Great Britain and United States Make Announcement of Reduction Expenditures on Defence Forces

Premier Ramsay Macdonald Tells Parliament of Proposed Slashes in Naval Construction View to Conform With the Peace Pact Policy Recently Adopted

LONDON, July 24.—The Labor Government has decided on a policy of naval reduction and steps have already been taken with that end in view. This afternoon Premier Ramsay Macdonald announced in Parliament in outlining the naval program of the Government that they had decided to suspend work on the cruisers Surrey and Northumberland. They will cancel the building of the marine depot ship Maidstone and cancel two contracts for submarines. Dockyard work and other naval construction will also be slowed down.

In making the announcement the Premier stated that the general position of the Government is that the defence of the country must be revised with two main conditions in view. The first of these is the chance of the defenses being used and the second is the efficiency and economy shown in their magnitude and character.

The Government has kept in view, the Premier said, the changes in policy and in the problem of national security as affected by the Peace Pact, if that pact is to be made an effective influence in international relations. To make it so is the controlling purpose of the Government and a systematic policy is being developed which will take a little time to complete and carry out with that intention.

Following discussions with Ambassador Dawes during which the field of difference on reduction and limitation of naval armaments had been surveyed, the two governments have made a fresh start in their solution, the Premier stated. "We have agreed upon a principle of parity. We have agreed that without in any way departing from the conditions of parity, a measure of elasticity can be allowed so as to meet the requirements of the two nations.

President Hoover Says Reductions Will Be Made in Cost of Both Army and Navy in View of Security Resulting From Operations of the Kellogg Pact

WASHINGTON, July 24.—With United States expenditures, for purely military purposes, exceeding those of any other nation in the world, President Hoover announced yesterday a general program for curtailing these outlays to the lowest point that will produce adequate national defence.

Through a new international agreement on naval arms, the President hopes to reduce the cost of maintaining the United States sea forces and as a means of slashing the army costs he plans to establish a commission of the leading army officers within the general staff to determine what savings can be made.

The American people should understand that the current expenditure on strictly military activities of the army and navy constitutes the largest military budget of any nation in the world and at a time where there is less real danger of extensive disturbance to peace than at any time in more than half a century, Mr. Hoover declared. "Our whole situation is modified by the Kellogg Pact," he added.

Russia Has Begun Open Hostilities China Declares In Published Manifesto

MUKDEN, Manchuria, July 24.—The Northeastern Provincial Government of China yesterday issued a long declaration in which it was declared that the Soviet of Russia had actually begun hostilities by the seizure of the Chinese cargo boats and freight trains and by sending airplanes over Chinese territory.

The manifesto declared: "Apparently this (action by Russia) will lead to a break of the Kellogg Anti-War Pact."

PEKING, July 24.—Concentration of troops is going on both sides of the boundary between Russia and Manchuria. While the Chinese soldiers are well disciplined, the army is inferior in equipment to the Russians.

British Association Presidential Address Delivered Capetown

Effects of Modern Civilization of Man, Including the use of Tobacco, Coffee and Tea, Discussed by One of Britain's Leading Physicians Today

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, July 24.—Great Britain for 50 years has every reason to be proud of her achievements in physiology, said Professor W. E. Dixon, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., of Whittlesford, Cambridgeshire, in his presidential address today to the section of physiology, British Association for the Advancement of Science.

"It is acknowledged that Great Britain can show records second to none and that her savants have included some of the world's greatest investigators," Prof. Dixon said in concluding his address on "Physiology, the Basis of Treatment. "It remains for us to hope that in the future she may attain equal success in the associated sciences directly concerned with the relief of suffering and the cure of disease."

In the course of his address Professor Dixon said "Civilization has been responsible for many new diseases. Civilization has brought bad sanitation in houses and even our windows may be depriving us of fresh air and filtering out certain rays of light bringing its attendant tuberculosis—for tuberculosis is a disease of houses. Science is now engaged in endeavoring to remedy the evil effects which it has produced."

Civilization is associated with health, indoor life, luxury and sometimes excessive mental exercise. These are the conditions that lead to exaggerated nervous sensibility and this is a much commoner feature of those engaged in a mental indoor life than in those engaged in outdoor physical life. It is not then difficult

PROHIBITION IS DISCUSSED

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The Wickersham proposal to divide the work of prohibition enforcement between the Federal and states governments has split the prohibition forces, some favoring the scheme and others bitterly opposing it.

ATTITUDE OF SOVIET

The Government of Russia is chosen from the Communist Party, known in Russia as "The Party."

The Party is an exclusive set of enthusiasts devoted body and soul to the Socialist cause, usually the sons of Socialists, bred and trained in a Marxian atmosphere. They see the regeneration of the world in the adoption of their system. They think and breathe it and radiate it and are willing to sacrifice themselves, even their lives, so that it may prosper. We may call them fanatics and they are that, for Socialism is their religion, the cause which to them makes life worth living.

With such a group, numbering less than two millions, at the centre and heart of Russia, it is not difficult to conceive how hard it is for them to make terms with a capitalist Government which they despise and the destruction of which they think would be of great benefit to the world. If Russia fights, it is a holy war, and will differ in this respect from the other countries in that the people who bring on the war are the same people who will be among the leaders in actual fighting.

The Russian Government despise our system and the people who are its leaders. They look down upon every government except their own, but are earnestly sincere in trying to maintain it.

If this Russian attitude of mind is remembered in connection with all news despatches coming through telling about the present Manchurian situation it will help readers to interpret the actions of the Russian Government. Doubtless when Russia signed the Peace Pact it was with the idea that permanent peace could come only through the eventual triumph of their system and that a brief war now followed by lasting peace under Communism was preferable to a patched up peace.

While all Russian people do not share the enthusiasm of "The Party", they are so influenced by it that they will fight with patriotic fervor. Whether China is yet sufficiently imbued with a similar spirit in regard to their own country to make the troops formidable opponents is doubtful. The men who surrounded Dr. Sun Yet San at the beginning of the movement doubtless were. They were patriots who were willing to make great sacrifices for the cause, but for a huge country like China there would need to be a million patriots to enthuse the rest of the country.

China is emerging but she has not yet reached the stage of revolutionary development attained by Russia and will not oppose the enemy as a unit.

Possibly there will be no war, but if there should be, it is well to bear in mind the relative conditions of the two countries in estimating the prospects for the outcome.

to understand the excessive use of tobacco in some of these people since one effect of tobacco and perhaps its most beneficent effect, is to increase the threshold of sensation in those super-sensitive. When this super-sensitiveness reaches extreme limits these people are referred to as neurotic! They easily weary of the strain and anxieties of seeking a livelihood.

Now it is these higher faculties of the mind which are most responsive to narcotic poisons which influence these long before those concerned with movement and ordinary sensation—so that the super-sensitive people under the influence of narcotics lose the exaggerated effect of their sensations and become more like normal people; the everyday trifles and inconveniences of life are no longer exaggerated out of proportion to their significance and, life instead of being oppressive and anxious, becomes pleasant and free from worry. Hence it is easy to understand the modern tendency in some highly civilized nations to indulge in narcotic drugs like morphine, heroin and cocaine.

It is another curious fact that it is just these super sensitive people who drink the caffeine beverages like tea and coffee in excess. This caffeine relieves drowsiness and fatigue by direct stimulation of the brain cells. In large doses the caffeine beverages induce restlessness and nervous excitability and they may produce disturbed sleep, headache and confusion. Few people no doubt take caffeine to this extent but most of us take from two to five grains daily and the effect of this continued as a daily ration throughout life is a factor of significance of which is unknown. We do know, however, that caffeine increases sensitiveness to ordinary physical as well as mental sensations.

Drunken Nation

"England was once a drunken nation and the larger towns contained such notices as: 'Here you may get drunk for a penny; dead drunk with clean straw for two pence.' Before the Industrial Revolution the consumption of beer alone was 90 gallons a head per year; it is now about a quarter of this. With this diminution of beer drinking is associated a truly enormous increase in tea and coffee drinking. To me it seems not unlikely that this substitution of tea and coffee for beer is not wholly unconnected with the tendency of highly civilized nations to become super-sensitive and neurotic, for this is the frame work on which drug addiction is built."

At the outset of his address Professor Dixon stressed the fact that the ultimate aim of medicine was the prevention and cure of disease. "This practical aspect so far dominates all other," he said, "that medicine is often referred to as the healing art; indeed it is difficult to think of medicine apart from treatment."

Continuing, the speaker explained the nature of disease as any unusual functioning of the tissues which might be the result of accident, hereditary weakness or the presence of pernicious germ-life.

Organized Common Sense

"The science of medicine," he said, "is nothing more than trained and organized common sense based on physiology. It is still usual to speak of it as an inexact science; obviously wrong since medicine uses the same methods as every other science and the results of observation are as definite as those of the chemist or physicist, although it is true that in the complexity of the problem with which the physician has to deal all the conditions of importance may not be known and the results of an investigation though correct for the conditions under which it is taken may be misleading."

The speaker directed the attention of his audience to the progress made latterly in the treatment of disease. During the nineteenth century he said medicine was exclusively occupied with diagnosis so that the medical literature of the period deals almost entirely with the symptoms, activities and results of the various diseases and contained no indication of treatment whatever. It was said the almost complete lack of indications for treatment in the late Sir William Osler's text book on medicine, which was in wide use, was largely responsible for the Rockefeller millions given to medicine. This state of affairs was unavoidable at the time Professor Dixon pointed out, on account of the fact that the sciences of physiology and pathology were in their infancy. Even to this day our knowledge of diagnosis was far in advance of that of treatment, he said.

BRAVE REBEL DIES A HERO

Leader of Religious Movement in Mexico Ended His Life Fighting

MEXICO CITY, July 24:—Knowing he must perish, Gen. Enrique Goroztieta, commander of all the "Cristeros," or religious rebels, in the state of Jalisco and fiercest of the fighters who rallied to "Viva Cristo Rey," chose his own manner of meeting death and went with a gesture that aroused admiration throughout Mexico, even among those who were not in sympathy with his cause.

The story of the death of Gen. Goroztieta, which dealt a severe blow to the irregular rebellion, has just reached Mexico City. Disheartened by the constant reverses his men had suffered in their engagements with the augmented federal forces sent against him after suppression of the Escobar revolt, Goroztieta gathered his leaders and a few of his men at the Hacienda Ibarra in Jalisco, preliminary to disbanding them.

There was deceit in the camp, however, and Goroztieta's headquarters were revealed before his plans were consummated. He awoke the next morning to find the hacienda surrounded by 2,000 federals. He was trapped behind the thick walls, with escape impossible.

Calling his men around him, Goroztieta told them to surrender inasmuch as they likely would escape the consequences of their acts because of their lesser rank, but that he realized he must pay with his life for his leadership and bloody campaign against the government.

Heard Mass First

After hearing mass, he ordered his horse saddled and brought to the patio of the hacienda. There he mounted, a six-shooter in either hand.

The gates of the hacienda were thrown open and the doomed leader, once a trusted federal general and rated as among the finest artillery officers in Mexico, raced forth, lying low on the neck of his horse, with his revolvers blazing at the enemy. He managed to get some 500 yards outside the hacienda before a sharpshooting federal soldier got the range and knocked him from the saddle. He was dead when he dropped, but he had died in a manner that stirred the quick admiration of even his enemies.

Goroztieta's 40 officers obediently surrendered and were used as emissaries by the federal army. Goroztieta's body was embalmed and sent to his family in Mexico City, where it was given a private burial in one of the city's oldest cemeteries.

THE GREEN SHADOW

by HERMAN LONDON

Synopsis

Adele Castle is on the way to visit a mysterious Dr. Moffett, accompanied by the equally mysterious Miss Conway, who has told her Virgil Ellsworth Castle, her father, is in serious trouble and that Dr. Moffett can aid him. Adele has called up her friend, Paul Almsworth, and told him to trail Miss Conway's car. Two items are featured in the newspaper Mr. Castle was reading before he left for his office: the pursuit by the police of "Mr. Graves," who was associated in a reputedly shady deal which netted $10,000,000, and the latest exploit of the "Picnicker," a crook who preys on the rich and then offers the return of his loot if they give one-tenth of its value to charity.

Adele Castle has just had the weirdest adventure of her life. She has been taken by a mysterious Miss Conway to meet Dr. Moffett, who she meets but does not see. For as she enters the room of an old house in a part of New York she does not recognize she is met by a green light through which she observes only the vague outline of a man, who talks to her about her father.

THIRD INSTALLMENT

"As I told you," came from the chair beyond the rosewood table. "I am Doctor Moffett. I suppose my name is unfamiliar to you?" Adele nodded.

"Then," said Doctor Moffett, "in order that we may become better acquainted, let me tell you a little something about myself. The title that precedes my name is my rightful property. I was once a practicing physician specializing in diseases of the eye. The name itself doesn't matter so much. Names mean so little these days.

"Years ago I dropped the practice of medicine to devote myself to pleasanter and more profitable pursuits. I suppose you are wondering about this green light and why you can't see much of me, especially of my face. Well, there are reasons. There is nothing very mysterious about this light. You have seen the same thing occasionally in the theatres. As for my reason for sitting here in semiobscurity—

He laughed, a deep, whimsical laugh. "I am telling you this so that you will feel more at ease in my presence. We can't have a satisfactory discussion unless you feel wholly comfortable. You are more comfortable already, aren't you?"

"Yes, Dr. Moffett," said Adele in a voice that still sounded a little uncertain.

"That's splendid. Just a few more words about myself. I am probably the ugliest man in creation. Also, I am very sensitive about my unfortunate looks. That's one reason why I don't wish you to see my face, and that one alone would be sufficient. There's another, however. You might recognize me if you should ever see me, and that would be very unfortunate for both of us."

He laughed again, and this time the laugh sounded less pleasant than on the former occasion.

"Yes, it would be very unfortunate for both of us," he repeated, as if he wished to stress the point. "But we needn't worry about that. I am very careful not to show my face indiscriminately. You are not nervous now?"

"Not in the least," Adele assured him, straining the truth.

"Fine! We are going to have a practical talk, you and I, and that will require mental poise. Do you know, I never feel quite at ease except in a green light like this. It is the only kind of light that rests my nerves. Green soothes them, while most other colors irritate them.

"Did you happen to know that there is a separate nerve for each primary color? Well, there is. Green, for instance, has its own nerve, and so have blue and red. These nerves act as messengers, each carrying its own color sensation to the brain. Now, I am afflicted with a nervous ailment that has affected the nerves for blue and red so that these colors irritate me. With green it is different, and that's one reason why I am interviewing you in this sort of illumination." Adele was growing a trifle impatient. It seemed a very long introduction. Again she strained her eyes in the speaker's direction, but the ugly face to which he had alluded was still masked in a green shroud.

"Just another preliminary word," Dr. Moffett murmured. "I have suffered a great deal in my life, what with my unsightly face and my nervous ailment. Perhaps the experience has hardened me. At any rate, I have no patience with idealists and visionaries.

"I am what you would call a man of hard practical sense. All my actions are calculated to serve my own selfish interests. My desires are the only law I recognize and obey. I always attain my objectives. If anything stands in my way, I sweep it aside. Do you understand me better now?"

She smiled mirthlessly. As if one could understand a man whose face was not visible to the eyes! Yet an impression of a sort had been sketched on her brain. She wondered whether Dr. Moffett would sweep aside a human obstacle as ruthlessly as, according to his own words, he swept aside inanimate ones.

"Yes, I think I do," she murmured in response, gray smoke that drifted in front of the invisible face. Since she could not see the face she fell to studying the voice more closely. Despite the deep and pleasant timbre of it, her impression that it was not Dr. Moffett's natural voice grew stronger.

"Good, Miss Castle. You must be weary of hearing me talk of myself. I have spoken this way only in order that we may understand each other better. Now we shall talk about something else. You have probably heard of Daniel Forrester?"

"I think so," Adele stammered. The newspaper headlines she had seen at breakfast that morning flashed back into her mind with sharp vividness.

Forrester's Partner

"We can dispose of Forrester in a few words. He was a man somewhat like myself—ambitious, hard, aggressive and ruthless where his own interests were concerned—a man who scoffed at laws and conventions. It was his ambition to be rich. To realize that ambition he organized one of the greatest and most ingenious swindling schemes the human brain has ever conceived.

"In a little while—less than a year—he massed together ten millions. He would have piled up a hundred millions if he had lived and could have avoided complications with the law. While he lived he was lucky. The authorities didn't become cognizant of the illicit nature of his operations until three weeks after his death."

A new dread took hold of Adele, succeeding the sense of weirdness she had experienced. She thought she could see the trend of Dr. Moffett's remarks.

"You see, Miss Castle, Forrester was shrewd and subtle enough to make a crooked game appear straight. And so he continued his operations unhampered until he died. Then a storm broke. Hundreds of victims began to squeal and whine. An examination of Forrester's duplicate books told the story.

"But it was too late to punish Forrester. A dead man can't be brought before a jury. Yet somebody had to be punished. The whiners had to be pacified—a pack of greedy, yellow-livered fools who howled for vengeance when they discovered they had bit into a gold brick. A scapegoat had to be found."

Dr. Moffett laughed sardonically. "The authorities are still looking for the scapegoat. Maybe they will find him, but I rather think they will fail, unless I should tell them where to look. They are on his trail now, but it is a badly twisted trail. You see, the investigation showed that Forrester had a partner in his swindling operations, one who worked with him and shared in his illegitimate gains. The authorities found various traces of this partner scattered here and there, but so far they have been unable to learn who he is, although he has been mentioned in the newspapers as 'the mysterious Mr. Graves.'

Adele started sharply, though she had been in a measure prepared. She had an uncomfortable sensation that a pair of keen eyes was looking straight at her out of the velvety green mist that covered the speaker's face.

"I see the name is familiar to you," Doctor Moffett remarked. "The authorities are now searching for the mysterious Mr. Graves. They are going over Forrester's papers again, hoping to find some clew to his identity and whereabouts. If they ever find him, it is almost certain he will be convicted. Public sentiment is strongly against him, and a conviction of that sort would be a feather in the prosecutor's cap. In all probability the mysterious Mr. Graves would be sent up for ten years—perhaps fifteen."

Though she tried to hold it back, a faint moan of dread broke from Adele's lips.

"Did you say something, Miss Castle? No? Well, it is my opinion that the search will be fruitless. You see, some of Forrester's papers—the very ones that would reveal his identity and tighten the case against him—are missing."

"Missing?" Adele echoed in a hollow voice. "You mean—"

"Yes, I mean that through a fortunate occurrence those papers fell into my hands. They are now in my possession, safely hidden where no one is likely to find them. The mysterious Mr. Graves is really no mystery to me."

Adele felt a choking tightness at the throat.

"Who—who is he?"

The reply came after a pause which Doctor Moffett remarked. "The authorities are now searching." Wisps of cigar smoke whirled lazily in the air.

"Virgil Ellsworth Castle, your father."

Mysterious Mr. Graves

The semiannual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Knickerbocker Finance Corporation had been a stormy one. Several members had mutinied against the lately adopted policies of the chairman, Virgil Ellsworth Castle. Heated invective and sharp retorts had passed along the mahogany table, disturbing the decorum of a severely plain room bordered by sound-proof walls and sanctified to weighty deliberations. Otherwise dignified gentlemen in frock coats had forgotten they were gentlemen. Faces had flushed and voices had risen above the limits of good behaviour. It had been the most turbulent meeting in the history of the corporation.

It was over now. Mr. Castle had returned to his private office, furnished in the manner of classical dignity that became his position. He adjusted the flower in his buttonhole and mopped his face. A smile played about his lips as he stood at a window looking out over the harbor with its argosies from many lands.

It had been a good fight. He had thrown all his strength and the full force of his personality into it. His voice had alternately cooed and thundered. He had cajoled and bluffed; his tongue had flattered and lashed, as the occasion required. He had leaped from playful satire to vitriolic denunciation. And in the end he had won.

It had been a victory for Mr. Castle and his faction. Hence the satisfied, if somewhat tired, smile that now twisted his lips. It was a great satisfaction to know that he was a master of men, even if he was not at all times master of himself. For the time at least he had drowned a burden of fear and guilt in the tossing billows of a battle from which he had emerged victorious.

Almost soundlessly the door opened. Adele, the one person privileged to enter his inner sanctum without formality, stepped lightly inside and closed the door behind her. Mr. Castle, absorbed in his thoughts, heard nothing. She advanced a few steps over the rug, then paused and regarded the figure at the window. Her dark eyes, with a brooding haze in them widened slightly.

Her father was standing straight and erect once more—just as she had been accustomed to seeing him until recently, with head held high and shoulders thrown back—rocking slowly on his heels while he jingled a few coins in his pocket.

She wondered at the transformation. But she did not wonder for long. Too many things, some of them weirdly inexplicable, others poignantly real and clear, had happened in the last few hours to permit her to inquire into causes and effects. She was still seeing things through a green mist. There was a distant drone in her ears—Dr. Moffett's voice! Things that were incomprehensible thronged her brain, but uppermost was a sharp anxiety.

The last hour had been like a foggy dream in the morning. She had listened to Dr. Moffett's adroitly phrased proposition, asked time to think it over, and then she had departed as she had come, escorted by the languorous Miss Conway, too preoccupied with the first tragedy that had entered her young life to attempt to elude the surveillance of the silent woman at her side.

And now she was here, hoping against hope that her father's words would shatter the clouds that had gathered over her head and assure her that it had been all a hideous dream.

FOOTBALL IN RAIN MONDAY EVENING

One Goal Each Made by Empress and Thistle Teams at Acropolis Hill

In spite of the rain on Monday night there was a well contested football game between the Empress and Thistle teams which ended in a tie, one goal each.

At half time there was no score, but ten minutes from the finish Alex Haig scored for the Thistle team and one minute before the end when the referee was beginning to finger his whistle ready for the final call, Murray put the ball beneath the bar for Empress.

W. Barton was referee.

KERMODE'S BEAR IS SEEN ON STIKINE BY PASSENGERS ON BOAT

WRANGELL, July 24.—Passengers on board the Hazel B., arriving from a trip up the Stikine River, report seeing an albino grizzly bear where Glacier Creek empties into the Stikine.

It was toward evening that the bear was sighted. It was standing on a ledge almost directly above the boat, affording an opportunity for good inspection, before it made off into the woods.

Captain S. C. Barrington described the bear as being large and creamy white in color, with reddish ears and pink eyes.

Sport Chat

Local Baseball

Weather permitting, as always the regular scheduled game between the Gyros and Sons postponed from last night will be played tonight at the Acropolis Hill lot.

With the Sons enjoying a bit of a game and a half it is distinctly up to the service team to cut this lead down tonight. Not we will have to change S.O.C. club's name to the Athletics, because if they are stopped soon are going to make a runaway race of this league the same manner as the Mack's team is doing in the American League. The Gyros and Elks cannot be counted out, however, and when the standing is listed the proud Sons may yet be keeping company with the home brew in the cellar of the league. Do we hear any of disapproval from the mighty Sons.

Regiment Team

The Regiment team to be against Thistles tomorrow is expected to be Brand, Kees, Beaumont, Edgecombe, Hadden, Burdette, Russell, Wilson, Murray, Tinker and Norrington, Strachan.

The International Boundary between Canada and the United States, including Alaska, is 5,500 miles in length.

Driving EASE and Riding COMFORT

THE Ford car has established new principles in motoring comfort, proving that a light car of convenient wheel base can be made to ride with the same effortless, smooth ease as any of its weightier and more expensive road companions. The unique combination of transverse springs with an Houdaille shock absorber to each wheel, is one of the secrets of this remarkable performance—added to perfect balance and a body and chassis joined like one piece. This accounts for the tendency of the Ford car to hug the road at all speeds.

Model "T" Owners

So that you may continue to enjoy the advantages of Ford ownership coupled with new standards of quality and performance unequalled in the light car field, Ford Dealers are prepared to take in your Model "T" Ford Car at a fair market value. Drive in your Model "T" to be appraised and ask for a demonstration drive in the Ford Model "A".

Peculiarly restful driving is a direct result of this riding comfort. The feather-light steering wheel, that is rock-firm in the hand under any road conditions, gives the driver perfect control. Gears shift with silent precision and the change down from high to second, so often of use in traffic emergency, may be effected in one smooth motion.

Another unusual advantage offered by the Ford car is its turning ability. If is a narrow street indeed in which the Ford car will not turn completely without backing. Think what this means in city parking. A space little longer than the car itself may be used without tiresome manoeuvring.

Demonstration—Ask your Ford dealer to let you drive a Ford car. He will be glad to take you out. Select the steepest hills, the heaviest going—you will be amazed at the power at your command.

A demonstration will convince you of the outstanding merit of the Ford car. Also request your Ford dealer to show you the hidden, inbuilt quality features of the car.

Time Payment—If you prefer to buy out of income, you will find the authorized time payment plan offered by all Ford dealers most attractive.

Man in the Moon

A heat wave may affect the brain And make a person dotty 'Twas heat that made her permanent So very badly spotty.

Bernice, three years old, was asked by her daddy, who had just returned from work, what she had been doing all day. "Oh," she answered, "just setting mother crazy."

While nations of the world may talk And bickerings never cease, Prince Rupert is preparing to invade the mighty Peace.

Jake says if he doesn't get that new sidewalk this year, he'll quit criticising the city council and then they'll likely go out of business.

Sidewalk making Sets me quaking Fearing for the cost; May look natty Drives me batty, Thinking dollars lost. Council talking People walking What the Hades next? Sidewalk a wreck Break leg or neck I'm terribly perplexed.

"The Wolf of Wall Street" Is George Bancroft's Latest Effort for Paramount

All of the feverish excitement and hysteria that accompanies a "bull drive" on the Wall Street stock market has been captured in George Bancroft's new starring picture for Paramount, "The Wolf of Wall Street," coming to the Capitol tonight and tomorrow.

To accomplish this, Paramount went to unusual lengths in cast assembly and set construction. The interior of the New York stock exchange was duplicated in detail for one of the major sequences of the story and Hollywood and Los Angeles were scoured for men who were familiar with brokerage methods on "the floor." These men, many of them recruited from down-town offices in the financial district, were eager to see the interior of a motion picture studio and to play before the camera, and their enthusiasm, coupled with the directional ability of Rowland
V. Lee, brought out convincing performances from each of them.
The scenes on the floor of the stock market are declared to be highly dramatic and authentic portrayals of what actually happens daily in this "financial heart of the world."

Baclanova, Nancy Carol, Paul Lukas, among others, are included in the cast playing in Bancroft's support. The story of "The Wolf of Wall Street" was written for the screen by Doris Anderson.
