Aerial Survey Complete and No Suitable Pass for Highway Found

Understood That Road Will Be Built South of Skeena River, Where Survey Is Now Being Made by Party in Field

Taking advantage of the fine weather this week the airplane which has been here awaiting the opportunity has taken a number of photographs of the country between the head of Wark Canal and Kitsumkalum Lake, where a suggested pass suitable for a highway might be located. W. K. Gwyer, resident engineer, has been in the interior starting work on the Hagwilget bridge and also getting the survey party to work on the south side of the Skeena River at Remo for the highway. He is expected home Monday.

It is reported that the proposal to build the highway north of the river has been abandoned and that it now will definitely go by the south bank of the river with a ferry in the neighborhood of Tyece.

SUDDEN DEATH OF FISHERMAN

Gustav Albertson Fell Dead on Board Boat Margaret I. Yesterday

Gustav Albertson of this city, brother of Mrs. George Fritz, 510 Sixth Ave. West, fell dead yesterday on board the boat Margaret I. just as he was about to take an afternoon meal at 4 o'clock.

An inquiry was held and it was found that death was due to natural causes, heart trouble being responsible.

Mr. Albertson was married in Norway, where he has four children.

LUNCHEON HELD FOR MINISTER

Hon. Herbert Marler Speaks at Joint Luncheon at Commodore Cafe

Hon. Herbert Marler of Montreal, Canadian minister to Japan, was the speaker at the luncheon given in his honor this afternoon by the Women's Canadian Club, the Prince Rupert Board of Trade and the Canadian Fisheries Association, his subject being the work of a legation. There was a large attendance and President Gonzales of the Board of Trade presided, and Mrs. McNaughton welcomed the guests on behalf of the Canadian Club.

After Mr. Marler's address, His Worship Mayor S. P. McMordie, D.S.O., moved a vote of thanks which was seconded by J. C. Brady.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Marler left the train at Sunnyside cannery and were taken to join the Fisheries Association party at Claxton and returned with them last evening. Later Mr. Marler gave a brief talk at the fisheries ball. He is accompanied by his secretary, A. L. Hall of Montreal.

TREATY WITH EGYPT NEXT

LONDON, Aug. 3.—A special sub-committee of the cabinet which is examining proposals for a settlement of the Anglo-Egyptian question completed its work and its proposals will be published in a few days. It is hoped that it will form the basis for a treaty acceptable to both countries, a lasting and honorable settlement.

SAFETY MEASURES PASSENGER SHIPS

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Daily Mail said yesterday the British Board of Trade, fresh from verdict of condemnation of the Vestris disaster, would consider immediately whether new regulations for surveillance of passenger ships are necessary. The report said an advance in safety measures against overloading might be expected and new rules covering the position of the load line.

ORE STRUCK AT SILVERADO BY PREMIER WORK

VICTORIA, Aug. 3.—Premier Gold Mining Company at the Silverado mine yesterday cut at a depth of 356 feet high-grade silver vein for which the company's engineers have been driving since June, 1928.

To reach this miners have drilled a 960-foot main tunnel and a raise of 200 feet.

RUSSIAN HITCH IS NOT SERIOUS

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The hitch in the Russian negotiations for the resumption of diplomatic relations is said in official circles to have arisen over a question of procedure and not of policy.

Rumors of the departure of Dogaletsky, the Russian representative, in connection with the negotiations connected with his discussions with Foreign Minister Henderson is emphatically denied. Misunderstanding as to the nature and scope of the initial conference is believed to have been the cause of suspension.

BENNETT SPEAKS PORT ALBERNI

PORT ALBERNI, Aug. 3.—Hon. R. B. Bennett, speaking here last night, asked why the preference had not been granted on lumber from this country when the Australian treaty was entered into. He said Australia was buying six times more lumber from United States than from Canada.

The speaker also said the sock-eye treaty was so ambiguous there was uncertainty as to its meaning. Mr. Bennett spoke in Parksville in the afternoon.

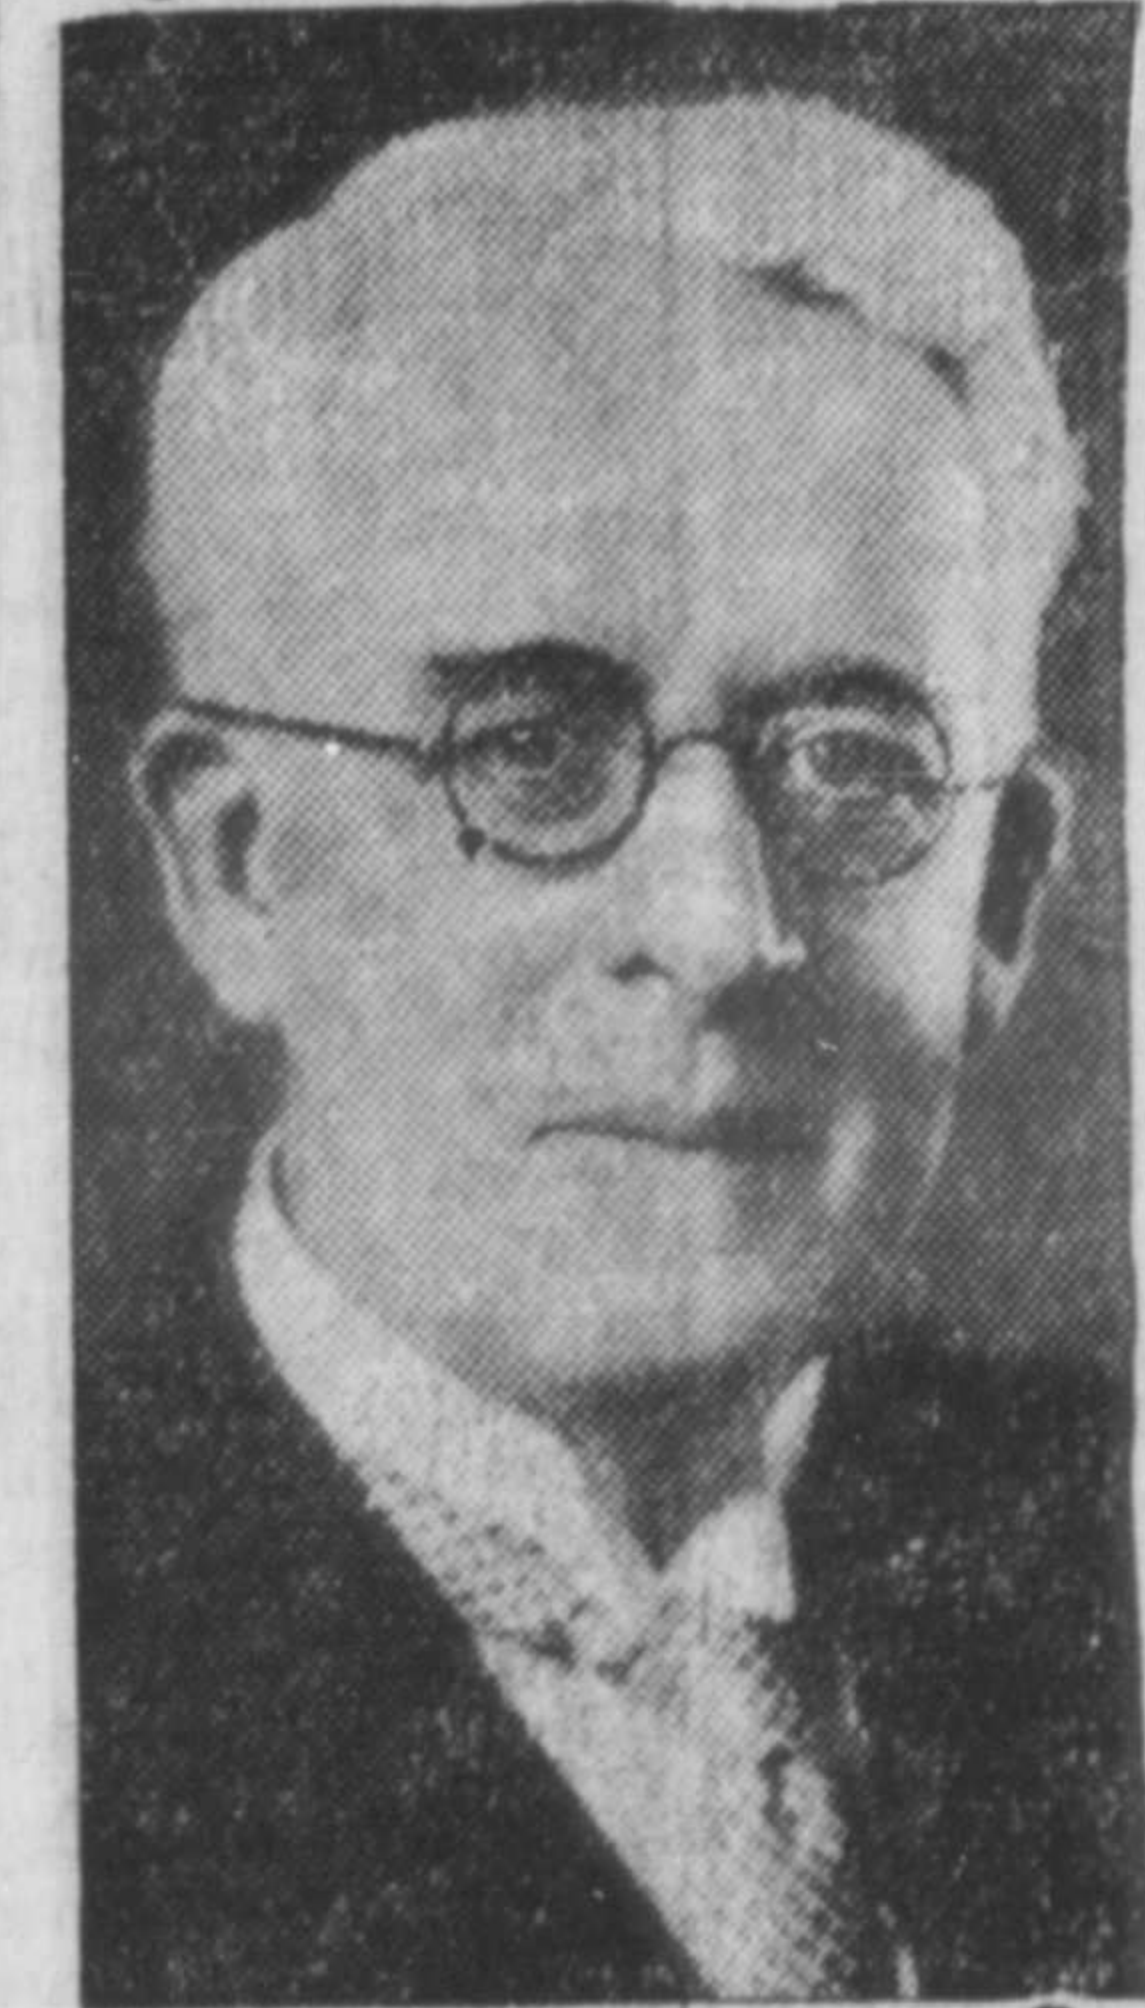

Cause of Quarrel Between China and Russia Clearly Outlined in Brief Article Mail and Empire

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Writing in the Mail and Empire under the caption, "Russia and China Fight Over Railroad," J. V. McAree has provided the following historical review of the Manchurian dispute which recently resulted in the severance of diplomatic relations between Soviet Russia and China:

Perhaps as much through a distrust of Russia as a consideration of the facts which so far have come to light, the rest of the world will be inclined to believe that China is in the right in the Manchurian dispute. The Chinese position is that when the agreement was made with Russia five years ago as to the management of the Chinese Eastern Railway, Russia pledged herself to refrain from propaganda in Chinese territory. Subsequently evidence came to light that Russia had violated this pledge, thus violating the agreement. Therefore China deposed the Russian officials and took control of the system. The Russians, on the other hand, say that China has seized their property with no more legal authority than is cited when Chinese bandits seize foreigners and hold them for ransom. Who owns the railway? That is in dispute until ownership is vested in one nation or the other. Or, perhaps, we should say that it will not be over until China owns it.

But if the question is: Who found the money to build the railroad, the answer is more favorable to Russia. The railroad itself is the product of the war between China and Japan in 1894 at the conclusion of which China had to pay Japan a large indemnity. But China feared that Japan would shortly come back with territorial demands which indeed she had presented after the war. Continued on Page Four

"BO'SUN" JONES IS MISSING

Presumed to Have Fallen Off Packing Boat Ogden and Drowned

Well-known for many years on Prince Rupert waterfront "Bo'sun" Jones was missed from the boat on which he was deckhand on Wednesday, July 31, and it is assumed that he fell overboard and was drowned.

The following telegram was received this morning by T. Clough, president of the Aerie of Eagles in Prince Rupert:

Please be advised that Arthur Jones, better known as Bo'sun Jones, deckhand on boat Ogden, W. Parsons, master, was reported missing from boat approximately 7:30 p.m. July 31, and presumed to have fallen overboard and drowned. Please advise Jones' relatives, if any.

PLEASANT TRIP ON MALASPINA

Fisheries Convention Delegates Had Most Enjoyable Visit To Sunnyside Cannery

With weather conditions perfect and the harbor as smooth as glass, the Canadian Government steamship Malpina sailed yesterday morning at 10:30, with her party of over 100 Fisheries Convention delegates and local representatives to visit the canneries on the Skeena, and were followed by the motorship Cancolan.

At Sunnyside Cannery they were met by J. Field Strang and were escorted through the cannery which was working at full capacity. The method of canning fish was described in detail, from the unloading of the fish at the dock, the washing and cutting of the fish, packing, sealing, cooking and lacquering of the cans to the packing of the cases for distribution to all parts of the world.

Following this the delegates were taken to the dining room of the cannery, where about 50 were accommodated and a delicious luncheon was served. The remainder of the party had lunch served on the well kept lawns of the employees residences.

At 1:30 the party left Sunnyside, with the exception of 12 persons who were delegated to remain until the arrival of the train on which was Hon. Herbert Marler and his wife and on the Cancolan they joined the Malaspina which was cruising the adjacent islands.

On board the boat was the Premier Orchestra which helped much toward the success of the day. The party returned to the city about 5:30.

NOT ENCOURAGING IMMIGRATION TO PRAIRIES JUST NOW

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—Immigration to the prairies will not be encouraged at the present time, Hon. Robert Forke said here. While the crop situation is serious, Mr. Forke did not think it disastrous. Individual hardship undoubtedly would result in some cases but the west was too well established for a short crop to be anything but a temporary check.

Government Appoints Third Mining Engineer To Northern Districts

VICTORIA, Aug. 3.—The growing importance of the mining industry in northern British Columbia is so well appreciated by the Hon. W. A. McKenzie, minister of mines, that the appointment of another highly qualified mining engineer for field work was announced today. F. P. Caddy, a graduate of the Red Ruth School of Mines, England, who has had twenty-eight years active experience in Egypt, South Africa, South America, Siberia and the United States, has been selected to assist Dr. J. T. Mandy and Douglas Lay, the permanent engineers, whose headquarters are at Prince Rupert and Hazelton, respectively. Mr. Caddy leaves today for the north. He will immediately place himself at the disposal of Dr. Mandy to assist for a month or six weeks in inspection work which has been accumulating and which must be taken care of in the space of a comparatively short season. Thereafter it is the minister's plan that Mr. Caddy will report to Mr. Lay in order that he may be able to undertake the survey of promising mineral-bearing sections north of the Canadian National Railway, which Mr. Lay, as a result of the accumulation of work, has been unable to visit personally up to the present.

BOILER INSPECTOR DROWNS AT SAYWARD

ALERT BAY, Aug. 3.—The swift tide at Sayward yesterday morning upset the small boat in which John O'Neill, boiler inspector, was going to meet the Union Company's steamer Camosun. His companion, F. Smith, clung to the bottom of the overturned boat until a lifeboat from the steamer picked him up, but O'Neill's body was found under the overturned boat lifeless.

BRAZIL BOUGHT MOST ARMS UNITED STATES

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Aug. 3.—Recent reports from Washington that Brazil bought more firearms in the United States than any other country in the early weeks of the year has caused surprise here. Carrying revolvers or other concealed weapons in this country is forbidden, but in many sections the law is not enforced.

In Pernambuco there is strict enforcement and the state police seize arms carried illegally. There was a dumping at sea of such confiscated revolvers to the number of 7288 by the Pernambuco police recently. The seizures covered a period of several months.

PARIS POLICE WAR ON NUDE SUN BATHERS

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Police officers armed with powerful binoculars are busily scanning the roof-tops of the metropolis in search of mixed sun-bathing parties.

The reason for this extraordinary action is that the authorities are extremely concerned with the fact that numerous flat dwellers in different parts of Paris have joined the ranks of naked sun-bathers, and during the warmer spells of the day lie without clothing on the garden roofs of luxury buildings.

They are of either sex and of various ages. Even tea parties are indulged in the guests sitting around naked, talking and joking as unconcernedly as though they were in the drawing room below.

They contend that the police are powerless to take action against them, as their sun baths do not involve the exposure of their bodies to any but "the faithful," who will certainly not protest, and "peeping Toms" would be afraid to do so.

INDIAN FAMILY DROWN WHEN CANOE UPSETS

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 3.—Wilfrid Thompson, an Indian, his wife and their two-months old baby were drowned when their canoe upset on the Fraser River last night. Charles Pierre, an Indian boy was paddling to meet them from McMillan Island when he saw the tragedy but could do nothing to avert it.

Thompson's canoe was leaking and when Pierre approached them, the woman got excited. Moving about, the baby fell into the stream. The mother frantically reached for it and the canoe upset. The father went down in the swift current trying to reach his wife, and in the darkness, Pierre was unable to do anything to assist.

EIGHTY-FOUR IN THE SHADE

Yesterday the thermometer rose to eighty-four in the shade and possibly a few downtown thermometers showed a little more heat even than that. Prince Rupert people wilted, for they are not used to that kind of weather.

Yesterday gives us a basis of comparison from which to compute what 103 must be like. That heat was common at a number of points on the prairies recently, and yet we sometimes bewail our sad, sad lot.

CURIOS SITUATION

It is a curious situation for two branches of the same party to be so clearly opposed to each other on a political issue. The federal members of the Conservative party in British Columbia are opposed to the Fraser River sockeye treaty and the Provincial Government, which is also Conservative, is strongly in favor of it.

The treaty was prepared by a group of experts after long deliberation and much previous experience at fishery treaty making. They tried their best to avoid the pitfalls which had wrecked previous efforts.

Prince Rupert people are interested only academically in the question because the catching of a few salmon more or less in the Fraser River does not affect them. The people affected are those in the more populous centres in the south. What interests the people here is to see the curious political development with one section of a great party wholly opposed to the other on a question of statecraft.

ANOTHER PEACE EFFORT

There are so many peace efforts in the world today that it is difficult to keep pace with them all. The latest is a gift of fifty thousand dollars to Baron Baden Powell to be used by him as he sees fit in the interests of peace.

Doubtless the baron will use the money in connection with the scout movement. Today there are scouts from forty-two nations holding a jamboree in England. Fifty thousand of them are there together, a little army of boys engaged in peaceful occupations. One of them is from this district, a native boy from Port Simpson, who is a King's Scout.

Probably this movement toward better knowledge of each other is the best peace movement in the world today.

PUBLICITY FOR THE NORTH

Recently Lieutenant-Governor Bruce addressed the Rotary Club in Prince Rupert, a mere handful of men who gather once a week to lunch together, to hear instructive addresses, listen to good music and to talk over some of the problems of the city, province or country, and occasionally to lend a helping hand to some movement which stands for betterment. The speech was reported by The Daily News and published at the time both here and in the south. Since then it has been going the rounds and giving Prince Rupert and the whole north a good deal of publicity. The latest journal to publish it is the Canadian Gazette of London, England, although the Gazette fails to mention the Rotary Club. It also confuses the Stikine with the Skeena River.

The Rotary Club is not a publicity organization, yet here is one instance where it has been the means of giving good publicity to Prince Rupert, Stewart, Alice Arm, Anyox and the Yukon.

EXPERIMENTING WITH AIRPLANES

New types Being Evolved, One of Which Is Said to Be Based on Flight of Bird

GLENDALE, Calif., Aug. 3:—All over the world men are flying successfully in standard type airplanes and dirigibles, but aerial navigation has opened a busy field to those who never are satisfied with the success of the old order. For instance, here in Glendale is a man who believes that the airplane of today is constructed improperly.

J. H. Montgomery is convinced that nature knows something about wing construction. For 16 years he studied the soaring flight of the eagle and the hawk while he was a watchman in a mine in Arizona. He was fascinated by their ability to gain altitude and even make good progress, with little apparent wing motion, against the winds that swept the barren hills.

He dreamed of constructing an airplane wing on the lines of an eagle's pinions, and eventually a mining strike made it possible for him to lease ground at the Grand Central air terminal here and work on his plane.

"The details of the new wing and principle upon which it is built are very simple," Montgomery says. "A bird's wing is made up of numerous feathers, all of which are set at an angle of 45 degrees to the course of flight. These feathers in turn are made up of smaller parts or blades set at a 45-degree angle to the larger ones. Then, microscopic examination reveals, there are still smaller blades set at an angle of 45 degrees. Each is a minute air foil. The front of the feather is only one-third as wide as the back, and each feather overlaps so that the same width is exposed from the centre of the feather."

"The air meeting this wing builds up a vacuum on top the same as on the conventional type of airplane wing, which gives lift. But with the feather wing the air follows the secondary blades down under the overlap, and is diverted even further from the original direction by the third set of blades of the feather. This causes more swirls or vortices within the wing itself. These swirls caused by the deflection of air currents within the wing are nature's secret of propelling power without wing movement. That is the secret of the soaring bird."

New Airship

Near the Montgomery factory the new creation of the Slate Aircraft Corporation awaits the completion of its power equipment preparatory to its initial test flight.

Should the dirigible designed by Capt. Thomas B. Slate prove successful, aviation experts say it will revolutionize construction of lighter-than-air craft of this class.

The dirigible's outstanding feature is the expected use of a stream driven turbine engine with 500-horsepower to propel the craft. The ship would have a cruising speed of 100 miles an hour with such a power plant.

The hull of the airship, which is designed to be fireproof, is built of sheet duralumin, 200 feet long. The cabin has accommodations for 40 and a crew of five.

Captain Slate declares his airship will be able to land its passengers or cargo at any point without ground assistance, by means of an anchor and elevator system.

Other unusual aircraft of recent development are the Cierva autogyro of England, which rises by means of a huge windmill propeller above it, and the Napier supermarine flying boat now being tried by British fliers.

SUCCESSOR TO THOMAS EDISON

WEST ORANGE, N.J., Aug. 3:—The 16-year old Wilbur Huston, son of Bishop of Washington, was named winner of the Thomas Edison competition which was to decide on a protegee and follower of his scientific genius. It is planned that the lad will be Edison's successor. He will get free tuition, incidental expenses while at college and proper training, all of which will be directed by Edison himself.

There were four other boys in the competition, which embraces candidates from every state in the union each of whom will get four years college training free. Col. Lindbergh, Henry Ford, Dr. Lewis Perry, eminent educationalist, with Edison, judged the papers submitted by the candidates in the final examination.

MOTHER USES AXE ON BEAST TO SAVE BABES

FRANZ LAKE, Ont., Aug. 3:—An epic of mother love has come out of Ontario's northwest in the story of a battle to the death waged by Frances Quakegezhich, Indian mother of six, against a monster black bear in defense of her two youngest children.

Armed only with a small axe, with which she had been cutting firewood, the Indian woman in nearly an hour's combat hacked to death the huge "muckwadawa muckwa," whose shaggy hide will often resist a revolver bullet.

Animal Angered

Mrs. Quakegezhich — acknowledged leader of the Cree settlement since the death of her husband, Chief Johnston Quakegezhich, two years ago—was preparing supper for herself and the two children when the bear shambled into the little clearing where the woman had pitched camp.

The bear was accompanied by three cubs and was apparently in search of food. Mrs. Quakegezhich first sought to drive it away by brandishing a burning faggot from the fire, which only served to anger the animal. As it lurched for an attack upon her she caught up her hatchet and aimed a furious blow at its skull.

The bear retreated momentarily, but soon advanced once more. Half a dozen times, at intervals of a few moments, Mrs. Quakegezhich beat off its attempts, but with each encounter her own strength was waning.

Took Offensive

The sun was sinking, and the frenzied mother, realizing that in the gathering darkness she would be still further handicapped in her battle. Nerved to desperation by the cries of her paposes she took the offensive, advancing upon the bear, now infuriated by the pain of its wounds. Blow after blow she rained upon its skull, swerving as she did so to avoid the animal's menacing claws, until it finally crashed to earth in the throes of death.

MORE VIOLENCE RUSSIA THAN UNITED STATES

MOSCOW, Aug. 3:—Murder and suicide are both on the decrease in Soviet Russia, but the taking of human life is still greater here than in Western Europe, and probably even greater than in America.

There are few statistics to go by, but the newspapers carry daily accounts of murders, in city and country, and often on a rather large scale. The number of village correspondents alone who have been killed in the last year or so runs into scores. They make it their business to report upon bribery, official malfeasance and other unpleasant conditions, and often they pay for their cadaver with their lives. Imprisonment for a few years is the usual punishment reserved for what the Reds consider more serious offenses—counter-revolutionary activities, bribery, espionage and the like.

Dr. L. L. Leivovitch, chief medical expert of the commissariat of public health, is authority for the statement that murders and suicides have become fewer, but accidents and injuries resulting from violence are increasing, he said. Half a million persons, according to his figures, apply to doctors each year in Russia after being beaten or injured in accidents. The majority of them, he said, were "more or less intoxicated."

"This figure can easily be doubled to get at the true number of injured, inasmuch as fully half the people who are hurt do not go to doctors," explained the health official.

"In rural districts, injuries are mostly due to beatings, family brawls and village rows, but in the larger cities 40 per cent of the injuries are attributable to the dwelling crisis, which has caused so much overcrowding of many families into apartments meant for one family.

"Through all these statistics passes the red thread of alcoholism, which has been proven in Russia to be the inseparable companion of crime."

BALL PROVED GREAT SUCCESS

Members of Fisheries Association Guests at Interesting Event

The fisheries convention was brought to a close last evening by a most successful and enjoyable ball in the Moose Hall. About one hundred couples danced to the rhythmic strains of the Premier eight-piece orchestra.

The hall was very appropriately decorated for the occasion. A large fishing net was spread over wires overhead and from its meshes hundreds of gold and silver fish hung and at intervals throughout the hall balloon flying fishes were strung and pretty Japanese lanterns covered the lights. Altogether the effect was very colorful and original.

During the course of the evening the master of ceremonies, George Munro, introduced T. H. Johnson, the newly-elected president of the Fisheries Association, who spoke briefly, and then introduced Hon. Herbert Marler, Canadian minister for Japan, who also spoke a few words.

Then Mr. Munro said, for the benefit of the visitors, there would be an illustration of the manner in which fish were caught in Prince Rupert. Misses Ruby Krikevsky and Eleanor Tite then danced into the hall and after doing a very pretty and graceful fancy dance each took an end of a fishing net that was decorated with balloons, danced up the hall and wound the net around Mr. Johnson and Hon. Mr. Marler, who were standing there. The fish were caught and it was then disputed whether they should be canned or put in cold storage, but it was decided to let them go free and the dancing continued.

Miss Myfanwy Campbell was originator and director of the dance which was very pretty. Another interesting feature of the evening was the auctioning of a hat by one of the visiting delegates, but a large enough sum was not bidden so the hat was not sold.

At 12 o'clock dainty refreshments were served, the tables being decorated with many flowers. The home waltz was played at 2 o'clock and everyone went home feeling they had spent a very happy and enjoyable evening.

TOPICAL SONG GIVEN LAST NIGHT BY AUTHOR, ROY GURD OF CASSIAR

The following is the text of a song sung at the banquet of the Fisheries Association last night by Roy Gurd of Cassiar cannery, the words of which were written by himself. Don Finn and H. C. Brocklesby were the official chorists, but the whole company joined in:

I've been asked to sing a song, the chorus is all right, And I want you all to learn it now before we leave tonight, So do your best to make a noise and shout with all your might: We're one big family.

Chorus—
Rupert Illahee Clahouyaa,
Rupert Illahee Clahouyaa,
Rupert Illahee Clahouyaa,
We're one big family.

John Dybhavn knows every fish; he tells them by their scales. He even studies them in bed and dreams about their tails. That board of experts he is on will soon be tagging whales. They've found out fish can swim.

In Montreal, I understand, they have a liquor store, And every month their business is increasing more and more. It's finnan haddie cocktails that Alf Brittain's noted for. Ob, boys, they're dynamite!

We're fixing up a game of golf to entertain each guest, Our course it is a marvel and it's rated with the best; Just where it is Jack Nicholls knows it surely is a test, That glorious nineteenth hole.

This town can boast of many things, its fish can freely sell, It's harbor, climate and its boats, believe me they are swell; But across the bay there is a place that simply stinks like hell, And George he is to blame.

To pass the buck is quite an art and worth a golden crown; Our old friends Found and Motherwell can surely do it Brown. You never can catch them asleep, or with their pants down, They know the game too well.

There's Jim Harpell from Gardenvale and Freddie Wallace (top), But where the devil that place is I leave it up to you. There's Binns and Tom, O'Connor and Burke, I wish you all adieu, And hope we'll meet next year. Tune: "John Brown's Body."

Ten Years Ago in Prince Rupert

August 3, 1919
That there have been so many fish go up the Skeena this year that the people of Essington are tired of catching them is the word brought from that place by Mrs. James Adams who was in the city yesterday. Mrs. Adams says that everybody is earning big money and that they will have plenty to spend later. There seems to be no let up of the fish that are coming.

E. D. Johnson, city treasurer is leaving at the end of the month. He has already resigned in order to take the position of inspector of revenue in the finance department of the provincial government, with headquarters at Victoria.

Seven new members were elected to the Board of trade at its meeting last night. Alfred H. Bayne, Frank Morris, David F. Robinson, Herbert Young, Joseph S. Brown, Edward G. Gibbons and Harry R. Love.

Corporal Rice, who went overseas with the 24th battalion, was among the arrivals here yesterday. He returned with an English bride, after 27 months service in France. He intends to make his home in the city.

There is a serious ice and car shortage here now. Twenty-three boat loads of halibut arrived since Saturday with something like 200,000 pounds of fish, but there are very few cars to handle it and also there is a shortage of ice.

This morning at St. Andrew's Anglican Church, with Rev. Canon Rix officiating, Miss Winnie Craggs and John W. Austin were married.

THE GREEN SHADOW

by HERMAN LONDON

SYNOPSIS

While Captain Summers is meditating on the escapades of "The Picaroon," whom he is convinced is really his friend, Martin Dale, Mr. Alexander Ferryman calls and requests the strange happenings at 262 Bank Street, the house next to the one in which he lives, be investigated. Axelson, a watchman employed by Ferryman to guard the house in which he lived before he moved next door after his wife had deserted him, has heard footsteps and seen an eerie green light. Just as Ferryman is showing the captain a picture of his wife, the telephone rings and a voice tells of finding a woman's body at 262 Bank Street. Summers and Ferryman hurry there.

"The Picaroon," who preys upon the rich and then offers the return of his loot on the payment of 10 per cent of its value to charity, has written a note to Adele Castle, requesting a meeting in Central Park. Adele has had a terrifying experience. She was taken to a strange house where, through a queer green light, she could glimpse only the outline of a man calling himself Dr. Moffett, who tells her he holds evidence which would convict her father of being connected with a crooked financial deal and send him to prison. Mr. Castle tells Adele Dr. Moffett demands blackmail of $100,000.

Summers continues his investigations and finds a band from a Verona, the special sort of cigar Martin Dale smokes. The captain and Dale meet in a restaurant and save that Dale seems to know something about a green light and admits that there are few Veronas in the country. Summers learns nothing.

Adele and Dale meet. He tells her he was present during her strange interview with Dr. Moffett, which took place at 262 Bank Street, and promises to help her.

INSTALLMENT TWELVE

Dale Makes Inquiries

At 7 o'clock that evening, Dale made his second appearance within two days at No. 262 Bank Street. His former visit had been in a strange guise and in an unceremonious fashion, and his mode of entry had been somewhat suspicious in character.

He had learned many things and he hoped to learn more this evening. On the present occasion, however, he appeared in Martin Dale's customary fastidious garb, and there was nothing doubtful about his manner of approach. Carrying himself like a man with a clear purpose and a mind that harbored no questionable designs, he ascended the steps and rang the bell.

A wait followed. Not a sound came from the interior. The windows looking out upon the street were darkened. An air of gloom and mystery hung over the old-fashioned house. Possibly the police had finished their investigation by this time. It was probable the body had been removed, that the house would soon resume its humdrum and colorless existence. But in the next house, Dale knew, there sat a grieving old man whose faith had been cruelly shattered.

He rang again. Then he leaned over the stoop and looked at the windows of the adjoining house. Through a shade on the second floor shone a faint glimmer. The rest of the house was as dark as the one before which he was standing. Doubtless it was behind the one lighted window that Ferryman was spending the darkest hours of his life, grieving over a memory that had ended in stark tragedy.

"Poor fellow," Dale thought. Then his reflections broke off. Footfalls sounded within the door. A light shone through the fanlight above. The door was opened cautiously and a gray head appeared in the opening.

"Good evening, Axelson," said Dale pleasantly. The old caretaker gave a startled mutter, as if surprised that a stranger should know his name. In a casual way Dale inserted a foot in the narrow opening. With no apparent exertion of force he widened the opening and stepped inside, then closed the door behind him.

"What do you want?" Axelson demanded ungraciously. A gray, mottled pallor hung over his lean face, but his eyes were sharp and penetrating.

"I am looking for Dr. Moffett," Dale announced, coming forward a little. "He lives here, doesn't he?"

"Dr. Moffett?" Axelson spoke the name as if he had never heard it until now. He shook his bent, grizzled head. "No, you're mistaken. No one by that name lives here."

"This is No. 262 Bank street, isn't it?"

"In This Very Room" "Yes, but there's no Dr. Moffett here. If you're looking for a doctor, you will find one a few doors down the block."

"I am looking for Dr. Moffett," said Dale, his voice pleasant but firm, "and I know he lives here. At any rate, he was living here yesterday. A certain young lady called on him."

The old caretaker's head jerked back a little. For an instant his eyelids drew together over a look of trepidation. It vanished quickly, but Dale's alert senses had registered it.

"You're mistaken," said Axelson curtly. "No Dr. Moffett has ever lived here, and no young lady has set foot within this house in years."

"The mistake is yours, Axelson," Dale declared amiably. "Don't take offense, please. Everybody's memory slips a cog now and then. The young lady in question called here yesterday morning. Unless I am mistaken—and Dale moved forward briskly as he spoke—" "Dr. Moffett interviewed her in this very room."

With a hoarse cry of indignation, the old servant sprang after him, but he was a moment too late. Dale was already inside the library, and in a few seconds he had found the switch that flashed a clear, white light over the room. It shone in the servant's furrowed face, grayish pale with frustration and anger, and caused him to blink his sunken eyes as he glared at Dale.

"This is an outrage, sir!" he declared. "What do you mean?" "Please close the door," said Dale gently, and Axelson did so with habitual obedience. "I wish to ask you a few questions."

"I won't have it, sir." The old caretaker drew himself up. There was a certain dignity about him as he squared his shoulders within the frayed and faded frock he wore, a dignity suggestive of a well-trained butler. "Unless you leave this room instantly I shall call the police."

"Do, by all means," said Dale suavely. He was moving leisurely about the room, examining various objects, and giving particular attention to the lighting fixtures. "The police will be interested to know how you attend to your duties."

"I mean that you are a rascal, Axelson, and that you are in league with rascals. Doctor Moffett is one of them. Contrary to your masters' wishes, and unbeknown to him, you are giving Doctor Moffett the use of the house for his crooked game. I know all about it. Suppose I tell the police?"

Axelson shrugged. "Tell them! You can't prove anything."

Dale, pausing in his movements about the room, gave him a level look. He asked himself again, as he had many times during the afternoon, how certain recent activities within the house could have been possible without the caretaker's connivance.

Yet he was not blind to the circumstance, pointed out by Summers during luncheon, that it was Axelson himself who had reported some of these mysterious developments to his master. He might have done so, of course, to throw dust in Mr. Ferryman's eyes and make a show of innocence and faithful service. Dale decided to try another chance shot.

"You may be right, Axelson. Some things are hard to prove. But there is one little matter the police would be greatly interested to hear about, and that concerns Miss Conway."

"Who is Miss Conway?" Dale watched him with keen eyes as he spoke. The effect of his words exceeded his most extravagant expectations. Axelson recoiled as from a physical blow. A mask seemed to drop from his face, revealing a countenance hideously scarred by an evil conscience. He pulled himself together with a readiness that excited Dale's admiration, but the latter had seen enough.

"Conway—Miss Conway?" Axelson was searching his memory. "I don't believe I've ever heard the name."

"You're a liar, Axelson," said Dale suavely. "Miss Conway is the woman who was murdered in this house last night."

"Oh, you mean Mrs. Ferryman?" His dissimulation was so perfect that again Dale's admiration was aroused.

"Yes," Mrs. Ferryman, alias Miss Conway. The two were one, and you know it."

"That's ridiculous, sir!"

"It's the truth. Don't be so to me, Axelson. Miss Conway or Mrs. Ferryman, was in cahoots with Dr. Moffett, and you served them both, betraying your master."

"It would serve you jolly well right if I should step over in the next house and report your treachery to Mr. Ferryman."

Axelson's face sagged. The defiance was gone from it in an instant. "I wouldn't do that, sir. Poor Mr. Ferryman has suffered enough. If you go to him with talk like that, it will just about kill him. It isn't true, of course, and there never was any Doctor Moffett as far as I know, but it would give Mr. Ferryman a shock just the same, and in his present condition he can't stand it."

"You see, he has never believed that his wife was a bad woman—just frivolous and a bit foolish. Why not let him go on thinking that way? His memory of her is all that he has left, and you might leave him that, instead of making ugly and false insinuations."

Dale pretended acquiescence. "Very well. I shan't go to Mr. Ferryman just now. I don't relish the idea of destroying the poor devil's illusions. For the present he may go on thinking that his wife was a good woman and that you are a trustworthy servant. In return I expect a few candid and truthful answers from you."

"You are a rascal, Axelson, and in league with rascals."

"Yes, sir," said Axelson humbly.

"Who is Doctor Moffett?" "I never heard of him, sir. I swear it. It's honest truth."

"You know there has been a great deal of trespassing in this house, don't you?"

"I've noticed something of that sort, but nothing definite. Things have disappeared from time to time and I've heard footsteps and doors closing and opening in the night, just as I told Mr. Ferryman, but that's absolutely all."

"You're forgetting, the green light."

"Yes, sir, that's right. Only the other night, when I opened the door to see what was going on, a green light was turned on me. It sort of dazzled me. And that same thing has happened several times."

"You have no idea where it comes from?"

"None at all, sir. It's the queerest thing!"

"You know nothing about a certain individual who appears to possess the faculty of rendering himself invisible?"

"Invisible?" Axelson's lips dangled open. "You are joking now, sir."

(To Be Continued Monday)

At the football game played last night on Acropolis the Empress Club defeated the Regiment with a score of 4-1. McKay scored the first goal for the Empress and S. Dickens scored the other three while J. S. Wilson made the only point for the Regiment.

ARRIVES HOME

Reigh Count, one of United States' greatest thoroughbreds, which arrived home after racing in many important events in Europe. This great horse could only win one race on Epsom Downs and ran second in the Ascot gold cup after many attempts to capture a classic.

Sport Chat

Helen Wills, three times tennis champion at Wimbledon, has given up the idea of playing tennis in Europe again. She will devote her attention to the game in United States.

There is a possibility of the Mann Cup, emblematic of the lacrosse championship of Canada, going to Seattle. A team from that city is planning a tour of this country and if successful may challenge for the trophy. With Canada eyeing her own game it would be interesting to see an American aggregation carrying off the championship.

The English tennis team is scheduled to open their first tennis series following their recent arrival at New York. They are commencing today a three day invitation tournament at the Meadow Club, Easthampton, Long Island. The team consists of Mrs. Covell (captain), Mrs. L. R. C. Mitchell, Mrs. D. C. Shepard-Barrow, Mrs. M. H. Watson, Mrs. Arthur Green and Miss Betty Nuttall. In addition to playing in the seventh Wightman Cup international match against the United States, they will also play in the women's national championship at Forest Hills, August 19 to 24, and in the mixed doubles at the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston, August 26 to 31.

HARD-FOUGHT SOFTBALL GAME

In the hardest fought softball game of the season the Drydock nosed out the Superintendent's Office by two runs. The score was 22 to 20. This was an extra inning game, going ten innings, the score being tied at the end of the ninth. Both teams played hard to win and consequently there were quite a number of errors on both sides. McFee made the best play of the night in the tenth inning when he made a running one-hand catch in left field. It looked impossible to get but he seemed to have a horse-shoe. This catch clinched the game for the Drydock. This game ties the Drydock with the Station for first place.

Drydock — McKenzie, Smith, Kelsey, Hows, McKeown, Reid, Hedstrom, Gawthorne McFee.

Superintendent's Office — R. Tobey, Lauton, Morrison, Jack-son, W. Tobey, Strachan, Harold, Taylor, Summers.

MANDELL WON CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE CHICAGO

Got Decision of Canzoneri But Referee Voted For His Opponent

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight champion, successfully defended his title against Tony Canzoneri in a ten round battle at the Chicago stadium last night.

The champion, after losing the first two rounds moved ahead in the third and gave the youthful challenger a masterful boxing lesson until the finish.

Mandell is credited with winning seven of the ten rounds. The two judges voted for Mandell but the referee, Dave Barry, balloted in favor of Canzoneri.

BIG SCORING LEAGUE GAMES

Philadelphia Beats Detroit Ten to Eleven and Cleveland Wins From New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Falk's homer in the ninth with two on, gave Cleveland a one-run lead to finish with against New York yesterday. Sewell also hit a homer.

In spite of a six run lead in the first inning Detroit threw away the game by misplays yesterday against Philadelphia, losing by one run 10 to 11.

The Cardinals slammed Vance and Greenfield for 19 hits and 14 runs while Bottomley was getting his twenty-fourth homer.

In the National League race, unearned runs in the third brought victory to Cincinnati, although Fitzsimmons allowed only four hits.

Hursy swatted his twenty-first homer when Philadelphia trimmed Pittsburgh.

Scores for the day follow:

National League
New York 2, Cincinnati 3.
Brooklyn 7, St. Louis 14.
Philadelphia 2, Pittsburgh 0.
Boston at Chicago rain.

American League
Cleveland 9, New York 8.
Detroit 10, Philadelphia 11.
Chicago 2, Boston 3.
St. Louis 3, Washington 5.

ARGENTINA TO TAX BACHELORS

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 3.—A proposal to tax bachelors to stimulate Argentina's birthrate will be presented to the Argentine Parliament. The author is Deputy Julio C. Borda.

Figures prepared by the deputy show that the birth-rate of the Republic in 1912 was 38.57 per 1,000, but only 31.37 in 1917. Deputy Borda proposed the following taxes:

"All unmarried male employees of the government more than 30 years of age shall pay two per cent of their salaries to this special tax. The amount increases with age, until bachelors over 50 pay 10 per cent."

"All bachelors not working for the government to pay from one-fourth to one-half per cent the amount increasing with age."

CAUSE OF QUARREL BETWEEN CHINA AND RUSSIA CLEARLY OUTLINED BRIEF ARTICLE MAIL

and which she was induced to abandon only as the result of side pressure. So China was in a mood to protect herself against future troubles by a kind of alliance with Russia. China granted Russia the right to build a railroad through Manchuria, ginning in Siberia and ending at Vladivostok. It was understood that it did not appear in formal documents, that in exchange for this Russia was to protect China from future Japanese attacks. More than that, right to build the road was granted China gave the right of way to Russia and also gave to Russia ownership of and control of any cities that might in future grow up around the railroad.

For all practical purposes, railroad and its towns and necessary expansions were to be Russian territory. At the age of 80 years the road was handed back to China without cost, but it was provided that the end of 36 years China might buy the road by paying for the capital invested, plus interest charges. One of the developments of the railroad was a branch line run through Manchuria to Peking. This brought Russia's most within the Japanese sphere of influence and was one of the chief causes of the Russo-Japanese war. At the end of the struggle Japan took possession of the branch line, and one of its first steps was to change the gauge of the rails so that in case another war broke out Russia could use the part of the system within the Japanese zone of influence. But up to the beginning of the World War Russia remained in control of the part of the railroad, despite the fact that Chinese restlessness under the old agreement was visibly increasing. When the revolution broke out in China she saw an opportunity of getting hold of a line which was built through Chinese territory and which was growing more important not only commercially but politically with the growth of cities along the route of way.

But the new Russian government was not disposed to be shorn of the railroad. It was nevertheless willing to make a new agreement with China. This agreement was much more favorable to China than the old one and was hailed at the time as showing the sincerity of the professions of the Soviet government to live at peace with its neighbors. It recognized the railway as purely a commercial undertaking and resigned to China control over the towns through which it passed. It was agreed that Chinese and Russians should have equal opportunities of employment and that China should be fairly represented among the directors. Certainly China had made no such bargain with Czarist Russia, but on the other hand, Czarist Russia would have sought to use the railway for propaganda purposes.

Perhaps it can be admitted that China took rather a high hand. If so it can be asserted that it is time that China did take a high hand. China is changing. She is tired of foreign interference in her affairs and it may be admitted that foreign interference is very much a thing of the past. Old treaties may still in existence which were laid upon China in her days of weakness, but they are not operative. The extra-territorial treaties are not being enforced. China is not so much awakened as she is uniting. There is a central government in Nanking which if it controls only a fraction of China, is daily extending its authority. China has more soldiers than any other nation in the world. She has by far the largest reserve force which soldiers can be drawn. She has had the best in recent years of two extraordinarily sagacious foreign ministers, Dr. C. C. Wu and C. Wang. China, united, would be unconquerable, and however formidable Russia may be in the future, she would have to transport her armies 5,000 miles to be effective in China. And if they come too effective in China, they might well stir up Japan. Never may be China's position from the standpoint of international law, it is strong militarily and diplomatically.

Waterfront Whiffs

Lazy Days on Waterfront; Margalice Again in Commission Under New Skipper; Trolling Falls Off; Motorboat Protest

With wonderful weather and little doing on the waterfront, the employees of the various businesses along this side of the harbor are having a lazy time lounging around and wishing for Sunday. There are a few people working and possibly one or two trying to look as if they were working hard, but it's a great effort for them and they do not succeed very well. Even the regular whiff man is away on Vancouver Island doing his stuff on a farm and consuming as much butter and eggs as possible. The local men are basking in the shade, thanking heaven there is one month in the year when they do not have to work hard and the rest of the community is not hostile to them.

Seated one day on a gunny sack, Chewing a hunk of gum, The coal man sits in the shade today, Whistling for business to come. He dreams of being out on the water, Or driving his snappy coupe, And he hates to think of the dusty black coal And the customers staying away.

Halibut boat Margalice which went on the rocks on the west coast of Moresby Island was repaired at the drydock and when about ready to go had a gas explosion which injured Captain Christensen is leaving for the banks today for the first time since her mishap. She is being taken out by Capt. Andrew Garton of the Bingo with a new crew. Hans Christensen, who was on the last trip with his brother, the captain, is opening a bakeshop on Third Ave., and Oscar Edwards, the third man, is gone out on the Oslo.

The Margalice is probably the best fitted boat and one of the oldest in the fleet. She has been operated by the present owner for a number of years and is like a yacht rather than a fishing boat.

The explosion on the boat recently occurred when the skipper was using compressed air to blow out the tank in order to dry it. A small amount of gasoline in the tank seems to have been forced out and into the stove, where there were live coals. The vessel is not injured, but the captain was quite badly burned and is still in the hospital.

This morning L. W. Patmore and party went out bound for Grenville Channel points on fishing bent.

P. W. Anderson and party got away today bound for Klew Nugget, where good catches of trout have been secured in the past.

Dr. Large came in yesterday from Port Essington with his speed boat.

A speed boat similar to Charlie Starr's lightning express is being built by Kiy, the Jap, in Cow Bay.

Y. Suyehiro is building a stock gill-netter in the boneyard.

The trolling at Dundas and Squadree has fallen off considerably of late and some of the boats are trying their luck elsewhere, while others again are taking a day off occasionally after the long spell of good fishing during which they have had little sleep. Catches of cohoes have been varying from ten to fifty a day just recently.

John Group of Oona River, who built the trolling boat Malena and fished with her for a couple of weeks at Squadree, has been in completing the holds, so that he can ice his own fish and is not so dependent on the buyers. He is going south this time in hope of getting better fishing in that part of the district.

Gas Boas Are Rude

Whiff Editor, Daily News:
Sir—Could you tell me what is the penalty for small gasboat operators who do not obey the rule of the road in the harbor waters? Automobile owners are promptly cited before the city magistrate when they try any funny stuff on the city streets. There are one or two people in charge of launches from time to time who either through ignorance (which I doubt) or cussedness, arrogance or an inflated sense of their own importance, who never or seldom pay any attention to a smaller boat approaching on their starboard. Instead of going astern of the smaller boat, these people will fly past her bows at full speed, leaving it bobbing in their wash after having caused it to slow up and swerve out of its course, even if the smaller boat had the right of way.

The consideration given to small craft by the steamers of the Union, C.N.R. and C.P.R., as well as the tankers using the port is most noticeable. When leaving the oil dock, or any other dock, these big steamers will deliberately wait until the little fellow gets well out of the way. And if the little gasboat has the right of way, the big steamer gives it him with the greatest margin of safety possible.

It seems, however, that a gas engineer is not necessarily a sailor. And even one or two reckless and inconsiderate people can cause a lot of unnecessary bother and annoyance to the majority of sea-law-abiding mariners.

What is the penalty, Mr. Editor?

NAUTILUS.

Much interest has been taken by the fishermen in the proceedings of the convention of the Canadian Fisheries Association. Some fishermen have mistaken the object of the association. It is an organization of fish dealers and others interested in the fish business and is not in any sense of the word a fishermen's organization.

The objects of the Canadian Fisheries Association and the fishermen's organizations have much in common in that each wishes to conserve the fish so that production may be continued indefinitely. Both are interested in securing good prices for the product and in getting the fish to market in the best possible condition. Also an increased demand for fish products means increased prices so each would be interested in securing an enlarged market through publicity, it is to be assumed.

In some questions the two organizations differ. The association is asking for traps along the Alaskan border whereas the fishermen oppose them.

Many of the halibut boats are using humps or white springs for bait these days. There is a ready demand for this kind of fish from the halibut fishing boats, the skippers claiming that they can get better results with fresh bait.

The text of T. H. Johnson's resolution in regard to the open season on halibut as passed by the Fisheries Association follows: "That this association urges that the Government of Canada accept the recommendation of the international halibut commission, making the closed season for halibut from November 1 to February 15, inclusive, instead of from November 15 to February 15 as at present, provided that the United States Government also accepts the same.

"Furthermore, that halibut boats proceeding to the fishing grounds shall not clear before February 15, and shall enter port prior to midnight of November 4."

Capt. Giffiths arrived yesterday in his fine yacht Sueja and left this morning for Queen Charlotte Islands. He expects to return tonight.

The launch Canelin, which has been here helping to entertain members of the Fisheries Association, left this morning for Alaska and expects to be back in about ten days.

VISIT MADE TO INDIAN RELICS ON WEST COAST

Deserted Village Seen by Oil Explorers From United States During Cruise

SKIDEGATE, Aug. 3.—Crumbling relics of bygone days were found by a party of oil experts who chartered the seiner Kingsale last week for a trip up the west coast of Queen Charlotte Island from Skidegate Inlet to Frederick Island. The party consisted of B. Climpfelt, R. Campbell and W. Galligher.

The boat ran through Canoe Pass just before dark in the evening and the next day landed at the head of Kennel Sound. The American visitors were particularly pleased with the scenery. Kennel Sound is a very fine harbor twelve miles wide, with an open entrance and seems suited for a naval base.

On leaving Kennel Sound the Kingsale ran into a southeaster, which gave the visitors an experience for which they had not looked.

Next day they landed at Tian Point, on the west coast of G-aham Island, where was the remains of the oldest Hydah village on the islands. The party was met by a large bear which showed no fear of the gasboat. Billy Oram, skipper and owner of the boat, and a son of the land of the shamrock, decided to leave the bear alone as he was a big one.

The party came across beautiful streams, where speckled trout disported themselves. The bear walked in plain sight of the boat and strolled along the beach. Herds of seals played around the launch.

The party made their investigations and then returned through the village. The day was splendid and as the party sat on the beautiful beach facing the village they watched the lazy rollers from the Pacific break in a smother of foam on the little inlets which dot the shore. All that was needed was to see a fleet of war canoes appear, raiders from the north, and hear the throb of the war drum and the war cry of the Hydah chief as he called his men to repel the invaders.

Paintings two hundred years old of Hydah designs were found in perfect condition, carvings of Aztec design and on one of the totems was found a large eagle ten feet long. This would be an El Dorado for an archeologist.

Next evening, as the weather continued fine, the party left the crumbling monuments of the natives and returned to Queen Charlotte City. E. C. Stevens acted as guide and pilot for the party.

TERRACE STUDENTS WERE SUCCESSFUL

TERRACE, Aug. 3.—Terrace matriculation students doubly rejoiced at the beginning of the week, when word was received from Victoria that they had been successful or partially so in passing their examinations although their names were omitted entirely from the lists in the Prince Rupert papers.

Those passing were: Misses Kathleen Burnett, Bessie Moore and Doris Robinson and Frank Hiop (s).

Those receiving partial standing were Evelyn Thomas, Alva Moore and St. John Colthurst.
