Rangers must win their two remaining games to equal Rovers and in such an event there would be a play-off for the championship.

After last evening's game Rangers feel they can win these two games and in the meeting on Labor Day they will be out to win a place in the play-offs. Spectators are assured of seeing a well-fought game on Monday.

The party arriving here today include Mr. and Mrs. Jensen, Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. Strang.
