FAIR WEEK

Prince Rupert's 17th Annual Exhibition

NOW DOES nature summon her vast and colorful resources and bewitch the eye and mind of man.

Fair Week is the annual event in Prince Rupert that shows to the people of the city and the surrounding districts the glory of the soil, the product of the hand and patience of man and machinery—the triumph of man over the elements.

More than that, you who attend Fair Week will have all the fun that can be assembled and much of it free. You'll see races, ball games, you'll ride with the children, you'll try to hit the African Dodger—you'll have a big day every day you come in.

The merchants of the city will co-operate in this constructive good time work. They wish to make you comfortable and to supply your wants, so that you will return.

INTERESTING ADDRESS

Evidently Sir Henry Thornton plans to have a hotel in Prince Rupert if he can get the appropriations through and he doubtless has good reason to think he will be able to do so. Also, he has other important plans for Prince Rupert which, if carried out, will have the effect of placing the port really on the map as one of the important ports of the Pacific.

People who heard the addresses were much impressed with the sincerity and businesslike manner in which the statements were made. Evidently a serious attempt is to be made to carry out to a large extent the original policy of the railway builders. It is coming about in connection with the development of commerce on the Pacific. While very few direct promises were made, intimations were given of probable developments which have been already well planned and are likely to burst forth into fruition in the very near future.

LOCAL REPRESENTATION

Many Prince Rupert people have been dissatisfied at the fact that the presence of F. G. Dawson on the board of directors has had little effect in helping the development of Prince Rupert. Now it is seen that the policies which Prince Rupert people have been asking to have carried out have been well considered and plans laid to have them carried out. Evidently these plans have been laid well in advance and along the line of a settled policy which has to take time to develop. While Sir Henry is the man who makes the announcements and has the final say in regard to important policies, it must not be forgotten that the British Columbia representative on the board is there all the time with advice as to plans for this coast.

SHIPPING PLANS MOST IMPORTANT

The plans for the development of Oriental commerce in connection with this port were undoubtedly the most important of the announcements made by Sir Henry yesterday. While the hotel is something that on the surface seems more tangible and doubtless is important, the development of trade at this port promises vastly greater possibilities. Sir Henry did not mention the small matter of the provision of a small steamer to ply out of this port something that has been asked for in the past, but he did mention the bigger issue, that of the development of ocean traffic out of Prince Rupert. While his announcement was not definite, because the plans were not sufficiently advanced for a definite announcement, it seems evident that in the near future Prince Rupert will have the long-looked for trans-Pacific service, which will make the city a real port.

Score of Nine to Two in Favor of Prince Rupert in Inter-City Baseball

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE
Loblick on the Mound Held Paper Town Down to Six Scattered Hits

In the opening game of the Exhibition Week series between Ocean Falls and Prince Rupert, yesterday afternoon, the home team romped away from the boys from down south by a nine to two score. The weather was not favorable to good baseball, a steady drizzle keeping up during the entire game.

Loblick was on the mound for the locals, and whiffed 11 men in the seven innings the game went. He held the paper town boys down to six scattered hits, and, but for two infield errors in the sixth, would have had a shut-out to his credit.

Appleby, did the pitching for Ocean Falls, and although he was nicked for 12 hits in six innings, struck out fourteen batters. The local boys seemed to put their hits just out of reach of their opponents on several occasions.

Benny Wendle led the Rupert team at the bat, getting three hits out of four times up and one of them went for a double. Bill Mitchell, Lambie and Farquhar each hit safely twice.

Arcand, catching for the visitors, was the only man to get to Loblick, hitting safe twice in three trips to the plate.

Ocean Falls got their counters both in the sixth. Jolliffe struck out, Reid popped one to Loblick for the second out. Marshall then sent an easy one to Harold, but the throw was low and Marshall was safe. Woods then put one through Moran's legs and Marshall went to second. Arcand hit to left and filled the bases. Campbell rolled one to Harold, who made another bad throw but Mitchell got the ball and thought the man was out. He tossed the ball back into the infield and before it was recovered two men had crossed the plate. Arcand was then caught off third to end the inning.

Prince Rupert started right out in the first when Moran, lead-off man, hit to left field. Harold and Loblick both struck out, but Haveland poled one to left for a single. Wendle knocked one out in front of the plate and the catcher hit him with it in trying to throw him out. Moran scoring, and Haveland taking third, and Benny went on to second. Mitchell cracked a nice one to right, and Haveland and Wendle came home, McKeown struck out to end the inning.

They scored one in the second. Lambie and Farquhar singled to centre. Moran and Harold whiffed and Loblick hit one that Campbell should have got, but failed to, and Lambie scored. Haveland hit a high fly to Jolliffe for the third out.

Wendle started the third off with a line drive to left. Kennedy, fielder for the visitors, almost got it with his meat hand, and then he couldn't find the ball and Wendle took third. He scored on a wild pitch. Mitchell and McKeown both went out and Lambie hit to left. Farquhar struck out.

Appleby struck out five men in a row then and Prince Rupert didn't score again until the sixth. Lambie was safe when Campbell booted his grounder. Farquhar then drove one into centre field but no one got under it and he was safe. Moran and Harold struck out and Loblick drove a hard one past short-stop and Lambie and Farquhar scored, the big pitcher taking second on the throw in. Haveland drew a pass and Wendle made his third hit of the game, both runners scoring. Mitchell ended the inning by a strike-out.

KITIMAT BEAT PORT SIMPSON

Last Year's Native Soccer Championship Settled Last Night: 1929 Playoff Friday Night

Kitimaat won the northern British Columbia native football championship for the year 1928 by beating Port Simpson 7 to 0 yesterday afternoon. This match was a replay from last year, when, owing to inclement weather, the teams were unable to meet. The two villages will meet again tomorrow night to decide the championship of the fair board's cup for 1929.

In last night's game the Kitimaat team was far superior to that from Port Simpson. The outstanding player for the winners was Graham at outside left, who gave a fine exhibition of soccer.

W. E. Willisroft acted as referee and A. Clapperton and Carl Brand were linesmen.

A good-sized crowd, including many natives, witnessed the match.

Only Kitimaat and Port Simpson are entered this year.

Was In Bed All Summer

"I have to work in the store and do my own housework, too, and I got nervous and run-down and was in bed nearly all summer. The least noise would make me nervous. I was told to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken seven bottles. It has made me stronger and put more color into my face. I am looking after my store and housework and my four children and I am getting along nicely now."

INSTALMENT XXXIII

The Voice of the Dead

The room grew curiously silent. The ticking of the clock was the only sound, and even that had a muffled quality. Minutes passed, and still the cloistral quietude reigned undisturbed. A frozen silence seemed to have fallen over the occupants of the room. A crooked, mechanical grin hung slackly on Gossler's lips while he peered quite keenly at Dale out of his obdurate eyes.

Dale smiled. Were they actually hoping to wear down his nerves by such shallow hocus-pocus? It might have been something of a strain on a guilty conscience, but Dale's conscience was clear as far as the murder of Mrs. Ferryman was concerned. His only sensation, now that he knew that Miss Castle would soon be out of danger was one of curiosity. He knew surprise was coming, that it might be sprung any moment now, and he wondered what it would be.

Again he glanced up at the clock. The silence had continued unbroken for twenty minutes. The Stamford officers must have reached the house in the woods by this time. He hoped they would not bungle the search and that they would not be turned away with glib pretenses that all was in proper order.

The massive head across the table inclined in a slight nod. Gossler appeared to be signaling to some one in the back of the room. Footsteps approached Dale's chair, breaking the long pause. He glanced over his shoulder. Some one was approaching from behind carrying an object concealed beneath a rubber hood.

It was placed directly in front of him, and then an attachment like that worn by a switchboard operator was clamped down over his head. Two circular objects pressed lightly against his ears.

He gazed at the mysterious hooded object on the table. The surprise had arrived at last, but its nature was still obscure. A whirring sounded in his ears, and then he sat suddenly erect, every nerve and muscle straining. A scream rang in his ears:

"Martin Dale—the Picaroon—he shot me!" A horrible groan, a hoarse, almost tortured breath, and then: "My pearls—"

The words broke off and seemed to hang suspended in an awful silence. Then another hideous groan.

Dale sat spellbound. The scream, the hoarse, shrill exclamations, the gasps and groans—all were horribly realistic. And then the hollow silence at the end, even more gruesome than what went before. He stared at the hooded object. It seemed alive with anguish and dread. A phonographic recorder of some sort, perhaps. But that voice and those screams and groans sounded as if torn from a person in an ecstasy of terror and pain, with approaching death injecting its grim, husky note into each heart-piercing sound.

A little pause came. Dale stirred uneasily, and then he sat tense and motionless again while the ghastly sounds were repeated. Time after time, with short intervals of silence, the screams and frenzied shouts re-echoed in his ears. And then, gradually, the horror lessened by sheer repetition, shattering nerves.

Dale still listened, but he listened critically now, studying each sound, weighing every syllable of anguish. His gray eyes narrowed slightly. Beneath the screams, the groans and the shrill exclamations, there was a dull undertone which at first his ears could scarcely grasp. It was a muffled sound, an distant rumble that was distinct from the agonized human voice. He strained his ears. There it came again, the dull, far-away vibration that was like a feeble orchestral accompaniment to the rest. In a moment he had it. Thunder!

He smiled faintly. Then the earpieces were removed and the hood was jerked from the object on the table. Doubtless it was intended to serve as a highly dramatic touch, but he merely shrugged his shoulders.

"As I thought. A dictaphone."

"That was Mrs. Ferryman's voice you heard," Gossler jabbed at him.

"She accused you with her dying breath," Summers shouted in his ear.

"She recognized you as Martin Dale and as the Picaroon," Gossler thundered.

"That's why you killed her," Summers bawled. "You were afraid she would tell."

"You took her pearls," Gossler yelled. "Then you murdered her."

"But the shot didn't kill her immediately," Summers roared. "She lingered a few minutes. All she could think of was that her murderer shouldn't go unpunished."

"And so, with her last breath, she spoke his name in this old dictaphone," Gossler rasped out.

"It was under the table together with several other articles that Mr. Ferryman had left there since he used that room as his study."

"She was down on the floor, dying," Summers cried. "She was throwing out her hands in agony. Her fingers closed around something. It was the speaking tube of this dictaphone. She knew at once what it was. She worked in an office once. She spoke in the mouthpiece, using all the strength she could summon—and she said enough to send you to the chair."

Summers paused for breath.

"This afternoon I found the dictaphone under the table, with the speaking tube hanging down to the floor. I'd seen it the first time I was in the room, just after the body was found, but thought nothing of it. This afternoon I thought I'd see if there was a record in it. It was just a hunch—"

Gossler thrust out a chubby forefinger at Dale. "You killed her! You can't deny it!"

"Her own voice is accusing you," Summers cried out.

"Ferryman has identified the voice as his wife's," Gossler shouted.

"The case is complete."

"You might as well confess."

So it went on. Each in turn the two inquisitors hurled accusations and denunciations at Dale. Their voices grew hoarse. They perspired freely. Their intimidating gestures became a little limp. In desperation, as they saw Dale's cool demeanor, they raised their voices and resorted to more violent gesticulations.

Dale sat back, his arms comfortably folded, and smiled complacently. Summers, completely out of breath, turned to an officer who had approached his chair. The officer whispered something in his ear. The captain mopped his steaming face.

"So, you lied!" he exclaimed.

"What's that?" Dale demanded, his bland composure instantly gone. A dread premonition knocked at his brain.

"We've just heard from the Stamford police. They found the house—searched it from attic to cellar." Summers chorled sarcastically. "They found no young lady in distress—only a feeble old man. So much for your—no, you don't!"

He jerked a pistol from his pocket. Dale had sprung up and looked as if contemplating a leap for the door or one of the windows. With a sturdy thrust the officer stationed behind him down again. With a grunt Summers placed the pistol in front of him on the table.

"I knew all the time it was only a stall," he muttered.

With a look of resignation Dale leaned back in the chair again, but his brain was at fever heat. The inquisition began anew, all the more violent for the breathing spell. Questions were hurled. Thunderous denunciations crackled in the air. Dale forced a smile that masked his turbulent fears.

Mr. Jacobs expects to visit here frequently in the course of the Corporation's construction work in connection with Falls River hydroelectric development.

The attendance at the exhibition this year is quite up to expectations and, indeed, is exceeding many past years. Last night there was a large audience in the hall when there was a vaudeville program in which Capt. George Ash, Miss Myfanwy Campbell and her dancers, and the Three Naths participated. The attendance at the Ocean Falls-Prince Rupert baseball game yesterday afternoon was disappointing, due, no doubt, to unsettled weather conditions.

McARTHUR'S SHOE STORE

THIRD AVENUE, PRINCE RUPERT

ADDRESS OF SIR HENRY THORNTON TO PRINCE RUPERT BOARD OF TRADE AND GYRO CLUB WAS STIMULATING.

The railway would use what influence it had to secure the shipping of grain this way.

Will Not Be Sold

Referring to the suggestion that the line might be sold to the C.P.R., Sir Henry said every now and then there was a proposal of some kind to try to bring about the dismemberment of the C.N.R. He assured the people here, however, that it could be done only over his dead body and that of other officials.

In regard to the development of business on the Pacific, Sir Henry said they admitted they might have given more intensive administrative care to that section of their business. They were setting this right by the appointment of A. E. Warren as vice-president with executive powers in the west and the further appointment of D. T. Cappel to Vancouver and of Colonel Hyam as assistant to the president with jurisdiction throughout British Columbia. He assured the gathering that the business of the railway would be in sympathetic hands.

Referring then to the steamship services, Sir Henry mentioned incidentally that the services were being strengthened by the addition of new vessels and this would contribute to the welfare of Prince Rupert.

Salmon Distributing

The company proposed to make Prince Rupert the principal salmon distributing point on the coast. He expected that very soon practically all the salmon would be shipped from this point.

Operation of the drydock was continuing and the company would continue to send ships here. Already they were paying out $800 a day in wages. The addition of a quarter of a million dollars worth of work was already planned, in addition to that now in hand, which would keep the dock busy.

Sir Henry said he hoped to bring a big steamship organization to this coast and while Prince Rupert would not be the only port used, he expected a good share of the business would come here. He mentioned this to show that the Canadian National was not neglectful of the interests of Prince Rupert. He would like the people here to feel that if the C.N. had a baby anywhere this was it.

Sir Henry thanked the people of Prince Rupert for their patience and assured them of his good will and co-operation in the future.

"Listen to that car spitting and choking! That's nothing but poor gas and oil. Believe me, I never have that trouble with my car—I've tried them all and I'm convinced there's no gas or oil can touch that refined in B. C. There are over 600 men employed in refining petroleum products in B. C. and for cold weather, warm weather, pick up and mileage per gallon, their products are superior to all others."

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN HERE

Famous Play Is Greatest Human Drama Ever Screened; Took Two Years to Make

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," the picture which took two years to make and which cost two million dollars, opens here tonight and plays for the rest of the week at the Capitol Theatre. Taking part in it are a score of star principals and a cast of many hundreds. It deals with the great human dramas of passion in a story that will live for ever. An epic in its sweep, mighty in its magnitude, nothing has yet been on the screen equal to it.

Reading the story does not give the idea like witnessing the real true story as seen in all its dramatic thrill and intensity in this film. The audience laughs with Topsy, cries with little Eva, hates Simon Legree, pities Uncle Tom, and shudders at the stark realism of Eliza crossing the ice. It is a veritable screen sensation.
