Canada to Be Given Authority to Deal With Her Own Shipping and With Foreigners in Canadian Ports

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—The Gazette today published the following from Ottawa: "Remarkable success resulted from the work of the Canadian delegation headed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe which attended in London a conference on the operation of Dominion legislation and merchant marine shipping legislation. All main points for which they contended were granted, including the power of Canada to set up her own admiralty courts and complete authority over all ships registered in Canada and all ships of foreign registry using Canadian ports or engaging in Canadian coastal trade. An important result of the conference is the decision to recommend to the next Imperial conference next fall the removal of all constitutional disabilities, particularly as they affect Canada. The British parliament will introduce legislation repealing the statutes in the colonial laws to give validity to the act."

SEVEN-YEAR LIMIT NOW ABOLISHED

Important Ruling Made by British Government With Respect To Imperial Pension Privileges

REGINA, Nov. 26.—At the Dominion convention of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League yesterday, Lieut.-Col. LaFleche, the president, read a telegram from the British minister of pensions announcing that the seven-year limit for pension application will, in effect, be abolished by the British government and that in future no applications for pensions by Imperial ex-service men would be rejected on the ground that the seven-year limit from date of discharge had expired. The new ruling affects thousands of Imperial ex-service men in Canada.

On motion of Aldermen Rudderham and Macdonald, it was decided by the city council last night that Aldermen Collart, Dibb and Prudhomme and the mayor should be a court of revision for the city voters' list to sit December 10 at 10 a.m., in the city hall to hear any complaints in connection with the lists.

Allowance For Depletion In Mines Raised

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—Base metal mines will hereafter be allowed a depletion of 33 1-3% when calculating profits for income tax, Minister of National Revenue W. D. Euler announces. Formerly the charge was 25%.

Arabs Attack The British

JERUSALEM, Nov. 26.—A protest against the arrest of nine Arabs for participation in the riots last summer, something like three hundred Arabs attacked the British yesterday at Jappa.

At the city council meeting last night B. C. Beale wrote asking for a street light at the corner of Conrad St. and Eleventh Ave., suggesting that the corner was bad for pedestrians and vehicles. The letter was sent to the utilities committee for report.

LABORITES WIN VOTE IN HOUSE

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Laborite government won a victory in the House of Commons yesterday when an opposition amendment for re-employment of the unemployed insurance bill was defeated 299 to 213 and the bill given its second reading. Liberals supported the government on the measure.

Ripple Rock Is Again Question

VANCOUVER, Nov. 26.—The Vancouver Merchants' Exchange proposes to urge upon the government once again the need for action in regard to the removal of Ripple Rock in the centre of Seymour Narrows. Although Ottawa informed shipping interests of British Columbia early in the summer that tenders would be called, nothing has been done and considerable dissatisfaction is being expressed here. The foggy season is here, and the danger to navigation offered by the pinnacle in the narrow gateway of the main inland passage of this coast is magnified by the weather conditions.

Grain Elevators For France Are Being Planned

COULOMMIERS, France, Nov. 26.—France is to have a modern system of grain elevators. Strange as it may seem there are but few elevators in France and most of those that are modern are at the ports. France's wheat crop is stored rather haphazardly. Jean Hennessey, minister of agriculture, told a congress of farmers here that the government would help to build enough up-to-date elevators to handle 30,000,000 bushels, a tenth of this year's harvest.

It is the lack of storage facilities to which Hennessey thinks is due much of the wide fluctuation in grain prices. Small farmers sell their wheat immediately after harvest and the market is glutted. The government has an "agricultural credit" fund to loan on warehouse receipts but as there aren't many warehouses the fund is of slight use. Wheat is sacked as soon as threshed. Part of the crop is threshed as soon as it has dried after harvesting, but much of it is stored in the stalk in barns and sometimes in the open, protected with a roof of straw. The loss is heavy through dampness and deterioration. Shortage of threshing machines has much to do with this condition. To remedy this Minister Hennessey is encouraging co-operative owning of modern threshing machines.

Old-fashioned threshing, with a horse turning a machine, generations old still is used in many parts of France. Now and then one sees hand threshing, the beating with flails of the grain scattered on a spot of smooth ground. Much of the hand threshed grain is damaged by the flails.

New Apartment Near Victoria

VICTORIA, Nov. 26.—Erection of a $40,000 apartment block in the Oak Bay district, to be ready by March 1, will be commenced shortly, it was announced this morning by J. Moxam. Tenders are being called for the structure, which will be located at the southwest corner of Beach Drive and Satellite Road, near the Beach Hotel, and one of the highest points in the Oak Bay district. The property has a frontage of 115 feet on Beach Drive.

BUCKAROOS BEAT LIONS

Portland Took Pacific Coast Hockey League Lead as a Result of Last Night's Win

VANCOUVER, Nov. 26.—After playing three scoreless periods, Portland Buckaroos in less than one minute in an overtime period succeeded in twisting the tails of the Vancouver Lions to the extent of one goal to win last night's Pacific Coast Hockey League fixture here one to nil. The victory boosts Portland into the league leadership.

Dominican President Sick in Baltimore

Hon. Horacio Vasquez, President of the Republic of Santa Domingo, is helped from his automobile on his arrival in Baltimore. The distinguished official was brought in an airplane from Santa Domingo to undergo a surgical operation.

OIL TANKER EXPLODED

Only One Man Was Taken to Hospital as Result of Blast Which Rocked Grangemouth, Near Glasgow

GLASGOW, Nov. 26.—The oil tanker British-Chemist, which arrived at Grangemouth on Monday with a cargo of ten thousand tons of crude oil, exploded last night. Three terrific blasts shook the whole town but only one man was taken to hospital. Another ship in the harbor caught fire, the flames spreading to the tanker.

Labor Likely To Hold Office In England Long

VICTORIA, Nov. 26.—The Ramsay MacDonald government has made a good start by capturing the imagination of the entire world with its fearless policies and there is every reason to believe that it will remain in office for a long time, says E. A. Steele, solicitor of Halifax, Eng., who has just completed a six months' tour of Canada and is staying here for a short holiday before returning home. The new government of Great Britain, as Mr. Steele terms it, is grappling with herculean problems in a business-like manner and with resolute determination, has already demonstrated that it is entitled to a fair break in the enforcement of its policies. The leaders of the Liberal and Conservative parties are too astute to join forces to defeat the new government, Mr. Steele believes, as such a move would undoubtedly react against them and in all probability result in the Labor party being returned to power with an overwhelming majority.

EDMONTON CANNOT TAX TRUCKS COMING FROM OUTSIDE CITY

EDMONTON, Nov. 26.—Magistrate Primrose declared a section of a city licensing bylaw ultra vires, when he upheld the contention of C. H. Grant, K.C., that the city has no right to tax trucks coming into the city from outside the city limits. Mr. Grant was appearing for Ed. Mason, Wetaskiwin, charged under a section of bylaw 54 of 1926, with not having a city license for his truck. Mason's truck was used for bringing produce to the city and hauling back merchandise to his customers in and around Westaskiwin, and it was argued by Mr. Grant that the council had no authority under the city charter to pass a bylaw compelling Mason to take out a license from the city for his truck.

Victoria Towboat Operator Is Dead

Capt. H. V. Wilbur Died In Capital Yesterday; Was Seventy-five Years Old
VANCOUVER, Nov. 26.—Capt. H. V. Wilbur, proprietor of the Wilbur Towing Co., died at his home here yesterday. He was seventy-five years of age. Mrs. T. J. Marsh is in the city visiting with her daughter, Mrs. James Farquhar, Agnew Place.

President of Prohibition Association Sees Government In League With Rum Runners

VANCOUVER, Nov. 26.—Charging that the Dominion government is operating in collusion with American outlaws to violate the laws of a friendly state, Rev. R. J. McIntyre, organizer of the British Columbia Prohibition Association, at their annual meeting urged delegates to take some action on the rum running question.

"How long will the federal authorities permit boats armed with poison booze and flying the Union Jack to sail forth under cover of night to invade the United States?" the speaker asked.

After trial of the licence system, he declared he is more than ever convinced that total prohibition is the only legislative solution of the liquor problem.

Great Future For Coal Fields Alaska Territory

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 26.—A new coal age following the tremendous strides of science and the utilization of mineral may sound the development of Alaska's rich underground fields of fossil ferns and trees. For in Alaska lies a great proving ground. Last year mines in the Territory produced more than 125,000 tons of coal.

The statement was made by Ernest Walker Sawyer, executive assistant to Secretary Wilbur. Mr. Sawyer continued: "Yet geologists estimate resources exceed 50,000,000 tons. Several companies are contemplating the possibilities lying in Alaska's virgin fields for applying the most recent methods of science for transforming into a number of valuable industrial products."

It was pointed out that only one-fifth of Alaska was surveyed and that the geologically total known coal fields include over 12,000 miles and that of this area 1200 miles are believed to be underlain by workable coal. Little is known of the remainder of the Territory and its coal mineral possibilities. It is known, however, that coal indications have been found from the Panhandle in Southeastern Alaska to the Arctic Ocean. Sawyer is convinced that the immense coal beds will become a most important factor in modern progress.

SOVIET PLAN CALENDAR

MOSCOW, Nov. 26.—A new calendar with 72 weeks in the year, six weeks in the month and only five days in the week, has been drawn up here. It is designed to fit the non-stop, round-the-clock, five-day work week recently instituted in Russian industry. The Academy of Science has gone over the projected calendar and approved it. It has now been referred for further study to the Council of People's Commissaries, which corresponds to the ministerial councils in other countries of Europe. Saturdays and Sundays are simply done away with in the new calendar. There will be thirty days in each month and each day of the week will always fall upon the same days in each month. A bit of calculation reveals that this fixed calendar calls for only 360 days in the year. This does not agree with the sun on its course, for Old Sol insists upon taking 365 1/4 days for his annual round, the fraction being enough to make an extra day every fourth year, calling for February 29 in western calendars and making Leap Year, the delight of spinsters. It is decreed that these extra five days each year and the added 24 hours of leap years should be celebrated as holidays.

HAULED UP BOATS FOR THE SEASON

SKIDEGATE, Nov. 26.—Captain Edenshaw is making his last trip fish buying this week as only a very few cohoes are being caught by the trollers on account of the stormy weather and most of the trollers have hauled up their boats for the season.

A haughty lady had just purchased a postage stamp. "Must I stick it on myself?" she asked. "No, no, madam," replied the clerk; "it will accomplish more if you stick it on your letter."—Ottawa Citizen.

Pacific Salvage Co.'s power vessel Salvage Princess, Capt. Frank Tyler, will leave tomorrow for a trip to Jedway, Queen Charlotte Islands, with Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. engineers.

K. K. K. Used In Greeting Lieut. Governor Alta.

VERMILION, Nov. 26.—One of the features, perhaps quite intentionally, making up the general scheme of decorations here in honor of the visitation of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor Dr. Egbert and party was a fiery cross nailed to the flag pole of the band-stand in the public park.

The cross, carried the letters K. K. K. in white on its three upper extremities. It stood about three feet high and was painted red. The placing of the cross at this point of vantage was in line with the covering of the roadways in the north country with similar fiery heralds. People living in those districts are beginning to see red and are destroying the crosses without any qualms of conscience. They are nailed to trees, posts and driven in the ground and no one knows how they came to make their mysterious appearance.

Whether the K. K. K. if such exists, had anything to do with putting up of those red markings is not known, but many regard the whole thing as a clever advertising stunt on the part of the Klondike Community Klub.

To Bring About Better Condition States' Finances

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—In view of the financial condition, it was decided yesterday to take steps to try to restore them to normal. The banks will lower the interest rate in order to increase the purchasing power of the people. The agricultural interests are strongly behind the movement.

Saw Bear With Deer In Mouth

SKIDEGATE, Nov. 26.—R. T. Ward, Government Telegraph line-man, reports that while en route from Port Clements to Telli he saw a large black bear with a full grown deer in its mouth. The bears also take many salmon.

Two Halibuters Still Missing

Resolute Safe In Seattle; Anxiety Expressed For Kanatak and Sea Bird

No word has yet been received of the American halibut boats Kanatak and Sea Bird, which were reported missing yesterday, it was stated this afternoon at the United States consulate here. The Resolute, which was also said to be missing, reached Seattle safely yesterday, it is learned. Considerable anxiety is expressed for the safety of the Kanatak and Sea Bird. The United States coastguard service is now engaged in searching for the vessels.

PREMIER AND ALASKA HIGHWAY

Prince Rupert people will be pleased to read that Premier Talmie has experienced a change of heart and will not hurry forward the Alaska highway prior to those purely British Columbia public works which are so badly needed. We shall now be more hopeful that something will be done soon in getting to work on the Skeena highway which will give us an outlet to the world beyond.

We believe that Premier Talmie is doing what he thinks is best for the province, but political influences around him are sometimes so strong that it makes it difficult for him to realize what is best. When he was in Prince Rupert, even during his campaign, he carefully avoided reference to the highway scheme in which Prince Rupert and the interior people are interested and he has never expressed himself in favor of it as he has for the American highway scheme. We hope now to hear him come out strong for the Central British Columbia highway connecting Prince Rupert with the rest of the province. Let him do that and we shall feel that he is really premier of this part of the province as well as of the south.

UNFORSEEN OBSTACLES

No matter what one does, there is sure to be opposition to it. Unforeseen difficulties and complications arise which change the whole aspect. Take as an example the Minimum Wage Act. There are people in certain instances being forced to work for less than a living wage. That was bad and statesmen set about finding out a way to prevent it. They devised a method by which no employer would be allowed to pay less than a stated wage to employees in that particular calling. But now the employees see in this a menace. They see that the setting of a minimum to some extent tends to bring down the wages to that minimum and they prefer not to have a minimum set.

C. N. R. DIRECTOR

We have a letter from Queen Charlotte Islands urging that a Canadian National director be chosen from Northern British Columbia. It is pointed out that the needs of the north are more outstanding just now than the needs of the south and a man is needed who will be closely in touch with them.

The letter goes on to say that the interests of the Queen Charlotte Islands lie with Prince Rupert and that the development of this port means much to the people of the islands. The people of the islands demand to have a say in the choice of the director and they are strongly of opinion that he should be chosen from this part of the country.

IMPRESSION OF PREMIER

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King Does Not Like Spotlight; Unlike Hon. R. B. Bennett

Premier Mackenzie King spoke to more than 700 enthusiastic listeners at the Board of Trade dinner on Thursday night, writes H. L. Weir in the Vancouver Sun. So far as the quality of his speech was concerned, he might just as well have spoken to 700 sleepers. What I mean is that the enthusiasm of an audience does not reach him. He does not react to applause. His mind is the antithesis of that of Mr. Bennett. The latter, with the instincts of an actor, expands and glows under the influence of approbation. Cheers stimulate him to his best oratorical flights. But Mr. King's mind is aloof. Public speaking, to him, is merely thinking aloud. The fine orderliness of his mind is demonstrated in the architecture of his speeches. His address on Canada's external relations revealed no facts that most of his audience did not know before. But it presented those facts in such logical sequence that they took on a new and living meaning. He painted his picture of the new Canada, the centre of world powers and just across the Pacific from the awakening billion people of Asia, not with the fire and color of a visionary, but with the sure precision of a mathematician.

a little different angle. Mr. King does not play with ideas, but he subjects them to the same searching inspection that a pawnbroker devotes to a customer's watch.

Maneuvers Ideas He does not seize ideas quickly, put them into immediate action, or file them away. He lines them up like soldiers, maneuvers them, makes them form fours and jump through hoops. If they are worth while he takes them on as permanent mental passengers. But there are no stowaway ideas on Mr. King's intellectual ship. Mr. King makes no attempt to appeal to an audience's emotion. Unlike Mr. Bennett, who dotes on the tears in his audience's eyes, Mr. King gives the impression that he has no emotions. But this delicate, gentle and thoughtful tribute to the late Mr. Robb away down in Mr. King's heart there was a restrained emotional quality that, like John Bull, he could feel but could not speak. Mr. King, in his capacity as one of the world's greatest authorities on economics, has spent his life solving problems. His mental processes are those of a man struggling with an intricate bit of Euclid. And like a devotee of Euclid, Mr. King will accept no axioms nor premises that are not proven up to the hilt. Nor will he put the Q.E.D. on his problem until he has mulled over every angle and microscoped every line. It is said of Mr. King that he is too academic for action. His speeches in Vancouver reveal not the academic mind so much as the cautious mind. Mentally, what he has he holds. What he has not he regards with suspicion. As Prime Minister of Canada Mr. King is perpetually under the spotlight. Mr. King doesn't like the spotlight. But he can't prevent it from revealing one of the strongest and most interesting personalities in the history of Canadian Government.

INSTALLMENT XXI

The ensuing brief space of time was charged with incalculable tension. In the green-shaded light from the lamp which Miss Brown had drawn close to the typewriter, her companion's face seemed for a moment ghastly. There was something menacing about the sudden deepening of those lines, the smoldering light of fury in his eyes.

Miss Brown remained standing. At the first shock of discovery, she had found herself trembling in every limb. The emotion had passed. She became the cooler of the two. "I am only telling you what you can see for yourself," she said, pointing downward. "That is an exact replica of my book, but there is not a word of writing in it. Not has there ever been." "Are there any pages torn out?" he asked harshly, grasping the book in his hand. "Not one. It is perfectly new and has never been used."

He threw it down. For a moment, they looked at one another in a silence ferocious, almost terrible. Miss Brown felt no single impulse of fear. According to her capacity, she was angrier than she had ever been in her life. "Have you any explanation to suggest?" he demanded. "It is not for me to suggest explanations," was her prompt rejoinder. "From the moment, when I left your house in Lombertson Square until the time when I entered the bank the next morning, the book was never out of my sight. I deposited it there with instructions that it was to be given to no one except to me personally. You bring me here. You produce what you say is my notebook, and I find that it is not."

Now I come to think of it, I am not so much surprised. The book was deposited in the bank in my name and with the distinct understanding that it was to be handed over to no one else except me, even though a written note should be produced. If this had been my notebook, the bank would have broken their trust with me. "There is a trifle," he declared. "There are times when banks have to do as they are told. That is the notebook handed over by the manager of the bank this afternoon to the chief commissioner of police and a representative of the Home Office. They had the manager's word for it that it was the book deposited by you."

"Then the manager lied," Miss Brown declared stubbornly. "The book which I deposited contained my shorthand notes taken down at your dictation. This one has never contained any writing of any sort whatever. It is not the same book." "And where is yours?" "How should I know?" she asked coldly. "I have not the chief commissioner of police or the Home Office to call upon for aid. I have been simply a machine of which you have made use. I have carried out your instructions literally. If anything has gone wrong it is through some fault of your own, or because your enemies are cleverer than you are."

He caught at her wrist. Her eyes flashed, but she made no movement. "Do you swear," he demanded harshly, "that you know nothing more than you say, that you have not withdrawn the other book and sold it? They'd have given you half a million for it, I've no doubt." She wrenched her wrist free, and began to put on her mackintosh. Her voice was unsteady now with smothered sobs. "I am very sorry indeed," she declared, "that I ever found my way to Lombertson Square. Let me go, please. I shall not answer your question. I should like to go away at once."

He stood for several moments apparently fighting a battle with himself. Then he caught her arm just as she had turned toward the door. The fierce rigidity had passed from his features, the flame from his eyes. He seemed suddenly older. "I beg your pardon, Miss Brown," he said. "It has happened to me only once before in my life to be carried away like this. I offer you my humble apologies." The new Miss Brown disappeared. She ceased to button her mackintosh and sank back into her chair a little helplessly. Her eyes were full of forgiveness. "I am so very sorry," she faltered. "Don't let us waste any more time. Let us think out just what may have happened."

He, too, sank into a chair. For a few moments he said nothing. He was like a man from whose living body, the spirit had been expelled. He had that shattered look of impotence which is the most perfect negative expression of despair. Often afterward he remembered that in this crisis—and he had lived through many—it was Miss Brown who took command of the situation.

"You say that the chief commissioner and some one from the Home Office went to the bank," she reflected. "The bank manager would not dare to refuse them what they asked, neither would he dare to attempt to deceive them. Therefore he handed over what he thought was the right packet. I suppose it couldn't have been changed on its way here?"

"The Chief Commissioner of Police brought it straight through to this room," he answered. "Very well then," she went on, "we will rule that out of the question. This book—a bogus book—came from the bank, and the manager may have really believed—he probably did—that this was the original one I left when he handed it over to the Chief Commissioner. There must be a clerk or someone there, though, in league with your enemies, who knows that there were two similar packets. But Colonel Dessiter, what about the genuine packet? It took the Chief Commissioner of Police and a representative of the Home Office to obtain the bogus one. Why shouldn't the real one be still there?"

Dessiter was beginning to think again. For once in his life he was following a lead. "It would scarcely have been worth their while to have planned all this," he reflected, "unless they had evolved some scheme for obtaining possession of the genuine one."

"It isn't a certainty that the scheme has succeeded, though," he argued hopefully. "There is a distinct chance that the real packet—the one with my book and the letters—is still in the vaults of the bank." "There is certainly a chance," Dessiter admitted. "This one was only fetched away before closing time this afternoon. I wish I'd searched for the letters before. We could have had some one back at the bank in a quarter of an hour."

"At 10 o'clock tomorrow morning I shall present myself there and demand my packet," she announced. "I shall leave it to you to see that I am not molested if by any chance I get it." "I will arrange that," he promised. "We have a regular department here now, and a very good service. I'll have you fully protected. They haven't had much opportunity yet to get away with the real packet. The more I think of it, the more I believe there's a good chance that it's still there." He added hopefully. "The manager told the Chief Commissioner that no single clerk was allowed down in the vaults alone. This fellow they've got hold of whoever he may be will have to wait for his opportunity."

He paused in his restless pacing of the room, went to a cupboard, brought out whisky and soda and helped himself. "Some wine, Miss Brown," he invited. She shook her head. "Nothing thanks," she replied. "Then there's something else, Colonel Dessiter. You can't have forgotten what you dictated to me. Why this moment? Why not even hand in your information direct?" He drank steadily half a tumblerful of whisky and soda, and lit a cigarette.

"I've done a little in that way already, Miss Brown," he admitted. "And if the worst comes to the worst, of course, I can recede, but there are the addresses and those letters I want particularly—especially one of the letters. And then, you see," he went on, "for the successful carrying out of our plans it was most important that they shouldn't know exactly how much we've discovered. Tell me, he asked abruptly, "when did you recognize me?"

"Only when you lost your temper," she assured him. "Up till then I was quite content to believe that the things in your which reminded me of Colonel Dessiter were just family traits. When afterward you looked at me," she went on coolly, "as though you were going to take me by the throat and crush the life out of me, I suddenly realized who you were." He nodded. "I'm glad I didn't give myself away altogether," he said. "I have kept in the background all my recent life to such an extent that few people know me even by sight."

The city council last night formally transferred the property taken over at Cow Bay by the Power Corporation in its deal with the city and also sold the major fraction of a lot at the same place for $1,000.

Complaint was made last night at the meeting of the city council of the slow action of the Power Corporation in placing a new street light asked for. It was explained that so many of their men had been sent out of town on new work and that they were unable to spare a man to do the work.

Peace Outlet Is Satisfactory Says Vancouver Paper

Sees In Premier's Speech Best Solution of Problem

(Vancouver Star)
Nothing could be more satisfactory to British Columbia than Premier King's announcement at the Auditorium Friday evening that the Federal Government was strongly in favor of giving the Peace River country rail connection with the Pacific Coast as soon as possible.

But, as he pointed out, it would be difficult to get Parliament to take action until the surveys being undertaken by the two great railways—in conjunction with the government of British Columbia—were completed, and it was known what the railway companies thought about the matter.

It was probably by way of reply to some local expressions of impatience that the Prime Minister went on to assure his audience that, if the government should deem that there was unnecessary delay on the part of the companies, it would take steps to push things forward.

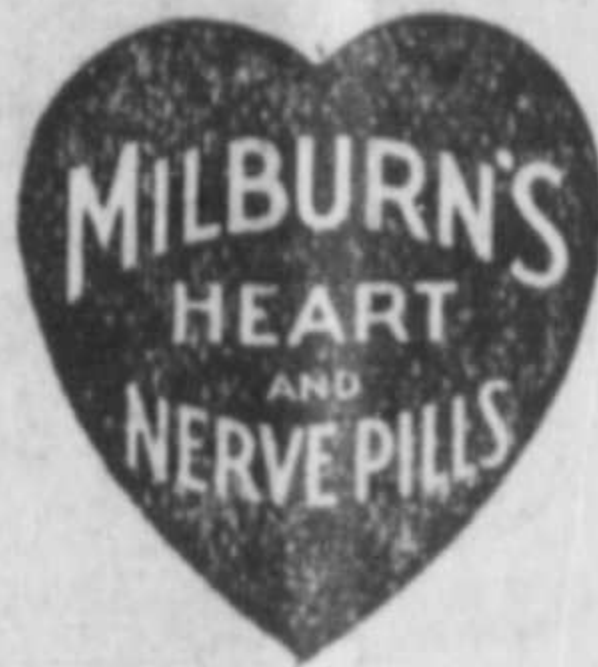

At the moment, however, there is no reason to suppose that Mr. Beatty and Sir Henry Thornton are "dilly-dallying." They have both on occasion, and recently, undertaken that the Peace River connection should be made as soon as, in view of all the facts, it was warranted.

There is, of course, a possibility that they may be overcautious, and from this point of view the assurance given by Mr. King is very acceptable, always granting that no political exigencies do not impel the administration to hurry on construction at the cost of making an economic blunder.

The west has seen too many miles of expensively-laid track abandoned to care about having another railway-at-any price policy adopted and carried into effect.

ISLANDS WANT BETTER ROADS

Hotel Keeper From Queen Charlotte City Goes To California For Winter

R. G. McKenzie of Queen Charlotte City, accompanied by Mrs. McKenzie, left this afternoon on the Catala for Vancouver en route to Los Angeles, where they will holiday for a couple of months. Mr. McKenzie is the proprietor of the Premier Hotel at Queen Charlotte City and he also operates cars over the island highway as far as Port Clements.

Mr. McKenzie says that the Public Works Department did good work on the road this year, but the appropriation was not large enough. In the summer they manage very well; but in winter the road gets in bad shape and is hard to travel. They appreciated the work done, but more money was needed to put the highway in shape.

Speaking of its value, Mr. McKenzie said it was a wonderful thing for the ranchers. Now they could get their stuff to market and sell it readily and this gave an impetus to production. There was good hunting and fishing on the islands and he expected very soon Prince Rupert people would look to them for a place to spend the holidays.

Miss E. Rudge will manage the hotel while Mr. and Mrs. Smith are away.
