PIONEER PASSES

A. W. Edge, one of the pioneers of the city, has passed on to the realm of the unknown. While here he was active in many walks Club of Philadelphia, Mr. Rea, who has himself completed his fiftieth is ringing up your banker on New Year of life. He took part in civic activities until of recent years when year in his profession, speculated on the forthcoming fifty years, morning to wish him a prosperous new he dropped gradually out of the picture. He had a host of friends but with the precision of a dreamer#all of whom will regret his demise.

Conservative in politics, Mr. Edge was not a bigot, but was at all times ready to see the good points in his opponents. Also he deplored the taking of political life too seriously and making it the means of dividing friends and heighbors. He always strongly urged seldom undertake and then only with a united city for the purpose of securing its advancement.

We join with the rest of community in mourning for one who was always a genial and true friend and a good citizen.

NOT SYSTEM BUT PERSONALITY

Hon. R. B. Bennett believes that it is not the political system of a country that makes for good government but the personality of the citizens. Members of Parliament will, to a large extent, carry lation and combustion, he said. out the wishes of the people. They will be no better than the people they represent and no worse. If the people set a high standard the members will do the same.

The thought and work of Canadians is what counts, as the minimum. Conservative leader remarks. The difficulty is that some do not work and many do not think and the result is that democracy is not always a success.

CANADA AND BRITISH MONEY

(Winnipeg Free Press) Newspaper correspondents from the Old Country who have more archaic in our civilization, or more recently been in Canada, including members of the Press Association wasteful in the eyes of the economist, party who visited this country in the summer, have been commenting than our individual house-heating sysin their journals on the considerable influx of American capital in- tems in which all tut a fraction of the to Canada within recent years. They have been permitting themselves to wonder whether this influx constitutes a menace to the continuance of Canada within the Empire, suggesting that if this continues financial and economic pressure from Washington and New York may produce a situation which, in a future period of time (some put it at ten years), will result in a closer political relationship, if not compel it.

Canadians who are interested in the development of their ing cheaply produced gas for house heatcountry, while not subscribing to the sentiments thus expressed, are ing purposes as well as cooking. Indusat any rate willing to agree that an increase in the proportion of tries will be supplied with gas for fuel British investments in Canada would be extremely welcome. But it instead of burning coal in individual may also be admitted that. failing British investments, capital and furnaces under botters. We may realize enterprise provided from across the border will be welcomed. A percentage, so small as to be negligible, will be found to envisage dwellers." the views which British correspondents are expressing as to the ultimate effect of this preponderance of capital investments from United States sources.

It may perhaps be permitted to Canadians to speculate as to tributing plants situated near coal why, apart from the after-effects of the war on British international commitments, there is an apparent unwillingness to engage in Canadian development on the part of Old Country business men and investors. There are no signs that British capital is become shy of all commitments outside of the British Isles. It can hardly be that Old Country investors are entirely ignorant of, or averse to participation in, the development of Canada which is now in evidence. Although used for industrial fuel, we may expect color to this suggestion may perhaps be found in a comment in a to see it applied chiefly in pulverized recent issue of The Investors Review, which is a sort of London form, sprayed pneumatically into the Stock Exchange publication, read presumably by an investing fire box. clientele. This publication, under the heading of "The Flim Flam Railway," pays its meed to the developments in Manitoba in the following terms: "They (Canadians) are proposing to build a line from Flin Flon in Northern Manitoba to the Hudson Bay Railway. It is a will be able to produce artificially, at modest affair of 84 miles and is estimated to cost only $3,500,000.

none of which is apparently to be raised here. For that we may be duly thankful, and, of course, Canadians are welcome to waste their money any way they like." The article proceeds: "In good seasons Hudson Bay is perhaps open for three or four months, but at other times two months may be the limit. Why anyone should want to build a line for a two or three months season is not very clear, but we wish the promotors luck in their venture."

It may not be fair to suggest that this combination of impudence and ignorance represents any sort of financial opinion in London. Indeed, Canada, the illustrated weekly published in London, in a slashing commentary on this article, says it is by no means typical of financial papers. At the same time, however, just as there are people in apparently large numbers in England who say that it is almost a crime to emigrate to Canada, so there are people, no. coult, who think that any Canadian investment is equivalent to kissing the money good-bye.

There is a good deal of sound commonsense in the advice tendered by the Prince of Wales when he urged British business men to take a trip over here and see conditions for themselves, with a view to becoming interested in Canadian development. But only personal investigation and management on the ground will ensure success. There is no doubt on this side of the Atlantic that the openings for participation in Canadian development are as good for British funds as they are for American. Investment and immigration go hand in hand, and if Britain is serious in wishing to increase to a marked extent the percentage of immigrants from the Old Country, there would seem to be no better method than to create business openings here which will do their share in the absorption of them. Canada will welcome both wholeheartedly, although it is not considered, as a matter of serious concern, that their absence will either seriously retard the development of this country or involve its obsorption, now or hereafter, by the American Union.

Engineer Forecasts What Is Likely to Happen in Future Production and Distribution

PHILADELPHIA, January 5 .- A sunny, smokeless city, with double and, perhaps, triple decked streets, with centralized fuel and power plants and with the people turning more and more to the engineer for solution of problems, is the municipality of the coming "Engineer Age" which Samuel Rea, retired president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, envisages within a century.

Mr. Rea's views on transportation are that fifty years from now the railroad will still be performing the bulk of the service, particularly in freight. He saw no future for inland canals or canalization of rivers not naturally navigable.

"The expenditure of further money for projects of this character is, in the great majority of cases, nearly one hundred per cent waste," he said. "I do not think the situation will be any different in 1977 than at present."
