Evidence for Crown All Given in Oliver Tar and Feather Case with Dr. Latimer and Others Witnesses

Constable Says He Fired At Car and There Was a Bullet Hole Found In Oliver's Car On Following Day at Penticton Garage

PENTICTON, Dec. 3.—Dr. V. E. Latimer, testifying yesterday afternoon in the preliminary hearing of Charles Oliver, charged with "forcible seizure," stated that Oliver was sitting at the wheel of the Sedan automobile into which Latimer was dragged last Monday night and taken away to be subjected to an application of "sticky fluid" and feathers.

Dr. Latimer also testified that Oliver threatened his life last August and had given him seven days in which to leave.

Another point in today's evidence was the testimony by Chief of Police Davies of Penticton that Charles Oliver tried to have the police chief ask Dr. Latimer to leave town because of trouble between Dr. Latimer and Oliver's wife. When the chief refused the request, witness said, Oliver and his brother, Joseph, a Vancouver lawyer, made the same request at a special meeting of the police commission.

Constable Frank H. Allercot testified that the car belonging to Oliver closely resembled the one he had seen in front of Dr. Latimer's office the night the latter had been kidnapped. He had fired a shot at the car when it failed to heed his order to stop.

Warren Rolls, garage proprietor, testified that on the day following Oliver's arrest accused had brought his car to Rolls' garage to have it repaired. There, he said, a bullet hole half an inch across in the body of the car. Rolls stuffed it with compound.

The prosecution concluded its case yesterday.

To Higher Court.—PENTICTON, Dec. 3.—Counsel for Charles Oliver, who is charged with "forcible seizure" in connection with the tar and feathering of Dr. V. E. Latimer on November 25, announced today that he will reserve their right to go to a higher court, thus anticipating the commitment of Oliver for trial when the preliminary hearing resumes this afternoon.

Counsel have arranged temporary bail for Oliver on two bail bonds of $1,000 each.

It is intimated that the defence will base their case on an alibi when the trial goes to the higher courts.

Local Salvation Army is planning a campaign this year to provide Christmas cheer for many needy families in the city. There will be undoubtedly be more people out of work and more who are unable to provide such things as would make it possible for them and their families to enjoy the happy season. In view of this the Army officers are laying their plans to look after as many as possible.

Last year hampers were provided and a good many who otherwise would have had but a poor Christmas holiday were able to join with the rest of the community. Also, a Christmas dinner was provided which was partaken of by those who did not fit in elsewhere. This year it is proposed to make the provision of hampers the first work of the organization. Also they will see that none go hungry on Christmas Day and that everything possible will be done to make the season a happy one for as many as possible.

To do this funds are necessary. Prince Rupert people have always come to the aid of the needy at the proper time. This year it is expected that they will run true to form. The Army officials will be glad to receive either money or groceries or anything else which might be used to advantage. The names of donors will be published in The Daily News, but those who do not wish their names to appear may leave a request to that effect.

LORDS DOWN LABOR BILL

Pass Amendment by Large Majority to Widow's Pensions Act

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The Labor Government was defeated in the House of Lords yesterday 37 to 16 when an amendment was adopted to the Widow's Pension Bill providing that payments of pensions be limited to needy widows.

The Laborites have only a handful of members in the House of Lords. The House of Lords adverse vote is not regarded as other than possibly making the eventual enactment of the law in the form the Government desires somewhat more difficult.

Dunning Gets Welcome From Finance Paper

Announcement that Hon. Chas. Dunning has been chosen for the portfolio of Minister of Finance of Canada is to be welcomed in the west as a satisfactory choice, says the Financial News.

It is fitting that today, when Western Canada is looking larger than ever before in the economic map of Canada and the realization is growing that Western Canada is the big end of the Dominion, a Western Canadian man should be chosen to administer the duties of the Department of Finance.

Mr. Dunning enters office following two of the greatest finance ministers Canada has known. His task in one sense, will be the easier by reason of their precedence for they smoothed the way for him financially. But in another sense his position will be difficult. An exceptionally high standard is his inheritance from his predecessors.

Late in January Parliament will meet and shortly thereafter the first Dunning budget must be brought down.

What a vital factor in Canadian business progress Robb budgets were, with their consistent tax reductions and announced surpluses, is well appreciated by business leaders. In these days when the chief function of statesmanship is interpreted in terms of economics, the post of finance minister of Canada is the most important of all political appointments.

Mr. Dunning will assume his new duties with the well wishes of Western Canadians. He will be expected to administer those duties not as a Westerner for he belongs now to all Canada, but with a knowledge of Western resources and Western interests which should be of value to the whole Dominion.

Weekly Wages Montreal Women Are Coming Up

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—Average wages of women workers in Quebec industries are steadily mounting under the effect of minimum wage legislation, a three-year survey of the activities of the Women's Minimum Wage Board reveals.

On the Island of Montreal, the average wage of the female worker in laundries and dye works has risen from $11.74 a week in 1927 to $12.96 in 1929. In the printing and allied industries, the jump has been from $12.14 in 1928 to $12.68 in 1929. And in the textile industry, the advance has been from $12.89 in 1928 to $13.38 in 1929. Wages for women in the same industries located elsewhere in the province also show advantages since Gus. Franco and his colleagues began their industrial investigations and set their wage schedules.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 3.—Four billion stamps, totalling more than 300 tons in weight, have been prepared by post office officials who said they anticipated a record-breaking Christmas trade. Upon the basis of advance orders, described as unusually heavy, they said this number of stamps would be needed, or seven per cent more than used last year.

COLD WATER ON FLIGHT

Norwegian Airman Does Not Like "Speculations in Sensations" and Doubts Statements

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The Mail today says that the accuracy of the report of Commander Byrd regarding his South Polar flight is challenged by Major Trygve Tran, Norwegian airman and explorer, who was a member of the Scott Antarctic expedition.

A despatch from Copenhagen cites Gran as saying: "I'm not justified in saying Byrd did not pass over the Pole but the whole expedition appears to be a speculation in sensations." He said the report of the American aviator did not inspire confidence and in particular he doubted the statement that Byrd saw the cairns of Scott and Amundsen.

Plans To Extend Jasper Park Road As Far as Banff

EDMONTON, Dec. 3.—Extension of the Jasper Park highway to the west under a road scheme which will ultimately link up Jasper and Banff national parks is planned by the federal authorities. Through the enlargement of the boundaries of the first named pleasure ground, the Dominion will first extend the northern road to Red Pass Junction.

The objective of this extension is to ultimately link up Jasper and Banff national parks by a road running south from Red Pass Junction and along the Canoe River, connecting with the trans-Canada highway at the Big Bend, between Golden and Revelstoke.

The federal government has been extending its Jasper road system westerly towards Mount Robson for some time. Now it is in a position to even extend its park program and make a decided step towards having a through route between the national playgrounds.

Confirmation of these plans has been given by Hon. Charles Stewart, minister of interior, under whose department a large part of this work is handled.

President Hoover in Message to Congress Stands by His Guns

Urges Tariff Settlement, Tax Reduction and Prohibition Enforcement and Relief From National Defence Burden

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Speedy ending to the tariff controversy, prompt action to reduce taxation and strengthening of prohibition enforcement was urged upon Congress today by President Hoover in his message.

Mr. Hoover stood squarely on the position he took at the opening of the special session when he asked for tariff rates beneficial to agriculture and industries which have not been prosperous. He asked Congress to give earnest consideration to the possibilities of prompt action which will give relief from the continuously mounting expenditures for national defence.

The reopening of Congress after only a few days interval since the closing of the special session reminded a good deal of Hollywood, the presence of microphones and talkies giving that effect. Otherwise the ceremony was without outstanding incident.

Mayor Malkin Is Campaigning For Them View To Relieving Unemployment

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3.—Mayor Malkin, who is not in the field for election this year, owing to the fact that the mayor of the city now gets a two-year term, is out campaigning for the bylaws which are to be voted on election day. He is asking for $3,500,000 for the new Burrard Street bridge, which he says is very desirable just now to relieve the unemployment condition. He is also asking for the passing of the airport bylaw, the sewer bylaw and the fire alarm headquarters bylaw.

E. Edson Smith of Corvallis, Montana, holder of the championship for the past two years. By his victory, Smith gives Canada the record of having produced fifteen of the last nineteen wheat kings.

CIVILIANS RULE

In Mexico the military rule, but in civilized countries things are different. There it is the civilians who have the supreme power and they generally use it. In view of the fact that the United States Congress, which is almost wholly civilian, very few military or naval men finding a place there, has to pass on the findings of the forthcoming naval conference at London, President Hoover would have civilians only taking part in the conference. Admirals are kept in the background as technical advisers.

United States is holding back its naval shipbuilding program, pending the outcome of the conference.

The conference is called by Great Britain and the Labor Government has appointed civilians only to take part in it.

Canada may appoint a colonel, but he also is a minister of the crown and not usually looked upon as a military man.

It looks as if something tangible may come from the London discussion. It comes at a time when everyone is talking of peace and disarmament and when both Britain and the United States have elected men who are pledged to peace and whose whole training is in that direction.

HIGHWAY ANNOUNCEMENT

The announcement that survey work is proceeding on the Skeena highway is most satisfactory. We are glad to know that the Provincial Government is beginning to take the project seriously. We assure the Government that they will have no criticism from us if they make a decent showing in regard to the work. We have urged in season and out that this work be given preference over others. We strongly urged the importance of the work when the former government was in power. We shall continue to urge it, no matter what Government is in control of affairs at Victoria. The good of Prince Rupert must take precedence over party politics and we believe the future progress of the city is bound up in the building of the Skeena Highway.

IDEALS IN SPORT

The difference between the conception of sport that prevails in the United States and in England is commented upon by President Cutten, of Colgate University, in an article called "Ideals in Sport," published in the New York Times. The comparison he makes is in football, the American game, and Rugby. The American footballer in training, he says, "eats at a special table and his food costs him nothing. His uniform is provided for him and all expenses incidental to the sport are defrayed. The professional coach is regarded by him as a more important person than the head of the university. He is aware that this coach is paid more money than the great bulk of the instructors. It would be strange if he did not get a distorted idea of the importance of winning a game of football, for he knows that the coach is not paid to teach the boys how to play football and get a good deal of incidental pleasure and profit from it, but to win games so that the big stadium may be built and money earned to increase the coach's salary. To this end of winning games is organized the college cheering by special leaders who, too, will be paid salaries if they do not receive them now."

In England, in the game of Rugby, Professor Cutten points out that there is no organized cheering to encourage the college team or confuse the opposing one. The American practice makes a robot of each member of the team. He is told how to stand, how to hold the ball, with which foot to run, where he shall be and what he shall do three seconds after he begins to run. He is not allowed to think independently. In the English college teams, says Professor Cutten, buy their own uniforms, pay for any special meals they may eat and defray all their athletic expenses except railroad transportation. They are so keen to play that they are willing to pay for the privilege. There are no professional coaches. Graduates do the coaching and are willing to give the time without pay, for the sake of their college. "If," says Professor Cutten, "I wanted a definition of sport, I would get an Englishman to frame it. We have much to learn from him. He was playing games when we were hewing out our homes in the forest."

FISHERMEN'S MEETING

Editor, Daily News:— Permit me, please, through the medium of your paper, to draw the attention of all fishermen, and the public in general, to the meeting to be held in the City Hall on Wednesday night, Dec. 4.

This question appears to be a hardy annual, as far as the fishing business is concerned.

It is promulgated under the guise of Conservation, led forward by the Cannery Association, and up to the present has been just as frequently retired carefully camouflaged "for future reference."

It has been specially groomed for its initial appearance before the Provincial Government, and it is up to us to be ready to assist its hasty retreat as per usual.

Lack of interest may mean our defeat, hence this appeal for another mass effort.

Another question to be brought up, is in regard to the present Cow Bay Floats. We have had them so long that we loath to part with them.

We rejoice that the new ones are practically within sight, but did not like to read that our old standbys might be handed over to the Millionaire's Club.

Come and talk it over, we like a crowd.

Yours respectfully,
SECRETARY,
Northern B.C. Salmon Fishermen's Association

The Canadian Legion will meet the Elks in the Billiard League games tonight with line-ups as follows:

A. Murray vs. A. Eason.
J. Scott vs. W. Willisroff.
P. Tinker vs. W. Mitchell.
F. Pyle vs. F. Stephens.

Three-Two Taxi and Elks will meet tonight in the Senior Basketball League to decide who is going to dwell in the cellar or whether the Taxi Boys are going to chase the Players' Club for league honors. Elks have won but one game so far this year while Three-Two has won two. These figures don't look so good when compared with the Dramatists' four wins. In any case, a good lively game is looked for with both sides out for blood. In the Intermediate League, Big Four, which has yet to be beaten this fall, will try to go to the top of the standing at the expense of the Navy which has only won one game so far. The C.N.R. will meet the fast moving Bankers' outfit in the second intermediate game.

The Smithers Athletic Club has elected officers as follows: president, Dr. R. C. Bamford; vice-president, Norman H. Kilpatrick; secretary treasurer, C. Warner; executive, E. C. Dawson, Harry Strange, J. A. Finnelly, Clarence Goodacre and James P. Downey. The association is interesting itself immediately in hockey and it is expected two or three good teams will be out on the ice this winter. Play will start as soon as the weather is cold enough to form ice. Last winter, the club renewed the water system at the rink and bought the lots upon which it is situated. The financial statement of the club showed revenue during the year of $950 and expenditure amounting to $935.

Next May Glenna Collett is going to make her fifth attempt to win the British Women's golf championship at Liverpool. During Glenna's twelve years of play, this is the only honor she has tried for and missed. It took Joyce Wethered, stepping back after two years of retirement, to beat Glenna, 3 and 2, this year. Joyce Wethered might do it again, as it seems Miss Collett just can't get the British championship. However, there's nothing like trying.

One result of the recent B.C.-Saskatchewan clash proves is that the class of rugby now played at the coast is fully on a par with that of the prairie colleges, says the Edmonton Journal sports writer. Saskatchewan's team this season may not have been quite up to the strength of the Alberta aggregation that made a clean up in western intercollegiate circles last year, but it was a pretty fair looking outfit just the same—at least it looked like that here. From now on, seemingly, these British Columbians will have to be taken with a great deal more seriousness. First thing you know B.C. will have a real challenger for the Western Canada title.

Jumbo Davies, Victoria's crack bantamweight boxer, chalked up another win recently when he won a six-round decision over Ludwig Jones, ex-Pacific Coast bantamweight champion of Tacoma, in the feature event of the Eagles Show at Port Angeles.

Amateur football in the United States is big business. Last season the gross receipts were over $50,000,000. Yale received over $1,000,000 at the gate and showed a net profit of $543,084.76. Harvard University was runner-up with a profit of $420,787. Then came Michigan with $415,538, and Princeton had $298,880 after all expenses had been paid.

Frankie Genaro, New York Italian flyweight, is still overseas. He boxes a French boxer named Trezziak at Paris on Dec. 10, after which he will return home. Trezziak was given the match with Genaro on the strength of a victory over Minty Rose, a bantam, who won a decision over Eugene Huat. Joe Jacobs and Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight star, who is now at his home, will join Genaro before his Paris bout, after which, it is expected, the party will all return to New York.

Seattle Keeps Its Record of Non-Defeat in Game Last Night

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3.—Although Seattle failed to win last night's coast hockey game here with Vancouver Lions they kept their season's record of non-defeat when the teams emerged from a hectic overtime struggle with the score deadlocked at one goal each.

Winkler, the Eskimos goalie, gave a brilliant exhibition of net tending. Seattle scored in the first period and Vancouver in the second.

Ald. C. H. Orme and J. W. Scott returned to the city yesterday afternoon with Capt. R. Gammon and Tom Watts on the Bertha G. after a tea-day hunting trip to Hartley Bay. Fog, which had been lying heavy over the city for the past two or three days, was not experienced on the trip home yesterday when it was bright and sunny in Grenville Channel, although the mountains were shrouded.

Maxie Rosenbloom, is one of the ring's strange young men. He never took a lesson in boxing, getting his start by watching other kids at a settlement athletic club on New York's east side. Maxie would have no more of school after the third grade. For five years he worked on a farm in Connecticut. Then he took a job on the section. One night he was worked in as a ticket taker at the Union Settlement Club in New York, and when one of the boys failed to appear, he volunteered to do battle in his stead. In that bout, he says, he was knocked down no less than 15 times. He finally got mad, smacked his opponent on the button and that was that. Max is like Johnny Risko in respect to training. He does most of his training while he's out there fighting.

Saskatchewan's team this season may not have been quite up to the strength of the Alberta aggregation that made a clean up in western intercollegiate circles last year, but it was a pretty fair looking outfit just the same—at least it looked like that here. From now on, seemingly, these British Columbians will have to be taken with a great deal more seriousness. First thing you know B.C. will have a real challenger for the Western Canada title.

Jumbo Davies, Victoria's crack bantamweight boxer, chalked up another win recently when he won a six-round decision over Ludwig Jones, ex-Pacific Coast bantamweight champion of Tacoma, in the feature event of the Eagles Show at Port Angeles.

Amateur football in the United States is big business. Last season the gross receipts were over $50,000,000. Yale received over $1,000,000 at the gate and showed a net profit of $543,084.76. Harvard University was runner-up with a profit of $420,787. Then came Michigan with $415,538, and Princeton had $298,880 after all expenses had been paid.

Frankie Genaro, New York Italian flyweight, is still overseas. He boxes a French boxer named Trezziak at Paris on Dec. 10, after which he will return home. Trezziak was given the match with Genaro on the strength of a victory over Minty Rose, a bantam, who won a decision over Eugene Huat. Joe Jacobs and Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight star, who is now at his home, will join Genaro before his Paris bout, after which, it is expected, the party will all return to New York.

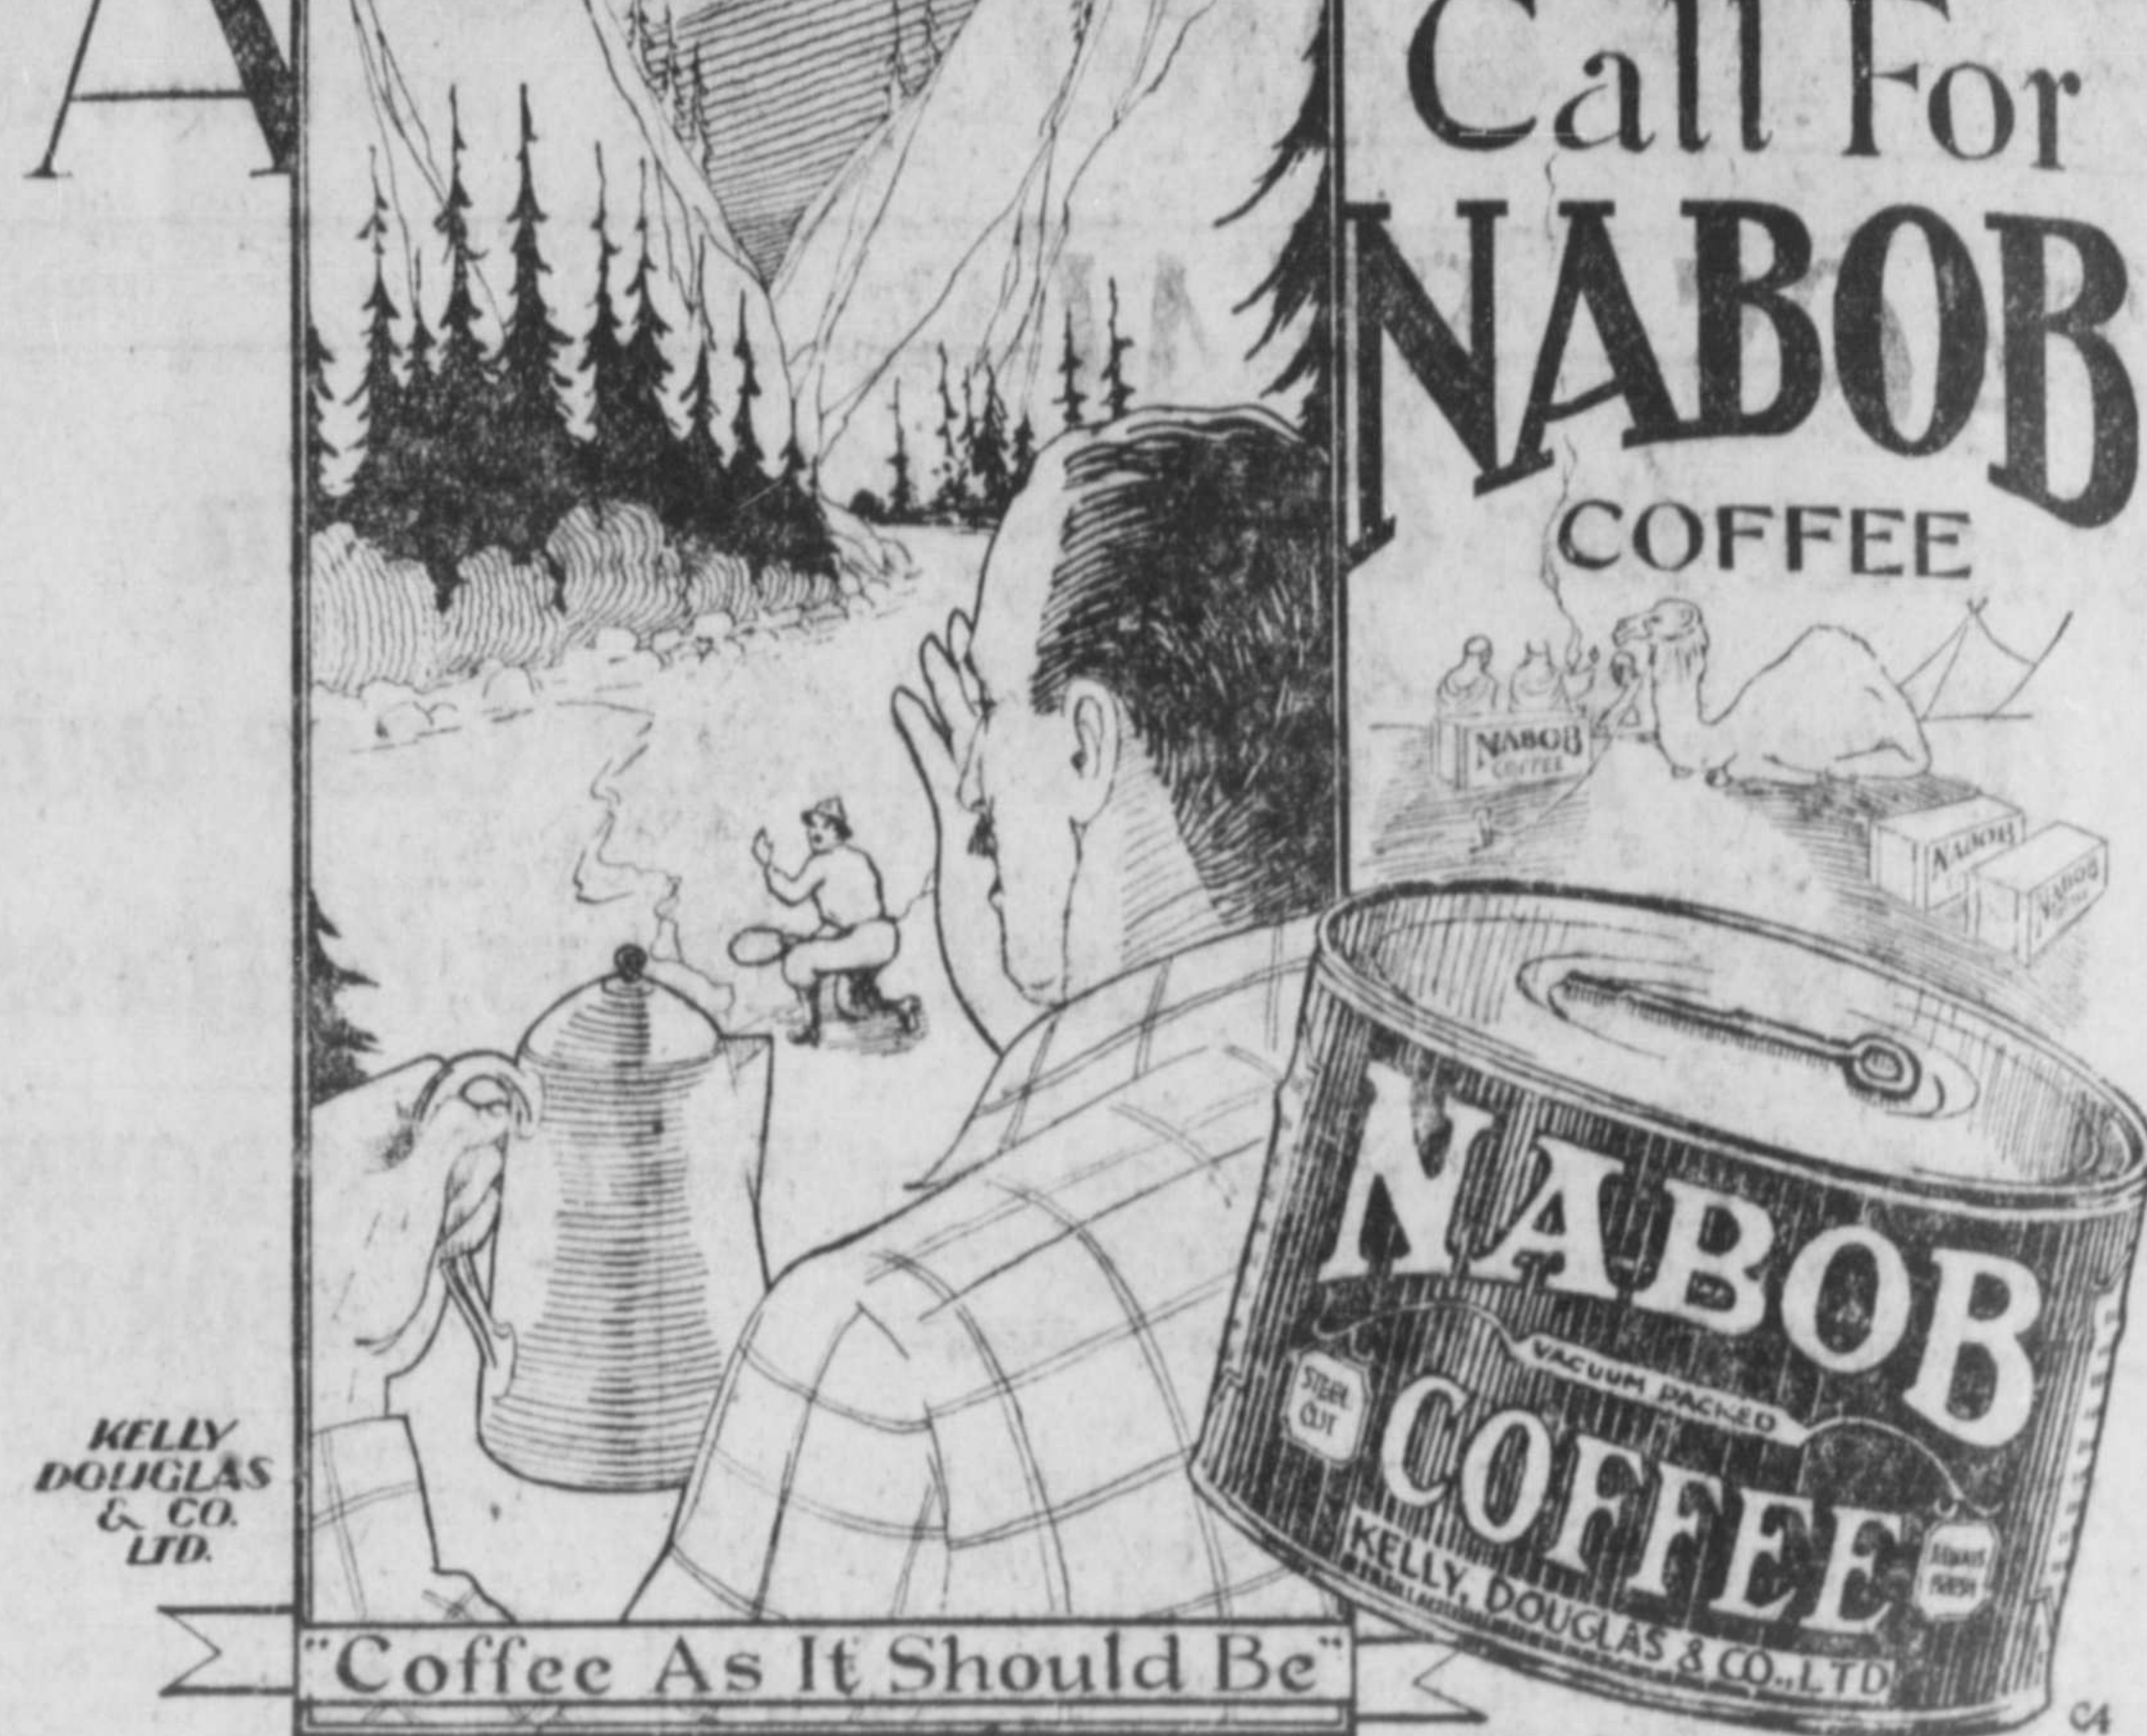

Had Good Goose And Duck Hunt At Hartley Bay

Ald. C. H. Orme and J. W. Scott returned to the city yesterday afternoon with Capt. R. Gammon and Tom Watts on the Bertha G. after a tea-day hunting trip to Hartley Bay. They were successful in bagging a goodly number of geese and ducks. Fog, which had been lying heavy over the city for the past two or three days, was not experienced on the trip home yesterday when it was bright and sunny in Grenville Channel, although the mountains were shrouded.

Strength After Childbirth

"After my baby was born I was very weak and run-down. I was not able to do any heavy work but I had to be around on my feet all day. The strain proved too great and I was real sick for about two months. My mother advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started to take it. You should have seen the change in me. I am now well and strong and in good spirits. I have taken the Vegetable Compound ever since if I feel my energy lacking. I also take Liver Pills and I find them a wonderful help for constipation."

Miss BROWN of X.Y.O.

Copyright, 1927, by E. Phillips Oppenheim

SYNOPSIS

Miss Edith Brown, pretty stenographer, is lifted from her dull life of routine into a land of adventure and romance by a chance bit of dictation which she takes down from the lips of a man who says he is dying—Colonel Dessiter. The next morning, when she starts to the bank to place her notes and other documents with which she has been entrusted in a safe-deposit box as instructed, she is attacked by ruffians and saves her bag only because she has strapped it to her wrist. She finds her acquaintance eagerly sought after by people of all sorts. Noel Frankland she likes least, although her chum, Frances Austin, does not snub his uncouth advances. However, Frances finds a real admirer and Edith a partial confidant in a young Russian, who describes himself merely as "Paul" and invites the girls to the restaurant where he and his parents gain a bare living to which he adds a pittance earned as a professional dancer. Then after a mysterious invitation to a party from the Princess Streppoff she is again vainly importuned to disclose her secret. Finally, through a newspaper ad in code, she is summoned to a secret chamber in one of the Government buildings where a certain John Glyde produces her notes, which she had instructed the bank to deliver to no one but herself, and bids her transcribe them. When, to her amazement, she finds the notebook pages blank, both realize that her documents have been tampered with. Then it dawns on Miss Brown that John Glyde is none other than Dessiter himself. His death had been announced to throw his enemies off the track, and immediately he enlists her help to thwart any scheme to get her notes into the opponents' hands. It is disclosed that the enemy has an accomplice who exchanged her book in the bank vaults for a bogus one. Dessiter gives her instructions to get the real documents as soon as the bank opens next morning, but a mysterious warning from Eric Greatson, supposed to be in the opponents' camp, and an unusual accident delays her arrival and as she approaches the bank a great explosion wrecks the building and spreads havoc in all directions.

INSTALMENT XXVI.

"There is something else which I must tell you," Miss Brown continued. "This morning Mr. Greatson came to my rooms."
 "He visits you there?" Dessiter exclaimed abruptly.
 "He has never been near them before. Neither my friend nor I receive any visitors there. He came to beg me not to go to the bank."
 "So he knew!" Dessiter muttered. "That's news to me. I thought that what they call the action branch was supposed to run their business entirely apart from the general party."
 "I suppose he must have known," Miss Brown conceded reluctantly. "I absolutely refused to change my plans. Then, while I was getting into the car, a man came up and stabbed the tire."
 "I heard of that," Dessiter reflected.
 "It made us between five and ten minutes late in starting. I suppose that is the only reason I wasn't blown to pieces."
 Her eyes met Dessiter's. For a man whose acquaintance with women and their ways was scant, he was swift to realize their faint gleam of reproach. He smiled at her very kindly.
 "Please don't believe that I haven't thought of that," he begged. "Your safety was my first question, my first thought."
 She flushed a little, absurdly pleased.
 "I suppose you thought I ought to have mentioned it directly you came in," he went on. "Well, it was there, where it should have been. Then I saw how perfectly self-composed you were, and I left it. There's a fever about this work, you know?"
 "I know," she murmured.
 "So young Greatson is an admirer?" he continued after a moment's pause.
 "Isn't that what it is called in your world?"
 "If he is he has not mentioned it," Miss Brown replied. "What is it called in your world, Colonel Dessiter?"
 "How the devil do I know?" he retorted testily. "You have a fair idea of what my life has been like during the last two or three years. Do you think there has been any time for phantasmagoria in it?"
 Miss Brown considered the matter composedly.
 "One can scarcely tell," she decided. "These are the records, I imagine, of your public work, not of your private life."
 "They are the records of both," he snapped.
 "This Fan-te-shi," Miss Brown murmured, with her eyes upon the ceiling. "She appears to have been an acquaintance."
 "Of course she was. Women like that are useful. One drinks with them and flirts with them, gives them bon-bons and jewelry. Occasionally one learns what one wants from them."
 "It seems a little brutal to care for women only for what you can get out of them," she remarked.
 "What the devil are you cross-questioning me for?" he demanded.
 Miss Brown was suddenly confused. When she came to think it over she was horrified at herself. She rose to her feet.

 "If there is no more typing," she began.
 "Sit down," he interrupted.
 Miss Brown, notwithstanding her new humility, hesitated. She withdrew the hand she had stretched out for her coat, but she did not sit down.
 "Listen," he went on. "I've been wanting an opportunity to talk to you. You're in this thing now. I had to trust some one when I thought I might be going to die, and by good luck it turned out to be you. Are you willing to stay in?"
 "Please explain," Miss Brown begged, with a little flutter at her heart.
 "As my secretary I've got an official department now, you know, and yours will be a semi-official appointment. Three hundred a year and your keep when we're travelling, pension if you stay long enough and compensation to your relatives if you get it in the neck like I nearly did. What are you hesitating about?"
 "I didn't like being sworn at just now," Miss Brown ventured.
 "You shouldn't have been so damned irritating, then," was the blunt reply.
 She had a retort ready, but it remained unuttered. There was a twinkle in his eyes, a curve at the corners of his lips which seemed suddenly to humanize her prospective employer. Miss Brown felt

The man had a great deal to say about the morning's excitement. "Felt the ground rock beneath my feet," he told the girls.

very weak and very acquiescent. She sat down.
 "I didn't really hesitate," she confided. "There is nothing I should like so much in the world as to be your secretary, and go on with the work."
 He came over and laid his hand gently upon her shoulder.
 "That's all right, then," he said. "I'll try to keep you out of mischief, but you won't mind if there is a certain amount of risk now and then?"
 She lifted her blue eyes to his.
 "I shan't mind at all," she promised. "I'm not really a coward."
 "If I didn't know that," he growled as he touched the bell upon his way back to his easy-chair, "I shouldn't be making you this offer. Nine o'clock tomorrow morning, please, and bring some clothes. You may be going out of town."
 "What sort of clothes?"
 "How the de—mischief should I know what you wear?" he answered. "I beg your pardon—I mean, how should I know? Bring anything."
 "Am I going to China?" she ventured.
 "No, Camberley."
 Frances Again

Miss Brown arrived home escorted again, somewhat to her discomfort, in a Government car, to find Frances in pronounced negligence, lying upon her bed, smoking a cigarette and reading the evening paper.
 "Once more," the latter confessed, throwing down the newspaper and stretching herself, "the chickens have been too many for me. I need an antidote. What is the natural antidote, Edith, to feeding chickens and disposing of their dismembered remains?"
 "Dancing, dining and flirting, I suppose," Miss Brown observed, taking off her coat.
 Frances raised herself lazily, and with her hands clasped behind her head, looked across the room.

 "Edith," she murmured, "sometimes your intelligence astonishes me."
 "Are you dining with Mr. Frankland?"
 "I am not. To tell you the truth my vanity is a little piqued. Mr. Frankland has—retreated—the since. He hasn't been down this week or written."
 "So much the better," Miss Brown declared severely. "I call him a most objectionable person."
 "So do I, as a matter of fact," Frances yawned. "He thinks of nothing else except his wretched speeches and his influence with the working classes. I don't like men who are too much in earnest about anything in life except me. If only some nice man knew," she reflected, "how unsettled I am, how receptive, how easy a victim I should be to any one with a little affection to give and a little tact to use in the displaying of it, why I think I should be besieged. I have a new gray frock, Edith—it's really that new shade of smoke color—all the things that go with it, and some silk stockings to match I bought coming up from the station. You could put it all in a handkerchief case, and I have a coiffeur coming here in exactly twenty minutes. Can we get him a cocktail? It's the great Maurice, and I hear he never goes twice to a place unless he's offered a cocktail."
 "Not a drop of alcohol on the premises," Miss Brown replied. "You know that, Frances. Could he do my hair as well?"
 "He'd make an awful mess of it," Frances assured her. "These hairdressers have no knack of handling fine, simple hair like yours. I shouldn't let him touch it if I were you. The way you arrange it yourself, with those baby blue eyes underneath and your funny demure little mouth, gives you individuality at any rate. You may not be striking looking, Miss Brown, but if any one takes the trouble to look at you—well, you're quite worth it. Can I have a bath?"
 "You can if you have sixpence to put in the slot."

Frances swung herself off the bed.
 "I've been reading about this awful outrage in South Audley Street," she observed. "Did you hear it?"
 "Yes, I heard the explosion," Miss Brown admitted. "Every one did round here. A great many windows were broken in Curzon Street."
 "The police seem to have been pretty clever about it," Frances went on. "They've found the factory already where the bombs were stored—raided it this evening."
 "Was it in Tooley Street?"
 "How the mischief did you know? You've seen the stop press of the Evening Standard, I suppose."

Painful Boils One After The Other Broke Out On Arms
 Miss K. Rudd, 1100 Victoria Drive, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—"About a year ago I was troubled with boils. They broke out on my arms, and no sooner was one healed than another would come to take its place. I suffered great pain with them, and tried different medicines and ointments, but they did me no good."
 "I was advised to take

and, my, what relief I got; soon my skin was as clear as before."
 Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Miss Brown shook her head.
 "I heard something about it before I left my work," she admitted. "And I'm not sure that it was the police who were so clever after all. Many arrests?"
 "Not one yet. The warehouse was deserted and the man who threw the bombs was blown into small pieces. It seems a senseless sort of affair."
 Miss Brown shivered a little.
 "Go and have your bath," she suggested. "I may have one afterward while your hairdresser's here."
 "Go and have yours first. The man will be furious if I keep him waiting, and you know how I like to sleep."
 Miss Brown dutifully departed. When she reappeared clad in her dressing gown, the hairdresser had already arrived. With the necessity of a suspended toilette before her, she curled herself up in an easy-chair.
 He had a great deal to say about the morning's excitement.
 "Felt the ground rock beneath my feet," he told them both. "I was shaving a customer—a thing I don't often do, but it was Lord Ritchey, a very old client. I very nearly cut him, too—a thing that hasn't happened to me for fifteen years. You've heard the latest, I suppose?"
 "We've heard nothing except what's in the papers," Frances confessed.
 Maurice assumed an air of mystery.
 "Even if they bring off this universal strike it won't do what they think it will. I went to a meeting the other night," he went on confidentially. "There was a young man, Mr. Eric Greatson who spoke. Never heard such nonsense in my life. It was all kind of poetry stuff and imagine things—not a word that was a bit of good to a workingman."
 The two girls exchanged quiet glances.
 "Mr. Eric Greatson is supposed to be a very clever man," Miss Brown observed.
 "He may be clever in his own way," the man acknowledged, "which may be in writing verses for those to enjoy who understand them, or it may be in writing novels which he's quite right to call romances, because there isn't a word of truth in them, but as for any sort of help to the ordinary workman, there wasn't anything of that sort tumbled."
 He stood back and surveyed his handiwork. Frances made a little grimace at herself in the glass. It was an intelligent, almost a beautiful face, notwithstanding the "lightly discontented curve of the mouth."
 "You've made me look a shade less ugly," she admitted.
 "I've made you look in the fashion, madam," was the self-satisfied reply. "And that's what you sent for me for. I wish your friend would spare me ten minutes. I'd cut her hair so that her best friends wouldn't know her."
 Miss Brown shook her head.
 "You couldn't make me look fashionable."
 "Not worth while trying, either," Frances declared. "We girls all look like a flock of sheep nowadays."
 The hair dresser, who was secretly of the same opinion, packed up and took his leave. The two girls completed their toilettes in a leisurely fashion, and in due course started off on their expedition.

Lady Rhonnda Is On Warpath In Defending Women

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Lady Rhonnda, one of the most prominent business women of the country and a director of thirty companies, led England's unemployed femininity in a counter-attack on J. H. Thomas, lord privy seal and minister of employment. He, in a speech to the house of commons, had denounced "women pin money workers" as "economically unfair and against the interests of the nation. No legislation can cure it," he said. "It is a question of moral responsibility. The number of women engaged in industry today doing work that men did before the war is very substantial—women that need not be so employed."
 Lady Rhonnda retorted with: "It is strange that Mr. Thomas, a Socialist, should be advocating idleness for any section of the community. It is ridiculous to say that it is against the interests of the nation for women to work. Everyone either works or is kept by some one else. My own experience in business is that few women are engaged in it on a pin money basis. Most of them work because they need the money."

No Elsie Books For the Sailors

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 3.—When looking over books with a view to giving donations to the Navy League it is well to remember that "sailors are not interested in the 'Elsie books.'" A dismayed provincial convener of the league found it necessary (when appealing for donations) to ask for a little discrimination in offerings.
 A local bookseller maintains he has a steady demand for "Elsie" books around Christmas time, the devoted maiden aunt being still persuaded that girls read them. But, at any rate, sailors don't, and the nieces should remember this, the convener suggested.

PIPE HOME FROM TRIP

Old Corn Cob Returns To Prince Rupert After Absence of Six Years Touring World

An ancient corn cob pipe, which was started from here six years ago on a trip around the world, returned to Prince Rupert at the first of the week. It bears probably a couple of hundred tags, some of them very novel indeed, to show that, during its absence, it has girdled the globe. It reached many far lands in the course of its long trip, including Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand and many European points. Westminster Abbey was one of the places it visited. A C.N.R. express messenger, who started the pipe on its trip, is now stationed at Endako and it is being sent to him there.

MINERALS OF ATLIN

Paper on Northern Field by C. L. Monroe to Institute of Mining and Metallurgy

"The placer gold deposits of Atlin are today, after 31 years of continuous working, a field well worth the attention of the mining world," declares a paper on "Placer Mining in the Atlin District," which was prepared by Government Agent C. L. Monroe for reading last week at the annual meeting of the British Columbia Division of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy. "Although there have been perhaps ten millions or more in gold already taken from the district, there are still many more millions left in the creek beds." A popular conception that Atlin is a worked-out placer camp is far from the real situation, Mr. Monroe asserts.

After reviewing the history of the Atlin district, briefly and present mining operations there, Mr. Monroe expressed the opinion that future possibilities of placer mining in the district would depend largely on results obtained by the extensive operations now under way by large companies on Pine, Boulder and Otter Creeks. If these proved successful, it might be expected that other creeks would be developed along similar lines. The future of the district would also be dependent to a large extent on transportation facilities. The advent of the airplane into the mining field, the opening up of a motor road from Fairbanks, Hazelton and the recent developments in the mineral area on the lower Taku River all held unguessed possibilities for the alleviation of transportation troubles under which the Atlin district was now laboring. Atlin was receiving its share of attention, Mr. Monroe's paper stated, in the general mineral activity of Northern British Columbia and would necessarily benefit to a great extent from the same.

Mrs. Norman Bishop, Salisbury, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with faint and dizzy spells and when I would lie down I would suffer terribly with smothering spells. I got so bad I had to sleep propped up in bed. My doctor said it was my heart and nerves, and that I needed a good heart tonic."

"I was advised to take

District News

STEWART

The Stewart Board of Trade is considering the advisability of instituting a campaign to set forth the advantages of this port as the Pacific Coast outlet for the Peace River country. The board claims that Stewart is being studiously ignored in the campaigns being carried on at Vancouver and Prince Rupert.

James Brown Hay, who cooked a number of mining camps in this district, died recently in Vancouver, being 68 years of age.

William S. Orr, a pioneer resident of this camp and for some years identified with the staff of the B. C. Silver mine, has arrived from Premier to join the staff of the Stewart News. On the eve of his departure from Premier, a bride party was given in his honor at the home of D. H. Rae, superintendent of the B. C. Silver.

Rev. James Dewar of Anxox conducted United Church services here and at Premier on Sunday.

Indications are that it will be an open winter in this district. Bears were seen during the past week both in the Bear River and Salmon River valleys.

Mrs. George Irwin and family of Premier returned last week after an extended visit in the south with relatives and friends.

SHOULD BUY IN CANADA

(Nelson News)
Without reference to political parties or party policies, one fact seems patent enough to be a basis for general agreement. If Canadians wish or hope that Canadian products may be sold abroad, they ought to be willing to buy those products themselves. It takes a good deal of credulity to suppose that a Canadian-made article which does not command a preference in Canada can compete successfully against the products of all countries in foreign markets. If Canadians want to stimulate a demand abroad for goods produced in Canada, the best way they can do that is to ask for these goods when they go to the stores. In so doing they will help to strengthen the Canadian producer to the point where he can produce on terms to meet his foreign competitors. Any industry that is starved by lack of a good home market has very little chance of cutting much figure on the other side of the earth. Canadians should themselves buy what they want others to buy.
