Germany Favors Joining United States of Europe in Speech at the Opening of Meeting at The Hague

THE HAGUE, Aug. 6.—Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany today indicated an attitude favorable toward Premier Bland of France, who in letters suggested a plan for a united states of Europe.

Dr. Stresemann was one of those replying to the address of welcome from Prime Minister Van B'okland of Holland at the opening of the international congress for the discussion and settlement of the European post-war debt problems. He spoke of the time when the states of Germany were divided by customs barriers and said that in a manner the situation found its analogy in the present division of the larger European states.

New direction, Stresemann said, must be given to world economy. The present discussion was not important from a financial standpoint alone. Significance was found in the political phases.

Thirty-eight delegates were present, statesmen from twelve countries, including Great Britain, Germany and Japan. There were 400 subordinate delegates, and the meeting chamber was crowded to overflowing. Three hundred newspapermen were in the galleries.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Newspaper comment respecting the possibility of the establishment of an air line service across Europe to America agrees that Britain must build faster ships than the Graf Zeppelin if she is to enter the field of competition.

The hope is expressed that the giant dirigibles R-100 and R-101 now in process of construction will better the Graf's time and be generally more satisfactory ships. The possibility of a race for supremacy of commercial flying is seen, with Britain and Germany as the leading contestants.

BANK BANDIT FIVE YEARS

Ten Lashes Also For Man Who Held Up Smithers Teller

SMITHERS, Aug. 6.—James Wesley Burke, who held up the local branch of the Royal Bank of Canada three weeks ago, after a speedy trial this morning, was sentenced to five years and 10 lashes by Judge H. E. A. Robertson this morning.

On July 17 the teller of the Royal Bank was suddenly confronted by a masked man with a gun and was forced to pass a large sum of money through the wicket after which the man escaped.

Before he was able to leave town, L. H. Kenny, local broker, intercepted him as he was making his getaway, but was only able to secure a small portion of the stolen money, the bandit once more escaping.

For nearly two weeks the police as well as local men searched the country for him, and several times he was nearly captured but was able to make his getaway. But to an Indian came the final honor of capturing him. He was followed by the native, who tracked him and found him asleep under a tree. Pointing his gun at him he held him and then turned him over to Sergeant Service, who put him in the local jail to await trial.

The sum of $1,100 and a revolver were recovered, found buried near Walcott, east of Smithers.

Canadian Fishing Industry is Due for Heavy Blow if Tariff Proposals of U. S. Go Through

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—Canada's fishing industry will suffer seriously if the proposed changes in fisheries schedules of the United States become law, says a statement of the department of marine and fisheries, which indicates the position. It declares that the Hawley bill proposes increases in duty against Canadian smoked filets, smoked herring, dried and salted fish and boneless fish.

The Hawley bill has passed the House of Representatives and is now being considered by the senate committee.

Important changes in the schedule hit at the smoked filets business, which has been advancing rapidly lately, increasing from 1 1-4 to 3 a pound the tariff rates. About three-million pounds was exported to United States last year. Smoked herring rates were increased similarly.

The dried and salted fish tariff is up from 1 1-4 to 2 1-2 cents a pound. This industry will be seriously hit.

Generally speaking, the statement says, no changes are proposed by the senate committee to offer any relief to the sea fisheries. As a result of the tariff changes the Canadian industry will take a severe blow.

Effort to be Made Soon to Utilize Big Salmon Dock Prince Rupert

Prince William Will Be Operated to Canneries and Other Nearby Points With Freight and Passengers

When the steamer Prince William is refitted and put into service an effort will be made to secure the shipment of canned salmon through this port, using the big salmon dock for assembling the product here and shipping it direct after it has been collected by the smaller vessel.

The Prince William will be particularly suited for the purpose of handling canned salmon. She is being fitted, not only with the regular wireless outfit, but by a wireless telephone with which they can talk to the canneries. A special effort is to be made to go out for this business and the dock will at last be utilized.

B. C. Keeley, superintendent of Canadian National coast steamships, was in the city yesterday on his way to Vancouver, having come through from the east, where he had been in consultation on matters relating to Prince Rupert and other sections of the territory. He is quite enthusiastic over the new steamer which is to ply out of this port. She will carry 200 tons of freight and 32 passengers and draws only nine feet of water. This will allow her to go into any cannery and she will also have speed which will be used when necessary. The skipper who brought her out from the Atlantic coast said she was the finest sea-boat he had ever been on.

Yesterday there was quite a party of C.N.R. officials in the city. G. A. McNicholl, general passenger agent, who has just made the round trip to Alaska, says they are doing all the business they can handle now on their Alaska run and of course they expect great things when the new Alaska steamers get into commission next year. He thinks this will benefit Prince Rupert.

In the same party is the chief auditor of the company, Mr. Baldwin, who is looking after his duties in that department.

Prince Rupert people will be glad to know that at last the big dock is to be utilized. It is a splendid structure and when the fittings are completed will be just the thing for the purpose planned.

ORDINATION AT THE CATHEDRAL

Rev. Cyril James Lee Becomes Clergyman of Church of England

The ordination took place Sunday morning at the pro-cathedral of Cyril James Lee of Wallington, Surrey, who has been in Prince Rupert only about a month, coming here directly from England. He is going to Stewart to take charge of the church at that place.

The ordinary church service took place at 10 o'clock and at 11 Right Rev. Bishop Rix ordained Mr. Lee. He was assisted by Rev. J. B. Gibson and the service was full choral.

Taking as his text "Take off thy shoes from off thy feet for the place where on thou standest is holy ground," the Bishop spoke of the high calling to which the candidate has devoted his life and urged him to be faithful in all things having in mind always the life of the great master.

Mr. Lee is graduate of a training centre near London under the Brotherhood of St. Paul where men are given special instruction in the work overseas. He preached at the evening service here Sunday and will leave at the end of the month to take charge at Stewart.

DAILY EDITION Tuesday, August 6, 1929

WINSTON CHURCHILL

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill is to visit Edmonton and possibly he might come to Prince Rupert if asked. It would be too bad for such a prominent person to leave Canada thinking he had seen it and yet not having looked over Canada's greatest fresh fish port. No matter what we may think of the policies advocated by Mr. Churchill, we all must agree that he is an outstanding personality and one of the leading figures of the British Empire.

ROAD TO ALASKA

The Vancouver Province publishes an editorial article commending the proposal to build a highway to the Alaskan boundary, but qualifies it somewhat by saying:

"Of course, there is more than one Alaska. There is the Panhandle, which shuts off a good stretch of Northern British Columbia from the coast, and there is the great territory farther north. Premier Tolmie has not indicated to which he purposes building his road. The Panhandle is much nearer. It is not a great many miles from Prince Rupert, and only a step from Stewart, and to both these cities the road system of the province will have to be extended within the next few years. But the Panhandle is a country through which it would be difficult, or impossible, to construct a highway connecting with the rest of Alaska. On the other hand, a highway to the greater Alaska of the north would have to be very much longer, would cost millions more, and would have to pass through the Yukon."

PRINCE RUPERT AND ALASKA

Prince Rupert is probably the nearest point to Ketchikan. Cars coming here could easily be shipped to that city but could not go any farther because Ketchikan is on an island.

A highway to Stewart would connect with Alaska at Hyder, but from there it could not very easily get into the heart of the territory.

To get to the northern part of the territory it would have to go through Atlin.

A very thorough investigation will have to be made and the province will have to be assured that the highway is a feasible one before it can be carried through to connect up with the territory of Alaska. It would be chiefly a tourist drive. Nowhere on that route could be found finer scenery than along the Skeena River to Prince Rupert, therefore the first thing to do is to connect with Prince Rupert.

DRESS FOR MEN

At a recent banquet in Prince Rupert the hall was crowded and it was intensely hot. The ladies present did not mind it because they were dressed for just such occasions. They took their coats off and were comfortable. The men stewed as they deserved. They wore ugly black clothes which were thick and uncomfortable and they could not be taken off.

Men are like penguins which sit and allow anyone to come along and knock them down. They make no effort to protect themselves. They go to events that are sure to be crowded and hot wearing uncomfortable heavy clothes and they get exactly what they expect. How much more happy they would be in tennis clothes, but custom says that would be improper. They are the most foolish creatures in the world.

A few people in England have commenced a rebellion against such foolishness. They are backed by Dean Inge of the Anglican Church, but little headway has so far been made. If the Prince of Wales and a few other prominent persons could be induced to wear for such occasions light flannel trousers and a soft loose shirt and very light coat, possibly a tennis blazer, the custom might spread and we should all be able to enjoy banquets and dances instead of enduring torture. It would be a great thing for the world to be thus freed from bondage to the dictates of a foolish fashion.

SEES BRIGHT PROSPECTS IN PRINCE RUPERT

Editor of Financial News Tells of What He Sees in Recent Visit to City

IMPORTANCE OF HIGHWAY Sees Great Advantage to Be Gained in Opening City to Highway System of World

"City of hope deferred" might very well describe Prince Rupert in 1929, but to that epithet there should be the qualifying appreciation of the fact that Prince Rupert is still a city of high hopes and one where those hopes are well justified, says Howard T. Mitchell, in the Financial News.

Not many communities in the west have been called upon to experience the disappointments that have come to Prince Rupert. There can be no object in detailing them here. Sufficient to say that they have been very real disappointments and that the latest of these is the fact that the splendid big grain elevator built at Prince Rupert is standing closed down and the spouts are lashed to the sides of the loading gallery.

But though business men of Prince Rupert say that things this summer are a little quieter than usual, the outlook for the comparatively near future is not at all uncheerful.

There is the matter of non-rotation of this great elevator by the Wheat Pool. A little more than 2,000,000 bushels of the bumper crop of 1928 was put through it last fall and winter before it closed. But there was a 9d. per ton differential on grain shipped from Prince Rupert to the United Kingdom as compared with that shipped from Vancouver. It was fatal to Prince Rupert exports, for practically all grain business done by Prince Rupert has been with the United Kingdom.

Two Lights Needed

What caused this differential? It was imposed by the shipping companies because two lights were needed in Hecate Straits to make navigation safe and for lack of them ships had to sail north of the Queen Charlottes to enter Prince Rupert harbor, with frequent lay-overs on account of fog encountered in that region. It may be expected that those two lights will be provided and that the better route will be used next year. At least, Prince Rupert has registered a vehement protest with Hon. Mr. Robb and something is likely to be done about it. The Pool will not use Prince Rupert until then.

Then there is the development that is to be undertaken at Stewart. It is the main topic of conversation in Prince Rupert. At first there were some misgivings as to what effect a road from Stewart inland would have on Prince Rupert, but that is passing.

Prince Rupert is realizing now that it could not have less trade from the north than it is getting now from a territory in which reside less than 500 white people — and any development that occurs whether by reason of Stewart or any other port of exit or entry can only have a beneficial result on the business of Prince Rupert. As one man put it: "Sir Henry Thornton is not one to take the aggressive in the west with new development. Beatty has moved to line up the northern B.C. field for the C.P.R. and Thornton is likely to make full use of his road to Prince Rupert, with a possible feeder running into the Peace River Country."

Power and Industries

There is also the entry of the Power Corporation of Canada to the Northern B.C. district. The fact that Power Corporation, allied as it is with Nesbitt, Thompson & Co. financial interest, can swing industries to localities where opportunities exist is not overlooked by Prince Rupert.

Another thing Prince Rupert anticipates hopefully is the construction of a highway from the mouth of the Skeena, where the road now ends, inland about 90 miles along the Skeena River Valley to connect with an existing road at Terrace. Then only a short link near Usk would be needed to complete the line and make it possible for Prince Rupert people to travel to and from Vancouver by automobile—and, more important still, to open Prince Rupert to the motor tourist highway system of North America. The road along the Skeena Canyon, as anyone who has been over the Canadian National's Grand Trunk line realizes, would be one of great scenic attractions and while construction would be fairly costly the project would probably not be more formidable than that involved in the building of equivalent sections of the Trans-Provincial Highway.

There is no doubt that such a highway would greatly stimulate the business Prince Rupert derives from tourist traffic. And it would open to sportsmen a salmon fishing country probably unequalled in the world.

New C.N.R. Hotel?

Although there is perhaps no justification for assuming that the Canadian National Railway will in the near future erect a good tourist hotel in Prince Rupert, nevertheless Prince Rupert is expecting it.

The fisheries industry as a source of Prince Rupert income still ranks above all other industries. This year the outlook is particularly good and when the season is over Prince Rupert should be in better financial condition than this year than for some years and the catch of cohoes, sockeye and pinks is good in nearby waters. Cohoes are bringing 60 cents each, the best price in years, and the run is said to be the best since 1916. However, in 1916 the price was only 25 cents per fish. Between 500 and 600 trollers are out.

Drydock Busy

On the Skeena there are about 1000 gill net boats at work, each with one or two men on board. There has been a little more competition than usual amongst the canneries this year and the price is holding very steady.

More halibut has been caught so far this year than last and prices have been more stable around 12 to 15 cents a pound.

The drydock is employing around 100 men and is keeping reasonably busy. Just now it is revamping the new coaster recently bought by the C.N.R. on the Atlantic seaboard.

The Big Bay Lumber Co., operated by George McAfee and H. R. MacMillan, is "making it stick" and is gradually expanding. It is cutting around 60,000 feet.

Altogether, the outlook for Prince Rupert this fall is encouraging and for a longer period it is perhaps brighter than at any time in recent years.

Daily News "Want Ads" bring quick results.

Following the British Government's decision to send a non-party delegation to the League of Nations assembly in December, it has been announced that Viscount Cecil will probably be one of the British delegates.

THE GREEN SHADOW

by HERMAN LANDON

SYNOPSIS

While Captain Summers is meditating on the escapades of "The Picaroon," whom he is convinced is really his friend, Martin Dale, Mr. Alexander Ferryman calls and requests that strange happenings at 262 Bank Street, the house next to the one in which he lives, be investigated. Axelson, a watchman employed by Ferryman to guard the house in which he lived before he moved next door after his wife had deserted him, has heard footsteps and seen an eerie green light. Just as Ferryman is showing the captain a picture of his wife, the telephone rings and a voice tells of finding a woman's body at 262 Bank Street. Summers and Ferryman hurry there. "The Picaroon," who preys upon the rich and then offers the return of his loot on the payment of 10 per cent of its value to charity, has written a note to Adele Castle, requesting a meeting in Central Park. Adele has had a terrifying experience. She was taken to a strange house where, through a queer green light, she could glimpse only the outline of a man calling himself Dr. Moffett, who tells her he holds evidence which would convict her father of being connected with a crooked financial deal and send him to prison. Mr. Castle tells Adele Dr. Moffett demands blackmail of $100,000. Summers continues his investigations and finds a band from a Verona, the special sort of clear Martin Dale smokes. The captain and Dale meet in a restaurant and save that Dale knows something about a green light and admits that there are few Veronas in the country. Summers learns nothing. Adele and Dale meet. He tells her he was present during her strange interview with Dr. Moffett, which took place at 262 Bank Street, and promises to help her. Dale calls at 262 Bank Street and tells Axelson he knows that the dead woman is Miss Conway. Axelson denies knowing her or Dr. Moffett as does Ferryman. Dale's attention is held by the waltz-dancing of the library.

INSTALMENT FOURTEEN

An Adventure in the Night

Bilkins was a servant par excellence despite his sluggish villainous features, his sluggish movements and his predilection for his master's cigars and pre-war stock of Scotch. He switched on the light in the den, fetched slippers and dressing gown, poured an amber liquid into a tall glass, added seltzer and ice, and placed the concoction at Dale's elbow. Dale sipped. "Any callers, Bilkins?" "Captain Summers phoned, sir, but he left no message." Dale's gray eyes twinkled. He took another sip, spread out his legs and sank a little deeper into the immense easy chair. "Queen sort, Summers." "You might well say so, sir. He is built all out of proportions. Never saw such a big head on a short man." Dale nodded. "It's a bit tantalizing when you stop to consider how many thoughts a head of that size might contain. But Summers is a good scout. Tell you what to do, Bilkins. In the morning you will send him a box of cigars with my compliments." "Not the Veronas, sir?" Bilkins looked shocked. "Yes, the Veronas, Bilkins. Summers will appreciate them. They will appeal to his sense of humor." "Very well, sir," said Bilkins, who possessed neither imagination nor a sense of humor. "By the way, sir, a gentleman called about 7. He wouldn't give his name. Said he wanted to see you on a personal matter. He waited a little while and then he went away." Dale's eyes traveled over the charmingly furnished little snuggery. His nostrils expanded a trifle. "Sure he went away, Bilkins?" "Well, I left him in the drawing room. When I looked in half an hour later he was gone." Dale's nostrils vibrated again. He seemed to perceive a scent in the air that did not come from the glass at his elbow. "Can you describe him?" "Tall, straight, good-looking, well dressed, about 30." "Splendid, Bilkins! Concise and comprehensive. You have described a goodly portion of the human race. Two arms and two legs. I suppose?" His sarcasm was wasted. "No, sir," said Bilkins. "Come to think of it, he had only one arm. One sleeve—I don't know whether it was the left or the right—was empty." Dale grew thoughtful. Once again he consulted the tall glass. Again his eyes roved over the room. Finally he shrugged. "I shall have a busy day to-morrow, Bilkins. If there is any mail we'll dispose of it now." "Very good, sir." The versatile Bilkins brought a small stack of letters. He sat down and opened one of them. "Mrs. Pettingill Starr requests the pleasure of your company at a dinner—" "Awful bore," Dale interrupted. "Give the lady my compliments and tell her to go to the devil." Gravely Bilkins made an annotation and opened another letter. "The Club Nocturne sends two tickets, with their compliments, for their opening next Tuesday night." "Generous! Anything else?" "The League for the Suppression of Frivolous Conduct would be pleased to receive a contribution—" "Send them the two Club Nocturne tickets." "Very good, sir. Here's a letter from the Friends of Poor Children. They are in need of funds." "Send them a hundred. No, make it two hundred and fifty." Dale yawned. "Anything else?" "Here is one marked 'personal' sir." "Read it." Bilkins opened a plain, square envelope and looked at the inclosure. His brow wrinkled. "This is a queer one, sir. Throwing rocks is not a healthful occupation for people who live in glass houses. A word of warning should be sufficient for The Picaroon. There's no signature, sir." "No, there wouldn't be," Dale leaned back, an odd smile playing about his lips, and contemplated the puzzled face of his servant. It was indeed a lucky thing that Bilkins was utterly destitute of imagination. "Let me see the silly thing." Bilkins handed him the letter. It was typewritten and had been posted by special delivery at Times Square at 5 o'clock. That was shortly after the termination of Dale's interview with Miss Castle. The circumstances might mean nothing or everything. "Some people have queer ideas of humor," Dale drawled. "They certainly have, sir." "By the way, Bilkins. I see you have neglected to lower the shade. People who live in glass houses should always pull down the blinds." "Sorry, sir," and Bilkins proceeded to remedy his neglect. "But this is not a glass house." "No, thank Heaven! A sheet of paper and an envelope, Bilkins." Bilkins handed him the desired articles. After a moment's reflection Dale wrote painstakingly and in a hand totally different from his customary chirography: Doctor Moffett: Thanks for the advice respecting rocks and glass houses. My reply will be delivered in person. He inclosed a dollar bill, addressed the envelope to the personal column of the New York Sentinel, and chuckled as he sealed it. "A little walk will do you good, Bilkins. Take this and mail it not less than ten blocks from here." With his usual unquestioning obedience Wilkins took the letter and withdrew. Dale finished his drink, lighted a cigarette and again picked up the warning note. He studied the typewritten characters carefully. They showed evidence of a battered machine and a faded ribbon. The alignment was imperfect and the r's were slightly nicked at the ears. The ribbon had once been green. "Green again," he mumbled. Then he fell to studying the phrasing of the note. It was not difficult to read a threat between the lines. "You are the Picaroon, and I know it," the writer must have said. "Keep out of my way or I'll expose you." The threat did not worry Dale greatly. To show how lightly he regarded it, he had just dispatched a taunting reply. It was always good strategy to meet threats with derision. But how had the mysterious Doctor Moffett, if indeed he were the author of the note, discovered that Martin Dale was The Picaroon? "The deuce!" Dale softly exclaimed.

Until now he had supposed that Captain Summers was the only person who entertained definite suspicions in that direction. Then there was Miss Castle of course, whom he had taken into his confidence only that afternoon, relying on the fact that there were no witnesses to his confession, but even more upon her loyalty and sense of fair play. Summers was not given to blabber, and it was unthinkable that Miss Castle should have betrayed him. No, the secret must have leaked out some other way.

He pondered the riddle for a while, but in the end he was forced to give it up. Slowly he moved about the room, his mind in a curious state of restlessness, now and then picking up a book or a piece of bric-a-brac, his thoughts circling round the warning note and the one-armed man.

Now and then he sniffed suspiciously, as if sensing a strange and elusive quality in the atmosphere. Time after time he gazed intently, with brows knitting, at some polished surface. It was uncomfortable to have the highly sensitized mind that is everlastingly groping for hidden impalpabilities, that searches for things lying just beyond the reach of the hand.

In a mood of growing irritation he searched the adjoining rooms, the library, the bedroom, the dining room, even the kitchen, looking for something that seemed to be just beyond his mental reach. His disquieting impressions refused to take on tangible shape. He heard Bilkins return and with his trudging gait take himself off to sleep. For a little while he stood at the fire-escape outside the bathroom window, alternating looking down at the murky back yard and up at the sparkling sky.

"Cobwebs on the brain," he told himself. "That's all."

STATION TEAM WHITE-WASHED AT SOFTBALL

The largest crowd of fans of the season was out last night to see the Superintendent's team white-wash the station team 26 runs to 8. The office boys outclassed the station in every inning and made runs every time they went to bat. The station team could not get going at all, they fumbled every ball that came to them. This makes the second time they have lost in the second half. The Soups' boys batted Holtby into every corner of the lot.

WRIGLEY SWIM TORONTO AGAIN

Water Must Be Warm Enough or Event Postponed for Day

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 5. — Sport, as a popular and necessary phase of Canada's national life, has been accorded a prominent place on the program of activities of the Canadian National Exhibition to be held here this month. The world's greatest annual exposition has arranged a list of sports events ashore and afloat calculated to provide a wealth of thrills.

For the third year in succession the C.N.E. in conjunction with the Wrigley interests, will hold the famous $50,000 world championship swimming marathons. The course will again be laid out immediately in front of Exhibition Park, the women's event of 10 miles being held on Friday, August 23, opening day, and the men's swim on Wednesday, August 28, at a distance of 15 miles.

It has been stipulated that the water shall be at a temperature of 58 degrees or warmer at the hour set for the start. In the event of this condition not being met the big splash will be postponed to the following day. Natatorial stars from all over the world have already forwarded their entries.

15 INNINGS IN BASEBALL GAME

Six Pitchers Took Part and Final Score Was Brooklyn 8, Chicago 9

NEW YORK, Aug. 6. — Brooklyn and Chicago fought for fifteen innings before they ended one of the bitterest games played this season. There were six pitchers in the game, Brooklyn using two and Chicago four.

Pittsburgh made a five-run rally in the ninth but failed by one run to reach the Giants, the final score being 11 to 10.

Jones of Boston held St. Louis to three scattered hits, while the tea party team made five runs to win.

Washington snowed Detroit under with 21 runs and St. Louis and Philadelphia split their double-header. Theirs was the only scheduled meet in the American League.

Following were the scores for the day:

American League
St. Louis 6-7, Philadelphia 4-8, Detroit 5, Washington 21.
National League
New York 11, Pittsburgh 10, Philadelphia 7, Cincinnati 6, Boston 5, St. Louis 0, Brooklyn 8, Chicago 9.

Sport Chat

To borrow the language of the Big Leagues, tonight's ball game between the Sons and the Elks is a crucial one. The way that the league has tightened up means that every game won or lost by any of the teams at this time gives the winner a place in the sun, and the unfortunate loser has to amble down to the cellar, until they can dig themselves out by toppling over one of the leaders.

The last game played between the Sons and Gyros has been protested by the Sons, and if their protest is allowed this game will have to be replayed at some later date, if it has any bearing on the final standing of the teams.

With the weather ideal again today, another capacity crowd at the local lot is looked for tonight. And with both the Sons and Elks at full strength a good brand of ball is sure to be supplied for the fans.

FATHER OF JOS.
ROGERS DID A HAT BUSINESS

Ledger Belonging Toronto Man
Placed in Archives of City

People of Prince Rupert and indeed the whole of northern and central British Columbia will be interested in a recent Toronto despatch which has been published in several cities, because the person mentioned is the father of Joseph Rogers, who was a resident of Prince Rupert for a number of years and dealt in furs throughout the district. Following is the despatch:

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—Purchased in a Hamilton antique shop not long ago, the century-old account ledger of Joseph Rogers, a pioneer hatter and furrier of Toronto, has been added to the archives of the Toronto public library. Inscribed in faded ink on its pages are the names of many well-known people.

"To one beaver hat two pounds," and "to one imitation hat one pound," or prices thereabout, are frequent entries in the old book, while hats or castor and borum are often referred to. Needless to say, beaver hats were men's fashionable top-hats of the day, manufactured from real beaver skin, slucked, dyed, ironed and stretched over a frame. These were the parents of the modern silk hat, already appearing under the name "imitation" and illustrated in the fluffy topper with which cartoonists adorn the head of Uncle Sam.

Women's hats in straw, chip and leghorn were also sold by Mr. Rogers at prices ranging from 20 to 40 shillings, and the ledger shows that Mr. Hollowell, the lighthouse keeper at the island, paid 2 pounds 2. 6d. for "3 bonnets." Moccasins were bought by Rogers' customers at from 5 to 6 shillings a pair. But notwithstanding that furs were ridiculously cheap, fur coats were not in fashion and the women of early Toronto had to satisfy their love of fur finery with the then fashionable muffs and tippets. In this connection we see that F. Fisher paid 50 shillings for a "lynx tippet"; Attorney-General Boulton 5 pounds for "2 marten tippets"; George Ridout 5 pounds for a "muff and tippet." Interesting entries are also recorded in 1828, when "John Wilson the 4th" bought "one sea otter cap" for 45 shillings, and Dr. Deal a similar headpiece for 50 shillings. Today sea otter is priceless and supposedly extinct.
