Mayor Says he Believes C.P.R. Will Make Prince Rupert Their North Coast Pacific Port Soon

Colonel McMordie Makes Interesting Statements At Trades & Labor Banquet Last Night; Several Addresses At Successful Event

At the banquet given last night under the auspices of the Trades & Labor Council, Mayor McMordie expressed the belief that the Canadian Pacific Railway would have a western outlet at Prince Rupert within a few years. He said it was unthinkable that the big railway should continue to haul grain from the Peace River to Calgary and westward through the Kicking Horse Pass. They were bound to have a port in the northern part of the province, while there was a possibility of their going to Stewart he did not think they would do so. There were many good reasons against it. The only reasonable thing for them to do, it seemed, would be to use Prince Rupert as their northern port.

MAY DEPORT LABOR MAN VANCOUVER

Unemployed Not Allowed to Congregate Near Immigration Shed Where McEwan Is Held

VANCOUVER, Dec. 21.—Yesterday several hundred unemployed men attempted to congregate at the Dominion immigration shed where William McEwan, prominent in recent unemployed parades here, is held pending deportation proceedings. They were turned back by a cordon of R.C.M.P. The men had been exhorted by J. Litterck, chairman of the unemployed executive, to demand immediately the release of McEwan and as a mark of confidence in him to go to the shed and give expression to that confidence with cheers.

Prime Minister's Daughter Will Christen P. Henry

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The first of the new Pacific Coastal vessels of the Canadian National Steamships, the Prince Henry, will be launched at the yard of Cammel, Laird & Company at Birkenhead on January 17. The ceremony will be performed by Miss Isabel Macdonald, daughter of the Prime Minister of Great Britain. The two other vessels, the Prince David and the Prince Robert, will be added to the Canadian National Pacific fleet during the coming summer for service between Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle and Alaska.

Nationalization Of Married Women

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—Canada is playing a laggard's role in regard to international thought on the subject of the nationalization of married women, Mrs. W. R. Lang pointed out at the annual convention of the United Farm Women of Ontario. A "woman without a country" was literally true of the Canadian woman married to an American citizen living in the United States, she said.

By Canadian law she accepts on marriage the nationality of her husband and by American law she did not become a citizen of that country until she took the oath of allegiance. Canada was falling down on this job of international legislation as judged by current thought on the subject, Mrs. Lang believed. All through the British Empire no woman had the right to retain her own nationality unless she was divorced or a widow. On the other hand, in the United States, the married woman could keep her nationality after marriage.

Xmas Cheer Fund

The Salvation Army has received the following donations in addition to the money contributed as announced yesterday: Philpott, Evitt Co., one-half ton of coal. Mr. Kilbach, groceries. Sunrise Grocery, sack of potatoes and box of apples. It has been decided to send three hampers to needy families out of town, making 20 hampers in all, required.

Germany's First Tail-Less Airplane

Whipping and Jail Sentences In Cases of Assault Handed Out at The Assizes at New Westminster

NEW WESTMINSTER, Dec. 21.—Sentences totalling sixty-five years in prison and 105 lashes, the most severe Assize punishment in many years, were handed out today by Mr. Justice D. A. Macdonald at the conclusion of session of the Supreme Court Assizes here.

Roderick A. Macdonald, aged 19, and Dewey Vaughan, both of Vancouver, convicted of criminal assault upon a young woman last May, were each sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment with fifteen lashes.

CHINA AND CANADA ARE CONNECTED

Tie of Mutual Trade Advantages Pointed Out in Lecture

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—To China we owe not only silk, paper, printing and porcelain, but also the discovery of this Dominion in which we are living. For it was the desire to discover a passage to China that brought explorers to this western world. Miss Ruth Home pointed this out at her lecture at the Museum, the last of a very interesting series on China. It was in the eighteenth century that the craze for Oriental things was at its height; in order to buy curios from China, women would sell not only their own clothing but also that of their husbands. Porcelain was particularly rare; and a family in France or England would wait for two or three years for a dinner set ordered from China. Blue and white were the colors most favored, and the popular design was that of hawthorne trees growing out of Chinese ice. Tea was introduced into England at about this time and so the tea-cup was evolved. As the English insisted on handles on their cups, the Chinese potters at first simply fastened on plain white handles, and it was later on that varied shapes were designed.

This new social habit of tea-drinking also revolutionized the furniture of the period, for little tables were now in demand, and also china cabinets. Lacquer and bamboo were used for many of these tables, often combined; and the roomy Chinese chairs, with their latticework backs, became popular. So much was lacquer the fashion, that it was taught in all the best English ladies' schools.

VICTORIA CUBS WINNERS AGAIN

SEATTLE, Dec. 21.—Scoring the winning goal 27 seconds before the end of the game, Victoria handed Seattle its third consecutive defeat in coast league hockey last night. After taking a one-point lead, the crippled Eskimos fell before the superior play of the homeless Cubs in the last two periods. Nineteen penalties were handed out.

WHEAT MARKET UP SIX CENTS

VANCOUVER, Dec. 21.—The erratic wheat market took a big jump upwards today when the quotation was $1.33 1/2. This was six cents higher than yesterday.

APPROVAL IS GIVEN

Labor Government Supported 222 to 146 On Unemployment Policy

LONDON, Dec. 21.—After a debate in the course of which the unemployment situation was thoroughly discussed by all parties, the House of Commons last night approved a vote for the continuation of the salary of the Lord Privy Seal and Minister of Employment, thereby giving its stamp of approval to the Labor government's efforts to deal with the great problem. The vote was 222 to 146.

BASS KAYOES TOD MORGAN

Chairman of N. Y. Athletic Commission Suspects Last Night's Fight Was Crooked

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Benny Bass of Philadelphia knocked out Tod Morgan of Seattle, junior lightweight champion, in the second round of their scheduled fifteen-round match here last night and became the new 130-pound titleholder.

Morgan went down twice before being counted out. Chairman Farley of the New York State Athletic Commission ordered the purses of both men withheld pending a rigid investigation. He indicated his belief that the match was not fought on its merits. Morgan and Bass were summoned to appear before the commission on Tuesday.

PLANES GO NORTH FOR SEARCHING

Party Organizing to Look For Aviator Eielson Who Is Lost in North

VANCOUVER, Dec. 21.—Captain H. A. Oakes, Gifford Swartman, W. J. McDonough, Fairchild representatives, with Air Engineers W. Hughes and S. McAuley, left here last night for Seattle to join the Eielson hunt. Present plans call for departure of the Chelan Monday. Three machines will be assembled at Fairbanks and flown to Nome where they will be handed over to the Eielson search officials. Then "Pat" Reid, Swartman and B. W. Broatch will hop to Teller and from there into the unknown.

Oakes said his job was simply to bring the equipment into Alaska and deliver it. He would probably return south from Nome. Two additional planes of six passenger cabin type may be shipped north as reserves.

STEAMER CARDENA ASHORE AT MOUTH OF ECSTALL IN SKEENA RIVER, ESSINGTON

Piled Up On Village Island Last Evening and Expected To Float This Afternoon

Coming north on her first voyage since having undergone overhaul at North Vancouver following a stranding four weeks ago in the Skeena Slough, the Union Steamship Co.'s coastal liner Cardena, Capt. Andrew Johntson, again ran into trouble at 7:30 last evening when she went ashore on Village Island, near Balmoral Cannery, in the Skeena River. The vessel piled up when the falling tide was about half way out. While it was expected that she would be refloated on the high tide about 5 o'clock this morning, this did not materialize and the ship was still fast ashore at 8 o'clock, as the tide was again receding.

With Capt. W. P. Armour, local manager, in personal charge, the Pacific Salvage Co.'s power tugs Pachena and Red Boy with scows left for the scene of the stranding late last night to give assistance. Following the unsuccessful attempt of the vessel to free herself at the high tide this morning, the salvage outfit started to lighten her of her cargo so as to be prepared for further efforts to refloat her. Passengers were taken off the ship last night and landed at Port Essington. Besides passengers, the vessel had on board mail, express and freight for Prince Rupert.

The C. P. R. steamer Princess Mary, Capt. S. K. Gray, which left here at 10 o'clock last night for the south, was to have gone up the Skeena River to give the Cardena a pull but was unable to get to the scene on account of strong tide and shallow water.

Village Island, where the Cardena went ashore, is near the mouth of the Ecstall River and there is a heavy tidal current. The vessel is, however, well protected from storms and is believed to be in no particular danger. The salvage tug Pachena returned to port this morning, reporting that the Cardena was unholed and not taking water, and that it was hoped to refloat her on the high tide about 6 o'clock this evening. It is presumed that a strong tide running out and the wind would have set the vessel onto Village Island as she left Balmoral Cannery.

As it was raining here, it is presumed it would be snowing in a dark night around the mouth of the Skeena River when the stranding occurred.

Hope to Refloat. The crew of the Pachena were hopeful that the attempt to refloat the Cardena on this evening's high tide would prove successful. While the bow of the vessel is lodged in a ledge of rock, there is plenty of water under the stern even at low tide. She has a slight list to starboard but it is believed to be in a dangerous position.

The passengers, numbering fifteen, were taken off immediately after the stranding and landed at Port Essington. Members of the steamer's crew are remaining on board.

Passengers on the vessel bound for Vancouver were taken on south by the Princess Mary this morning. The C.P.R. boat also took south the Cardena's southern mail while mail for here was brought in this morning by the Pachena.

The Pachena returned to Village Island after unloading the mail. S. R. Donaldson's power ferry which runs between Haysport and Port Essington is assisting the local salvage boats at the stranding.

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—Amendments to the Pensions Act with the object of giving more liberal treatment to ex-service men will be introduced at the coming session of Parliament, though just what the nature of the amendments will be, Premier King declined to say.

The Premier said, however, that the government felt that the Board of Pension Commissioners should regard itself rather as the trustee of the rights and benefits which Canada intends for ex-service men and their dependents and not so much as a trustee of public funds.

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—Colonel Ralston, minister of defence, will be Canada's representative in London at the conference on naval disarmament next month. Announcement of his selection was made by Premier Mackenzie King after a lengthy cabinet meeting last night. Colonel Ralston will be accompanied by Commodore Rose, chief of the naval staff.

SEATTLE, Dec. 21.—The coast guard cutter Chelan, with three Fairchild planes and six Canadian airmen, left here this afternoon for Seward to join the Eielson search.

NEW SCHEME FOR A LINE VANCOUVER

Proposal To Build South From Beaver Lodge to Connect With P. G. E. Railway

EDMONTON, Dec. 21.—Linking of the Peace River district with Vancouver by a railway route shorter by 193 miles than the suggested Canadian National outlet, is proposed by H. G. Dimdale, northern railway engineer and former Alberta highways commissioner. He says British capital is ready to finance the project.

Dimdale's route would run from Beaver Lodge southwest through Gray Pass to the present end of steel on the Pacific Great Eastern near Quessell.

Two railway lines are required to properly serve the Peace River plains in Dimdale's opinion. One, the Canadian Pacific north of the river through the Peace Pass and by way of Fort Graham and Naas River to Stewart on Portland Canal; the other from Beaver Lodge southwest to connect with the Pacific Great Eastern and Vancouver only, 627 miles in length.

Former Local Printer Dies

Word Received of Death at Colorado Springs, Colorado, of Paddy Dolan

Word has been received in the city of the recent death at the Printers' Home in Colorado Springs, Colorado, of Patrick Dolan, a former linotype operator on the staff of the Prince Rupert Daily News. He left here for the last time just a year ago and had been ill for some time. He was about 48 years of age and unmarried. He came originally from San Francisco and had been employed on many papers throughout the West.

PENSION ACT AMENDMENTS

To Be Made at Forthcoming Session of Parliament, Premier King Announces

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—Amendments to the Pensions Act with the object of giving more liberal treatment to ex-service men will be introduced at the coming session of Parliament, though just what the nature of the amendments will be, Premier King declined to say.

CRISIS IS PAST

The crisis in the life of the British Labor Government is past. They have been sustained on the second reading of their Coal Mines Bill, but it was so close a vote that the fate of the Government was trembling in the balance. It seems as if the intent was to show the Labor Government that they could go so far and no farther.

It seems as if some of those who could not support the bill, but who did not wish to see the Government defeated just now, must have absented themselves from the House, else with only two Liberals voting with Labor the result would have been different.

BATTLE OF WHEAT

The great battle of wheat is still going on. Sometimes the price goes up and sometimes down, but there has so far been no real break which would indicate that either side had won. As the days pass the situation becomes tense, but there is still time enough for the Pool and other holders of grain to score a win. It seems as if no new wheat can come on the market except that from Australia until early next fall and in the meantime available stocks are being used up and more and more people will be looking to Canada for their supply. In spite of this it looks to us as if the big holders would begin to have sleepless nights pretty soon. Should the Pool lose it will be in a rather parlous situation.

MINERAL RECORD

The record mining gross income made this year is largely the result of the increase of copper and lead and not of any very great increase in general mining. The plant at Anox has been producing as rapidly as possible to take advantage of the prices offered for their product. Also the amount received even for the same output is higher than last year. Britannia mine has also been very busy.

A lamentable feature of the mining report is the drop of a million dollars in the production of coal. This is having a bad effect on Vancouver Island, where the amount of coal produced has fallen off considerably.

An important feature is that mines of northern and central British Columbia promise to increase their output in the near future. From all the work done throughout the district some real mines are bound to result, else the big companies which are developing them do not know their business.

PATTULLO LAUGHS

The despatch received yesterday says that when T. D. Pattullo, member for Prince Rupert, was asked if he had been offered a federal cabinet position, he laughed.

Mr. Pattullo can afford to laugh. He has a very important position today, the next most important to that of Premier. He receives a fair salary for the work and he has no restrictions on his actions such as that on a cabinet minister.

We know nothing about the plans of the opposition leader, but we do feel that if Premier Mackenzie King wants a member who will bring credit to the administration, he could not do better than invite Mr. Pattullo to take the position. In some respects British Columbia would be the loser. The legislature would undoubtedly miss him, but there are other good men on the opposition side who are quite capable of undertaking the work and it would be a great thing for British Columbia people to have so able a cabinet minister represent them in the federal parliament.

NEW HAZELTON

A successful dance was held last Friday evening by the Hazelton Social Club. A radio set and a gramophone were raffied in connection with the affair. J. Morris winning the former and Miss Jane York of New Hazelton, the latter. A feature of the evening's program was an amusing sketch put on by Allen Bensof and Miss Bertha Rock.

The thermometer stood at or below zero here during the past week, the lowest reading having been fifteen below.

Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Wrinch will return to Hazelton on Sunday morning after having spent several weeks visiting with friends and relatives in Ontario. Dr. Gordon Kirkpatrick, who has been relieving at the local hospital during the absence of Dr. Wrinch, will leave on Sunday for his home in Vancouver where he will spend the Christmas holiday season.

E. A. Goddard, who is teaching school at Ocean Falls, will arrive here at the end of the week to spend the Christmas and New Year holiday season visiting with his parents.

SMITHERS

Interest in the Topley mining area is being revived through gratifying discoveries that have been made recently on the Topley Silver property which is being developed by its owners, David Heenan and Charles Matheson. The latest discovery is a parallel showing of three veins, the most important of which is a quartz vein three feet wide with fourteen inches of high grade ore, assays of which have disclosed over 1100 ounces of silver to the ton in addition to $14.50 in gold and high lead content. This vein is now undergoing development.

R. C. Mutch has been awarded the contract by the postal department to carry the mails between Smithers post-office and the railway station. It is understood that the rate accepted was 90c per trip which is much lower than before.

The local churches have appointed a committee consisting of Mrs. G. W. Smith, Mrs. Edgar Woodward and Mrs. James P. Downey to assist the Canadian Legion in carrying out Christmas Cheer work here this year.

The Humming Bird group adjoining the Henderson claims has been acquired by the Duthie Mines Ltd. and it is understood that, in the near future, the company's operations will be considerably extended. The original owners of the Humming Bird group were George Charlton, William Hanna and G. R. Holbrook.

The bridge over the Bulkley River near here was endangered by broken ice and high water for a few days recently, traffic between Smithers and Telkwa being diverted from the structure over which the water was actually flowing for some time. The water has now receded and further trouble is not anticipated.

Misses Alice Gazeley and Agnes Erickson entertained about eighty friends last Friday evening with a highly enjoyable dance in the Anglican Parish Hall. Music was supplied by Sandy Gazeley's orchestra and delicious refreshments were served.

PRINCE GEORGE

With Mayor A. M. Patterson expected to be returned by acclamation for another term, indications point to a lively contest for the four vacancies on the aldermanic board here next month. Ald. Fraser and Reid, whose terms are expiring, will seek re-election, and Ex-Mayor J. H. Johnson and Ex-Mayor F. D. Taylor as well as George Kennedy, Jacob Leith and F. C. Saunders are also expected to be in the field.

Sub-zero weather has continued here during the past week, the lowest thermometer reading for the week having been twenty below zero.

The city council has decided to submit a $30,000 money bylaw at the municipal election next month to finance the cost of a new unit in the city power house.

The junior branch of St. Michael's Anglican Women's Auxiliary here has elected officers as follows for the year: Superintendents, Mrs. H. Douglas and Mrs. J. Campbell; secretary, Frances Saunders; treasurer, Dorothy Saunders.

The St. Michael's Church Women's Auxiliary has elected officers as follows: President, Mrs. H. Wilson; vice-presidents, Mrs. Newman and Mrs. G. C. Perkins; secretary, Mrs. H. Douglas; treasurer, Mrs. F. A. MacCallum; Dorcas secretary, Mrs. Van Somers; Thanksgiving secretary, Mrs. G. C. Perkins; Living Message secretary, Mrs. Little; visiting committee, Mrs. H. Brown, Mrs. G. Oliver and Mrs. L. Blair.

Mrs. Arthur Leith left on Sunday for Calgary, where she will spend three months visiting with her parents.

The ballroom of the Prince George Hotel has been secured by Postmaster Wimbles to be used as additional accommodation for delivery of mail during the expected forthcoming Christmas rush.

LEAGUE IS STILL TIED

High School and Big Four to Play Off For Intermediate Hoop Title

Two Intermediate League basketball games were played last evening in the Exhibition Hall. High School easily beating Naval Reserve 70 to 14 in one, while Big Four won 21 to 29 over Bankers in the second which was a tight contest. Only a small crowd of fans was in attendance because of the inclement weather. R. B. Skinner refereed one game and George Mitchell the other.

As a result of the playing of these games, High School and Big Four are still tied in the standing and will meet again to decide the leadership of the first half of the season.

Individual scoring in the Bankers-Big Four game was as follows: Bankers—E. Barlow, 8; Joe Scott, 6; F. Burdette; C. Donaldson, 2; J. Underwood, 8; H. Macdonald, 5; total, 29.

Big Four—D. Stalker, 6; R. Stalker, 4; E. Smith, 10; J. McNulty, 8; A. Cross, 3; F. Dingwell, 2; total, 31.

The record of scoring in the High School-Navy game was not kept.

League standings for the first half of the season so far are as follows:

Sport Chat

Billy Munroe, Prince George fight promoter, is making arrangements to stage in the interior town on New Year's Day the biggest boxing card ever presented there. In the main event, Oliver Kroeg of Giscome and Pierre Rivers of Hutton, two husky district loggers, will display their wares in a ten round battle. Keen interest is being taken in this affair and a good deal of money is being wagered on the outcome. It is said, Rivers comes from Luxembourg, France, and did considerable boxing in the Old Country. They are still talking in Prince George about matching Jim Jacobsen of Giscome with Benny Wendle of Prince Rupert.

Arrangements are being made for the opening hockey game of the season at Prince George on Christmas Day. Work-outs are being held regularly three times a week and the players are reported to be showing up well, assuring a good fast game for the opener. The teams for this encounter will be chosen tomorrow. Hockey is rather late in getting started in Prince George this year owing to the long spell of mild weather before winter conditions set in about two weeks ago.

Vandals are leading the men's senior basketball league at Smithers with seven wins and two losses while High School is in second place with six wins and two defeats. Telkwa and Boku have won but twice, the former having been beaten six times and the latter seven. Telkwa, however, is making a much better showing in the ladies' league in which that town is leading with six wins and two losses. Pirates are second with six and three. High School is third with five wins and four defeats while the Whoopee team has failed to win once and has been beaten eight times.

The ballyhoo drums are booming for Baby Face Jimmy McLarnin, that venomous little Vancouver fighter with the smile of an Irish cherub. The clouting Celt from the Pacific Coast seems certain now to head the sparkling card of attractions building for the great outdoor "shots" of next summer. Jimmy has been assured a belt at Jack Fields' welterweight title in one of the big ball parks in New York if he can dispose of one more headliner with the ferocity and deadly punching power that swept Ruby Goldstein out of the ring in two rounds last week.

Al Foreman is seeking a return bout with Billy Townsend. The defeated champion puts it this way: "I think my showing was good enough to warrant a return match. I risked my title and lost it. If Townsend proposes to be a fighting champion he can hardly ignore my claims for a chance to redeem myself. I will fight him under any reasonable circumstances. I want a chance to prove to my friends that I am better than I seemed last Friday night. I do not care for alibis. Townsend won and that's alright with me. I wasn't at my best. I was worried, too, about my left eye and that made me cautious in using my left hand which is probably my best offensive weapon. I will welcome a chance to fight Townsend again at any time. If Townsend wants to go south I'll take the fight at any date he names. Twenty-four hours notice is good enough for me if they object to delay. I know I can beat him when I'm at my best."

Presbyterian Xmas Tree Entertainment

Large Audience at Affair Last Night; Program and Visit of Santa Claus

Under the direction of John E. Davey, superintendent, and the teachers, the annual Christmas Tree entertainment of the Sunday School of First Presbyterian Church took place last evening, a large audience being present. Santa Claus, of course, paid his visit to the delight of all and gifts and sweets were distributed from his lavish hand. Prior to this however, there was a very enjoyable program which included the following numbers by the children: Recitation "Sing a Song of Stockings," Primary Class. Recitation, Betty Bremner. Recitation, Betty Brown. Violin Solo, "Star of the East," Malta Stepp. Vocal solo Helen Fuller, accompanied by Katherine McMeekin. Recitation, Donald Eby. Piano solo, Hugh McKenzie. Recitation, Dorothy O'Neill. Rev. Thomas McConnell, the pastor, presided.

On With the Dance the Latest Catfish Craw

(Vancouver Star) On with the dance, let joy be unconfined! Certainly something is needed to unconfine the joy of the dance, for anything more lugubrious than the gyrations of the present generation would be hard to find. However relief is at hand. One of the ladies of the chorus in a Broadway show has invented the "Cat Burglar Craw," which is said to be "bright, vigorous and full of pep."

True, the name of the new dance does not suggest anything rollicking. The stealthy crawl of the cat burglar transmuted into dance steps, however, may be something else yet again. Possibly it is, but people who think real dancing went out of fashion about 1903 will need to be convinced ocularily that the "Craw" is any improvement on the present methods of conveying one's partner over a waxed floor.

Locomotives For the West

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—Western Canada will benefit materially by the locomotive construction program just announced by the Canadian National Railways. Orders have been placed for thirty new locomotives for passenger and freight service, and of these, twenty-eight will go into use in the western region of the system. In addition to this, five switching engines are now in the course of construction. At the Canadian National shops in Winnipeg, for service in the west.

ABOVE is the photographic record of an unusual test carried out with a car in a refrigerating chamber of the Pacific Coast Terminals Ltd. The engine, after being 50 hours in a temperature of 20 degrees Fahrenheit (12 degrees of frost), started perfectly in less than half a second... proving conclusively, and without doubt, the volatile and flashlike efficiency of Home "Winter Grade" Gas.

This perfectly balanced cold weather gasoline is the result of careful study of driving requirements under inclement and frigid conditions and is proven by test the finest Winter gasoline obtainable.

THIS flag stands for Home Quality Gasoline and Oil Products. It is the mark and emblem of a national British Columbia industry owned by British Columbians and controlled by British Columbia capital.

"A vein of weakness in this, I suppose," he began slowly, "of advancing age and ineptitude lately, Miss Brown, for the first time in my life, I have felt, I will not say the need of, but the desire of a confidante. Accidentally you know already more than any one else of the internal affairs here, except for our X.Y.O. friend at Scotland Yard and Nicholson at the War Office. Some of these affairs we are engaged upon may seem to you a little trivial, I will tell you the great object of all our work now and for the last week. We want to detach the respectables as far as possible from foreign influence.

"Last night's incident was only one of several. At every opportunity we are doing our best to discredit these fellows. There is nothing puts up the back of the workman more than to have it proved to him that those who are supposed to be his leaders and friends are playing the fool in serious times, like Bretskopf last night. I hear, by the bye, that Bretskopf, or the leader of what they call the Action Committee, has offered secretly 10,000 pounds for distribution among the press to make as light as possible of last night's business.

"That won't make any difference?" Miss Brown asked anxiously. Dessiter smiled. "What do you think? There's no influence in the world can change the tone of a single paragraph in any paper. Tonight Bretskopf's episode will appear in great headlines."

"Supposing you succeed," Miss Brown asked — "supposing these envoys are discredited—do you think that the trouble will pass over?" "I do," Dessiter assured her. "I have come to the conclusion—and today I think I know more about it than any other man alive—that with all the blood and thunder talk in the parks, and these meetings throughout the whole country, despite these frothy-mouthed 'leaders,' there is no revolutionary spirit in this country."

The private telephone rang. Miss Brown received a cryptic message and passed the receiver to her chief. "From Downing Street," she announced. Dessiter listened for a moment and spoke almost in monosyllables. "Miss Brown," he said, "you understand, I know, after our conversation, that I have every confidence in you—every confidence and a great deal of interest."

"I am very proud to think so," Colonel Dessiter, Miss Brown admitted. "I want you now, therefore," he went on kindly, "not to be hurt but to put on your hat and coat—very nice new hat and coat by the bye—and hurry out. Go anywhere you like for an hour, and if you meet any one whom you recognize on your way here, forget them."

Miss Brown struggled into her coat after a regretful glance toward her typewriter. "There's a great deal of work to be done," she observed. "Plenty of time later on." Dessiter assured her. "One hour, mind. Why not go for a walk? You look a little pale."

Miss Brown took her leave and descended the stairs toward the lift, very demure, very quiet and unobtrusive. As she reached it, however, with her finger upon the bell, it swung up into its place and she was conscious of three men stepping out. She stood on one side, dropping her eyes at once as she noticed their curious glances. She recognized all three and went on her way with a little smile of reflected glory.

Miss Brown walked upon the Embankment watched the sea gulls hovering over the gray water and scavenging in the gutters by her side for food. No rain was falling, but the air was damp and cold and there were signs of fog over the city. After a brief progress eastward she turned her back and walked the other way, passed Scotland Yard, looked up toward Downing Street and paused for some time to gaze at the Houses of Parliament.

The inner forces of life to which one pays no attention in one's day-by-day existence, and which Miss Brown studiously ignored, seemed suddenly wonderful things. There was a branch of X.Y.O. in one of the rooms of that great building to her right. She envisaged it all. She herself was developing a miniature replica: files of reports from every one of the great industrial centres, the names of the possible strike leaders, cuttings of speeches from the local papers, an account of the men themselves, their real aims and character.

There was a list on the other side, too—a blacklist of employers, a growing compendium of information which no one had ever troubled to collect before. Then there was the foreign branch with its phantasmagoria of unending detail punctuated by blood-curdling coldly dramatic records of unbelievable happenings. With a human little thrill, so strangely out of accord with the gray mistiness of her surroundings, she remembered those passionate hours when she had sat at the table and taken down into quaint and secret symbols the story of what might have been Dessiter's dying revelations. There was the sketch of Malakoff—how well she remembered it—Malakoff, stripped naked, the man, his cunning viciousness, his sinister malignity. There was the analysis of Bretskopf too—not pleasant reading. Some of it had been broadcast within the last few days—far-seeing preparations for what was to come.

There was the story of China—a closed chapter now—the story of the moment when the whole ferment of black fury and evil intent had been focused from that crime-drenched city in Russia upon England; stories of secret shipments of arms, of great stores of food brought in different capitals, shipped in different manners, to different warehouses, cases of inflammatory pamphlets to be translated copied and duplicated until they lay like poisonous but phantom fungi upon the land.

And behind all these revelations the figure of the man who had defied the secret services of the world and passed from capital to capital with an ever-increasing price upon his head, a man unrecognized among the great leaders of the cause for which he toiled, but a man whose name spelled terror to those who wielded their thunderbolts in the caverns of the underworld.

Miss Brown bought a newspaper and, notwithstanding the cold, sat down upon the edge of a moisture beaded seat while she read.

RAID IN NIGHT CLUB

Serge Malakoff, Bretskopf and Krassel Fined For Drinking With Women After Hours

Miss Brown, after her return to Whitehall, found the conference over and Dessiter himself absent. The pile of work by the side of her desk, however, had increased amazingly, and she started at once. With a keen sensation of pleasure she realized as she glanced through some of the letters to which she was to reply how completely she was trusted. At 1 o'clock Mergen appeared from somewhere in those mysterious premises beyond and brought her some luncheon upon a tray. "Colonel Dessiter thought you probably wouldn't go out, madam," he said. "So we've done the best we could for you."

With an omelette, some cold meat, rolls and butter, some baked apples and half a bottle of claret, as compared with the bun and cup of coffee which Miss Brown had been contemplating, she found herself accepting the situation with equanimity. "Do you know what time Colonel Dessiter is expected back?" she inquired.

"He was not able to say himself, madam," the man replied. Miss Brown lunched moderately and with discretion, yet with a healthy appetite. When she had finished she recommended her work. She was disturbed by neither visitors nor telephone calls. Toward 5 o'clock Mergen brought her in some tea and a plate of hot toast, at neither of which she glanced. He lingered for a moment.

"If you will pardon the liberty, madam," he ventured, "your typewriter has been going since half-past one, and it is now 5 o'clock. Might I suggest that you have your tea over here by the fire and rest for a time?"

Miss Brown was suddenly aware that she was tired, physically weary, yet mentally stimulated by the continual reminders in her work of this amazing world into which she had plunged. She accepted Mergen's suggestion with a little gesture of relief, sipped her tea and munched her toast, curled up in an easy-chair near the fire. A pleasant and most insidious drowsiness possessed her. There was something which seemed like a mist before her eyes, a pleasant gliding away of the senses—rest.

She sat up with a start. She was conscious of the queerest, most unfamiliar sensation in the world, her heart was beating fast, the blood racing through her veins as though to some strange sort of music. A few feet away from her, in the darkened room, standing before the fire with his hands behind his back, was Dessiter.

"Heavens, have I been asleep?" Miss Brown exclaimed, terrified. "It would appear so," was the noncommittal reply. Again there was that surge of strange feeling. She was puzzled, half comatose, half bewildered. "How long have you been here?" she asked, rising to her feet.

"Some five or ten minutes," "I am really very sorry," she confessed, "I worked without stopping all the afternoon, and I thought I'd have my tea by the fire. I never sleep in the daytime. I can't think what happened to me."

"In any case," he said, "you have done a very excellent day's work already. I have been looking through some of it. I congratulate you. I fail to find a single error. Your letters, too, express exactly what I intended to convey."

Miss Brown turned on the light and looked across at him gratefully. "It is very pleasant to hear you say so."

"As a matter of fact," he observed, making his way toward the inevitable cigarette box, "I can't think how I managed before you came. They used to send me up special young men from one of the departments, but none of my work was ever done so quickly or so well."

Miss Brown felt extraordinarily light-hearted. Apart from the joy of his praise, there was something else—a little singing still in the blood, a quivering of the senses for which she could not account. The wildest ideas found their furtive way into her mind.

She had had a dream—of course it had been a dream. She glanced up and looked half inquiringly across the room. Dessiter had resumed his place upon the hearthrug, and their eyes met. His long, oval face seemed to gleam whiter than ever through the shadows, but his eyes had lost their steely expression. Suddenly he nodded thoughtfully as though in reply to Miss Brown's unspoken question.

"Yes, I did," he confessed. "I hope you're not angry."

POLITICIANS ENTER

A journalist idling about Downing Street in search of copy described the exodus of the various members of the Cabinet Council from No. 10 a few days later as the "half-terrified, half-stupefied exit of a flock of sheep with their dreaded yet revered canine protector at their heels." Certainly, though neither novelist nor journalist has ever presumed to attempt to disclose what may have taken place at a Cabinet Council, the events which immediately followed it clearly indicated the fact that it had been of a startling nature. Most of the little company made their hesitating way toward Westminster.

The Prime Minister, attended by a faithful subordinate, stepped into a taxicab and demanded to be driven to the Carlton. Safely unscanned in the smoking room, the former ordered a whisky and soda, filled his pipe and leaned back in his easy chair. The world would have loved to have heard broadcast the first words of the Premier after the astounding events of the afternoon. Only the waiter who brought the whisky and soda and his companion, seated in the opposite easy chair, were privileged to hear them.

"Well, I'm damned!" His subordinate, himself a cabinet minister of high rank and unaddicted to the use of strong language, stretched himself out in his chair and looked helplessly up at the ceiling. His expression was still that of a man stricken dumb by the unexpected.

"What do you make of it all?" the Prime Minister demanded. His companion glanced round the room.

"At first I thought it was a bluff," he declared. "I am not sure that I don't think so now. In any case, it was the most outrageous attack upon a statesman of established reputation which I have ever heard from a young man attending his first Cabinet Council meeting."

The Prime Minister sighed. "Marabels has thrown a bomb-shell and no mistake. We are face to face with the worst crisis in history."

"His ultimatum is all very well," the other remarked, "but we still have our majority in the House of Commons."

"That isn't the point. Do you believe that we still have it in the country? Of course we have not. We're a well-meaning lot of guffers, Henry—that's what we've proved ourselves to be."

"What exactly are Marabels' demands?"

"The Prime Minister smoked furiously for a moment. "Demands such as have never before been made to any Prime Minister of an established government," he said, "a course of action as he may dictate."

"In other words, he is to be Prime Minister," the other remarked. "Precisely, only he realizes the fact that there can be no general election just now. He wants to govern through me without it. I am to wear the sheep's head and he's to go the roaring."

"When are you going to see him again?" "At my house at midnight," the Prime Minister replied, with a grimace. "He insists upon it that no other minister is present. The only person he wants to bring with him is Dessiter, head of our new department at the Home Office, which, by the bye, was his idea."

At 11 o'clock that night Miss Brown was comfortably tucked up in bed, her curtains discreetly drawn, but her window a few inches open, the clothes which she had discarded neatly folded up on one chair, the clothes which she proposed to wear in the morning similarly arranged upon another. There were counted out ready for her bath in the morning six pennies on the corner of the mantelpiece, the kettle filled standing by the side of the stove. Miss Brown was peacefully sleeping when she was awakened by the sound of a motorcar stopping outside, and the shrill summons of the electric bell. She sat up in bed, remembered her night dress—one of her recent purchases, which she had secretly considered immodestly transparent and décolleté—and sliding out of bed, hurried into a dressing-gown she opened the door upon the chain and peered out. It was Mergen who stood there, his hat in his hand, his manner apologetic.

"Very sorry, Miss Brown," he announced, "but the Chief wants you at Whitehall at once. He wants you to go with him to a conference."

"You will have to give me ten minutes," Miss Brown decided calmly.

"That will do very nicely, miss," Miss Brown hurried back to her room, and in very little more than ten minutes she had prescribed what to do again and seated in the car. It was barely twenty minutes to 12 when she presented herself at headquarters. Dessiter was lounging in his chair by the fire; opposite him was a man whose appearance was vaguely familiar to her—a tall, sturdy man of fair complexion, clean-shaven, with features which seemed carved of granite.

BAPTISTS XMAS TREE

Large Gathering at Church Last Night For Interesting and Enjoyable Event

A large audience filled the auditorium of the Baptist Church last evening on the occasion of its annual Sunday School Christmas Tree and entertainment. The program was confined entirely to the scholars and the talent displayed was of the highest order. Santa arrived in due course and presented every scholar with a gift and a bag of candy. A feature was the presentation by W. Vaughan Davies of a gift to each of his junior choir members, who in turn, surprised him with a gift of a silver knife to which he suitably replied. All present proclaimed the evening to be one of the most enjoyable affairs of its kind in a long while. Following was the program:

Grand selection Tom Johnstone, Ken Green, Bud Green and Bishop Thibaut.

Recitation, Billy Smith. Violin Solo, Phyllis Hamblin. Vocal Duet, Bob and Dave Houston.

Recitation, Amy Armstrong. Dialogue, Katharine Waisel Class.

tem made people dishonest. The man who was honest often found it difficult to secure a position. However, the present system was coming to an end. It carried with it the germs of its own destruction.

Mr. Shenton was not advocating any revolutionary measures. He urged that changes be brought about constitutionally. People should educate themselves to understand and to proceed in a constitutional way.

Rev. A. Wilson Rev. A. Wilson dealt with the labor question from a different angle. He gave a rather long and very interesting address in which he proposed a toast to the labor forces of Prince Rupert.

Mr. Wilson then dealt with the question of temperance. He said many had learned a lesson at Winnipeg a few years ago. They had made up their minds to study and keep clear brains.

The speaker mentioned the need of hard work. The members of the present British cabinet were those who had no eight-hour day. They had worked sixteen and twenty hours to fit themselves for their present positions.

S. D. Macdonald Replying to the toast to the labor movement, S. D. Macdonald, president of the Trades and Labor Council, traced the history of the local labor movement.

Members For District After Alderman Rudderham had spoken briefly, J. C. Brady, M.P., spoke on the question of unemployment. He argued that every man was entitled to the right to work for fair wages.

WATERFRONT WHIFFS

Hope Given Up For Kanatak; Hunt Concern Buys Nelson Lease; Pete Thompson to Build New Halibutter

Having searched the entire region around the Gulf of Alaska, including the dangerous storm-swept coast from Yakutat Bay to Cape St. Elias, the Attu and the Rainier returned to Ketchikan recently without finding the slightest trace of the ill-fated halibut boat Kanatak, or her crew of seven. Practically all hope of finding the crew of the Kantak is now gone. According to Captain Wold of the Attu, which passed through here, whose brother, Conrad Wold, was the skipper on the Kanatak, every possible court on the waterfront near the station and docks. The work includes the erection of a small club house for members' convenience and storing of equipment. Other railway recreational facilities, including the softball and horseshoe pitching grounds are to undergo improvements, in addition to the establishment of the lawn bowling green.

Pacific Salvage Co's power tug Salvage Princess, Capt. Frank Tyler, left at noon Thursday for Vancouver, where the crew will spend the Christmas holidays, the boat returning north early in the New Year with a tow. Also making the trip south on the Salvage Princess are Joe Desmuller, one of the company's skippers, and Joe Leon, owner of the trolling boat Spot.

Gam non & Watt's seineboat Zenardi returned to port last Sunday afternoon after having made a hunting trip to the north arm of Porcher Island with Dr. L. W. Kergin, Milton Gonzales, Capt. J. R. Elfert and Robert Blance on board. The party was away two days and bagged four deer.

Pacific Salvage Co's power vessels Billmor and Pachena were busy at the end of last week and the first of this week freighting winter provisions, machinery and building material to the Power Corporation of Canada's power house construction camp at Falls Creek, up the Ecstall River. It was necessary for the boats to break through the ice on the Ecstall River to reach their destination.

There is a crew of about 80 men now employed at Falls River, where work preliminary to the construction of the dam and power house is now well under way. A small hydro-electric power plant has already been installed there for use in supplying power for the driving of hoists and other machinery which will be used in the big construction operations.

Probably another 40 men are employed on the clearing and slashing of the transmission line between the city and Falls River, which will be 64 miles long. About half a dozen small fishing boats and their crews are employed on this work, which is in progress at various points along the route which follows via Cloyah Bay and Prudhomme Lake overland to Tyee, whence it will cross the Skeena River and then follow the east side of the Ecstall River to Falls River.

The work, while going on rather quietly and out of sight of the public, is already proving quite extensive.

Improving Tennis Court
Extensive improvements are being made to the Canadian National Recreation Association's tennis court.

Oiler Besner the lease adjoining the company's present premises on the Prince Rupert waterfront. This is the property which has been occupied for the past two years by the Nelson Trading Co., which, it is understood, is retiring from the ship chandlery business. The building on the property is bought outright by the Hunt concern, which has no immediate plans for use of the property, but will merely hold it meantime.

The fish exchange, which has occupied quarters in the Nelson premises, will, it is planned, be moved to the Hunt building, which is now in process of being extended. A new face will be built to the front of the store premises. The work is being carried out by the Pacific Stevedoring Co. under contract.

Capt. Pete Thompson, who lost his boat Verna down the coast from Prince Rupert last fall, is negotiating with the Prince Rupert drydock for the construction of a new 54-foot halibut vessel somewhat similar to Capt. Dan Larsen's Capella I. It is proposed to instal a 54 h.p. Garner full diesel engine. Formal announcement of the letting of the contract is expected to be made in the very near future.

Pretty Wedding At Stuart River Central Interior

VANDERHOOF, Dec. 21.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Davidson of Stuart River was the scene of a pretty wedding, when their only daughter, Margaret Sarah, became the bride of Alfred James Vinson, second son of Mr. and Mrs. George Vinson also of Stuart River. The service was performed by Rev. S. C. Steer, under a white wedding veil and arch of pink roses. The bride was given in marriage by her father and made a pretty picture in her wedding gown of triumph blue crepe de chine fashioned with a high waist line, and caught at the right side with a charming bow. A cape collar, draped on the shoulders, was finished in front with a bow of the same material. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses tied with white satin ribbon. In her hair she wore a bandeau of orange blossoms and white ribbon. She was attended by Miss Dorothy H. Baxter and Miss Dorothy Urquhart, who were gowned in dark toned silks, their dresses being finished alike with corsage bouquets of pink sweet peas and white roses. The bridegroom was supported by Lawrence Reid.

Following the service a buffet supper was daintily served by friends of the happy couple. The bride cut the three-tier wedding cake to the round of applause from the assembled guests. During the social hour that followed Mr. and Mrs. Vinson received the congratulations of the assembly voiced by the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Vinson will take up their residence in the Stuart River district.

Interesting Xmas Edition Is Issued At Prince George

The Prince George Citizen has issued an interesting rotogravure section in connection with a special Christmas number of the interior paper which has just come to hand.

Featuring the special section is a long article setting forth the advantages and possibilities of Prince George as "The Metropolis of the Central Interior." Pictures include a view of the railway bridge over the Fraser River, an aerial bird's eye view of the city as well as pictures taken from the air of Summit Lake, Fort McLeod and other city views. There is also a picture of the Baron Byng and King George school houses there.

CANADA'S FOREST AREA

The total forest area of Canada is estimated to be 1,151,454 square miles. Of this area, 885,880 square miles are productive and accessible; a little over one-third of this area bears timber of merchantable size; the remainder carries young growth not yet fit for use.

Protection Plus Investment

"If I had invested all my earnings with your company until now I would have been away ahead of the game."

The above is a statement received from one of our policyholders whose policy matured recently.

He figured the profits realized on his good investments, including bonds, mortgages and stocks, etc., also the losses sustained from poor investment, then compared them with the returns from his Sun Life Policy and discovered:

1. That he had made more profits from his Sun Life Endowment Policy.
2. That his mind was free from worry connected with ordinary investments.
3. He felt safe and happy because he and his family were protected all the time.

His Sun Life Policy proved to be not only a guard against death or disability, but a first-class investment also.
