

Premier Mackenzie King Addresses Huge Crowd at Theatre on Work of Government; On Local Issues

Peace River Western Outlet to Be Speeded Up and New Light Shed On Matters of Local and National Interest

Giving a thrilling account of how Canada's prosperity had been fostered under eight years of Liberal rule and predicting, though making no definite promises, that the visions of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier would soon be realized and that Prince Rupert would come ere long to share more fully in that prosperity, telling how his government since 1921 had changed an annual governmental deficit into a substantial surplus by means of which progress had been made in paying off the national debt including the immense obligations arising from the World War, describing how a sane tariff policy, ever of a downward trend, and development of amicable relations with Canada's three great neighbors—Japan, United States and France—had increased the favorable trade balance of the Dominion by leaps and bounds, making a stirring appeal that racial prejudices be discouraged and peace be brought about, and concluding with a rousing declaration that his policy would ever be to keep Canada an independent member of that great commonwealth of nations—the British Empire—and that he would never countenance, but, on the contrary, would boldly repel, any moves that might be made to have this Dominion annexed to the United States or become an independent nation of itself. Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Canada's prime minister, delivered before a large audience which crowded into every nook and cranny available in the spacious Capitol Theatre on Saturday evening one of the most, if not the most, impressive and masterly public addresses it has ever been the privilege of Prince Rupert people to hear. Although he had visited and spoken in this city on two previous occasions, the prime minister was never heard here to better advantage. His oration was at the same time eloquent and confidence inspiring and it would be few that were not deeply impressed thereby.

The interest that was taken in the Premier's visit was well evidenced by the large throng that, despite the inclemency of the weather, turned out to hear him. The meeting was billed to open at 8:30 p.m., but, a full half an hour before that time, seating capacity of the auditorium was virtually filled, late comers being compelled to take overflow seats on the stage and in the wings while, indeed, entry had to be denied to many.

Mayor S. P. McMordie occupied the chair and other speakers, besides the Prime Minister, were Olof Hanson, Liberal candidate for Skeena in the next federal election, Mr. Baldwin, secretary to the Premier, and T. D. Pattullo, M.L.A. for Prince Rupert and leader of the Liberal party in the provincial field. Senator Andrew Haydon was also to have spoken but a cold prevented him from doing so although he took a place on the platform. For an hour before the meetings,

VICTORIA ARENA IS DESTROYED

Decision Will Be Made Tomorrow as to What to Do With Hockey Team

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—Victoria arena, the home of the Victoria Hockey Club, was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. The origin of the fire is not known.

A meeting of the hockey league directors will be held in Seattle tomorrow to decide the future of the Victoria team. Frank Patrick, president of the league, said the meeting would decide on one of three plans. Either they would divide the Victoria players between the Vancouver, Seattle and Portland teams and continue as a three-team league; maintain the local team intact and play a schedule in the other three cities; or dispose of the players and franchise to a syndicate in Tacoma, Washington, which has arranged for hockey for several years.

PREMIER'S RECEPTION

Stirring Welcome Given Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King By Local Citizens on Saturday

Inspired by the tremendous enthusiasm which has been engendered here to make Prince Rupert the Pacific coast rail outlet for the Peace River, an assemblage of at least a thousand local citizens of all political creed was at the railway station on Saturday afternoon to give a stirring reception to Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, on his arrival from the east. Under the leadership of J. S. Wilson, Prince Rupert's new Peace River yell was cried by hundreds of voices. The presence of the Boys' Band, under Bandmaster Thomas Wilson, further enlivened the occasion. As the Premier stepped from his private car to the station platform, "O Canada" was played.

One of the first to meet Premier King was J. C. Brady, M.P. who had a brief conversation with the first minister before Mayor McMordie briefly introduced him to the crowd.

Premier King gave a brief talk in which he stated the great pleasure it was for him to be once again on the Pacific Coast and in the great city of Prince Rupert which was putting up such a manly fight for recognition. Mr. King stated that this port was ever becoming more important in the affairs of the Dominion and he had much confidence as to its future.

As for the Peace River yell, the Premier urged that it be sounded not only in Prince Rupert and to him but all over the length and breadth of Canada.

After his brief talk, the Premier shook hands with many of the assembled citizens, being introduced to them by Mayor McMordie and representatives of various committees and bodies which were there.

T. D. Pattullo, M.L.A. for Prince Rupert and British Columbia Liberal leader, was also on hand to meet the Premier.

STEEL LOST AT SEATTLE

Contract at Local Dry Dock Will Be Delayed Two Months as Result of Scow Capsizing

Four hundred tons of steel from Philadelphia, which was to have been used in the construction at the local dry dock of a tug and barge for use of the Canadian National Railways on Okanagan Lake, was lost on Saturday when a scow containing the material capsized in Seattle Harbor. The steel was about to be shipped from the southern port to Prince Rupert.

The loss of the steel will mean a delay of at least two months in getting the work started at the local yard.

Huge Crowd Gathers To Pay Silent Respect To Those Who Fought and Died In the Great War

Prince Rupert paid a long outstanding obligation to its War Dead yesterday morning. With an impressive service before an assemblage of thousands of citizens and under grey skies which seemed to attune themselves to the solemnity of the occasion, the cenotaph to those men from this city and district who made the supreme sacrifice in the hundreds were there to pay tribute to comrades who responded briefly. He referred to the public spiritedness of Prince Rupert people in erecting the cenotaph and gave assurance that it would ever be cared for by the government.

While a lament was played by the Pipe Band, in charge of Pipe Major James Sturgeon, representatives of organizations and citizens went forward to lay wreaths and flowers at the base of the cenotaph. The impressive ceremonies concluded with the sounding of "The Reveille" by Bugler Rance and the singing of "God Save the King."

Among those laying wreaths at the memorial were: Officers and men of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, First North B. C. Regiment, Canadian Legion, Naval Cadets, Loyal Orange Lodge, "Oe H. One Hundred Different Issues Made New Low Records Today

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The market closed at a new bottom price today after a fresh flood of liquidation carried prices of scores of leading issues down ten to twelve dollars a share. Large declines were recorded in a few ordinarily inactive specialties. One hundred stocks sold at new lows for the year. Total sales were nearly six and a half millions. Business executives continued to take measures to restore confidence in general business.

Merritt Mayor Suffocated In His Own Home

MERRITT, Nov. 12.—G. S. Armstrong, mayor of Merritt and head of the Armstrong Department store, suffocated to death when his house caught fire about eight o'clock this morning. Neighbors found him dead in bed when they entered the house after the smoke had been seen. The building afterwards burned down. He was alone at the time, his wife being away visiting two daughters in Vancouver.

Hon. J. A. Robb Is Called by Death and Premier Cancels Several of His Engagements Out of Respect

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—Hon. J. A. Robb, minister of finance and one of the outstanding members of the Mackenzie King Government, died here yesterday from lobar pneumonia. He was in Toronto on a visit when he was taken ill at the hotel.

Mr. Robb was born near Huntington, Quebec, in August, 1859, a farm boy. He became minister of Trade and Commerce in 1921, acting Minister of finance in 1924, and the following year stepped in to Mr. Fielding's shoes permanently holding the position until his death yesterday.

Mr. Robb's death came at five minutes past four yesterday afternoon. He was thought to have been recovering from his illness but a stroke of apoplexy seized him early in the afternoon and was the final cause of death.

In the morning it was reported that Mr. Robb had passed a comfortable night and his physician had stated that "barring complications" he thought he was out of danger.

Mrs. Robb, a sister and other relatives were with him when he passed away. The body was shipped to Valleyfield, Quebec, where burial will take place tomorrow afternoon. It will be private and as simple as possible.

S.S. PRINCE GEORGE (via wireless to Vancouver)—Premier Mackenzie King said last night on learning of Mr. Robb's death that he would ask for postponement of the Vancouver Board of Trade dinner tonight to Friday night and cancellation of the civic reception. The Premier will visit Victoria but will ask that the Government reception tomorrow night be dispensed with. The public meeting at Vancouver Friday will be held as arranged.

Wireless messages from the Governor General and many prominent Canadians brought condolences to the head of Canada's Government

The Unveiling

"But not all came back," continued Prince Rupert's gallant soldier, "for many sleep in Flanders fields and in the other battlefields of the War. They fought and died for us in order that we might have peace and enjoy the fruits of their great sacrifice. And the people of Prince Rupert have said that they will never be forgotten but that their memory shall be revered for ever more. Therefore, I now unveil this stone to the everlasting memory of the men from Prince Rupert and this district who fell in the Great War."

Following the unveiling ceremony, there was a prayer of general thanksgiving and the Hymn "Lest We Forget" was sung with band accompaniment.

Ex-Mayor S. M. Newton then handed over the memorial to the custody of the provincial government. The cenotaph, Mr. Newton stated, was the result of the free-will offering of the people of Prince Rupert and district to perpetuate the names of those who had laid down their lives in the Great War. The cenotaph was not dedicated to the glorification of war but rather in a spirit of peace. It was hoped that it would prove, however, a shrine of patriotism.

Prince Rupert had been slow, the ex-mayor said, in doing its duty in this matter but it had been due to a difference of opinion as to the form the memorial should take. However, success had been eventually attained in erecting this fine stone. Returned men themselves had been active in bringing it about but citizens had also given generous support. On behalf of the cenotaph committee, he was desirous of giving public thanks to all who had given assistance. Mr. Newton then formally turned the cenotaph over to the provincial government.

LEADER OF OPPOSITION IS ON TOUR

Looks Forward To Very Interesting Session of Legislature Early in New Year

T. D. Pattullo, accompanied by Major S. F. N. Moodie, was here at the week-end in the course of a tour of the province during which they have been meeting the Liberal organizations and getting in touch with the needs of the people.

Mr. Pattullo said he found the province generally making excellent progress. He said they refused to follow the lead of the members of the other party in blue rain talk just because their opponents were in power. He also found the Liberals in excellent spirit. They had held no public meeting on this occasion.

Mr. Pattullo said that when he was a minister he went all over the country and now he was leader of the opposition he was doing the same in order to be in close touch with the people of every section.

"We are looking forward to an intensely interesting session," declared the local member. "The house will probably meet early in the new year and it will be one to be remembered."

GALE TODAY IN BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 12.—There were several scattered deaths, injuries and widespread destitution today from a furious gale which tore over Great Britain and the surrounding seas last night and early today. The wind varied from 50 to 70 miles an hour with occasional gusts of nearly 90 miles velocity.

Storm conditions improved with the dawn, the sun shining brilliantly on broken roofs, smashed chimney pots, bill boards thrown down, windows blown in, and Armistice Day decorations ripped to shreds.

Small coastwise shipping seemed to have suffered severely. The Severn, Dee and Wye Rivers were flooded by a deluge of rain and thousands of acres of agricultural lands were submerged.

PREMIER MACKENZIE KING ADDRESSES HUGE CROWD AT THEATRE ON WORK OF GOVERNMENT; TOUCHES LOCAL ISSUES.

Premier King congratulated T. D. Pattullo on his splendid leadership of the Liberal party in British Columbia and predicted that his ability and determination would rapidly lead him to the premiership of British Columbia. "By the time I come here again," said the Premier amid applause, "I think I may be able to say that that was one prophecy fulfilled."

The Prime Minister also alluded to the untimely death of the late F. G. Dawson, a loss which the Canadian National Railways and the country as a whole shared with Prince Rupert. "But despite the loss, we will all have to try to do better so that, in the end, we may gain."

Premier King then settled down to give the audience a review of Canada's development during the Liberal administration since December, 1921. At that time there was great depression and, with the country heading rapidly toward bankruptcy, there was almost a desperate feeling. No money had been raised by taxation to liquidate the huge war debt and the new government came into office faced with a mortgage of $1,400,000,000. The year before a deficit of $92,000,000 had been added to the debt. First there had to be a balancing of accounts or there would be no credit or prosperity for Canada. Economies were effected and for a time additional taxation was necessary. Bit by bit the country was placed on an even keel and the government began to have surpluses until last year accounts were in such shape that it was possible to reduce the public debt by eight-one million dollars.

"Year after year, we have been able to reduce the debt and, more than that, we have been steadily reducing taxes," declared the Premier. "It was a harder task than had been faced by any previous government of Canada. In the matter of the routine services of government, the cost today was less than in the regime of Sir Robert Borden."

The Premier went on to show how the income tax had been reduced and how the tariff, sales tax, tax on receipts and checks and postage had been cut. Speaking of the tariff, the Premier stated that despite reductions of duty on industrial implements and motors, those industries in Canada were never more prosperous than they were today.

Launching upon a discussion of the transportation situation, the Premier told how he had met all the way from the Alberta boundary with demands for a Pacific Ocean outlet for the Peace River. He realized that that had something to do with the reputation he had received. Speaking of Prince Rupert's fight for the outlet, the Premier said: "You are going about it the right way. To get what you want it is well to let everybody know it." It reminded him of the situation generally in regard to the railways in Canada when the Liberal government came into office in 1921. He told how the several bankrupt lines had been amalgamated, a suitable president secured and a board of directors appointed to administer the system free of political interference. He lauded the record of Sir Henry Thornton.

Laurier's Vision
In the appointment of the board of directors, Prince Rupert had not been forgotten since the government had in mind the carrying out of the visions of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for this port and line. "And we are still anxious to have that vision realized to the full," he declared. The Liberal government had also demanded that Labor be represented on the board.

Whereas, in the first year of consolidation, there had been a deficit of eleven million dollars on operating expenses, this year there was a surplus of $50,000,000.

The Premier told how the Liberal government had restored the Crow's Nest Pass rates to put shipping to the Pacific Coast from the prairies on an equality with the eastbound route. He also told of progress that had been made in branch line construction in spite of opposition from the senate at first.

"Cannot a government that has done all this," asked the Premier, "be entrusted to do what is right in the matter of subsequent developments?"

Speaking of Prince Rupert's claims to being made the Pacific Coast outlet for the Peace River, the Premier said that he did not believe in making promises which might bind his cabinet or Parliament beyond the statement that the selection would be made on that basis of sound business as no one wanted to see a railway started that would become stranded during construction. The intention was to make the two great systems partly responsible so conversations had been held with the heads of both the C.N.R. and C.P.R. railways. They had been urged to hurry up their surveys as the government did not intend to have unnecessary delays. "Unless they can agree on the best way out, the government will see to it that the right measures are taken toward bringing about the necessary

DADDY CAN NOW EAT ANYTHING

He dearly loved a rich tit-bit. The spot was willing, but the flesh was weak. Whenever he ate anything rich, his boys used to say, "Poor dad, he will pay the penalty to-morrow." Read the sequel in his own words:—

"Since taking the regular dose of Kruschen Salts it is quite different, and my boys enjoy themselves seeing me eat what I dare not touch before. My eldest son was the same, but since he has taken Kruschen Salts he can eat and enjoy whatever is put in front of him."

Modern artificial conditions, errors of diet, overwork, lack of exercise, and so on, are bound to have injurious effects in the long run providing due precaution is not taken.

Kruschen Salts should be your safeguard. Besides cleansing the body of impurities gently, surely and painlessly, they possess a vital power of giving new life and vitality to the countless millions of cells of which every body is composed. That is why physicians never hesitate to recommend Kruschen Salts.

extensions and improvements," the Premier declared.

Honest and Sincere
"I hope you will feel that I am at least honest and sincere in the matter," continued the Prime Minister. "I think you can safely leave it to us to do our best for Prince Rupert and the people of B.C. as a whole." (Applause.)

The Premier dealt briefly with local legislation that had been enacted or encouraged by the Liberal government. Old age pensions had been introduced and British Columbia had been the first province to take up the offer of the Dominion government, the most of the other provinces having since fallen in line.

Though tariff had been reduced, the Premier declared, manufactures and industries throughout Canada had increased greatly. He gave figures to show great expansions in British Columbia from 1921 to 1928 in the production of the agricultural, mineral, hydro-electric, manufacturing and new construction industries. The country indeed was going ahead by leaps and bounds while there was also great expansion in trade.

"Trade with the Orient has increased greatly and, as the years go by, it is inevitable that more of it will go by way of Prince Rupert. This port cannot be denied since it has advantages such as being the shortest route. As the trade increases, this route is bound to be used to greater extent."

Japan had now become Canada's third best customer, being second only to Great Britain and the United States.

Premier King revealed some interesting figures with regard to growth of trade at this port. Exports had increased from $1,700,000 in the fiscal year of 1924 to $19,700,000 in 1929 while imports had decreased from $1,260,000 to $1,080,000. Shipping tonnage had increased from 474,000 tons to 630,000 tons. "These figures are remarkably good," said the Premier, "when everything is considered. And these figures but correspond with those for Canada as a whole. Each year, I would venture to say, this community will share more and more in the prosperity of the Dominion."

Home Markets

Regarding Mr. Bennett's talk of home markets, Mr. King wondered how it would work if there were nothing but home markets. "I would say if we have the world markets, the home market will take care of itself. The National Policy was a thing of fifty years ago and may have been all right in those times but would not do today when the whole situation had changed. What was needed now was a policy that would help to get the world markets for Canada, a country which had no peer in natural resources. Only in what Canada sent to other countries, could its own purchasing power be measured.

Mr. Bennett's policy was one of stirring up prejudice against the United States. There was nothing to be gained by fostering prejudice and ill-will, the Premier declared, but to foster goodwill was one way of promoting the peace and happiness of the world.

The trouble with Mr. Bennett and the Conservatives was that they looked upon trade as a matter of warfare while the Liberals looked upon it merely as a matter of exchange. It was all nonsense this talking of somebody being defrauded by any exchange. On the contrary in international commerce as well as in personal buying and selling, both parties to the deal would benefit. Discontinuation of sales to the United States or other countries, as Mr. Bennett suggested when he talked of Canada being deprived of its birthright, would mean there would be no markets. Industries would close down for lack of orders, no men would be employed and Canada would have no purchasing power. The United States, as a matter of fact, paid Canadians money with which they could buy things they wanted which were made in Canada.

Canada, the Premier said, was buying a much larger quantity of raw material from the United States than she was selling to the States. The truth was that both countries were benefitting from the trade as was evidenced by the great growth of manufactures in Canada. Indeed Canada was selling more manufactured goods per capita than was the United States.

Beneficial Policy

The Liberal tariff policy was framed not for the benefit of or to please one group of interests but for the benefit of the people of Canada at large. What the Conservatives wanted was not to protect the home market but to get a monopoly on the home market. Then up would go the prices, the cost of living would increase and implements of production would cost more—and Canada would not be able to get into the world markets on account of high costs. It was up to Canada, instead of doing this, to work instead to win the home markets.

The Conservatives had seized upon a threatened tariff raise in the United States to demand higher tariffs in Canada. Even yet the United States had not raised the tariff and no one knew what would be done. The Canadian Parliament would have been a bright looking lot if it had taken Mr. Bennett's suggestion and kept in session awaiting the result of the United States deliberations. A "cool-headed" attitude was needed, not a "red-blooded" one as Mr. Bennett had suggested, whatever that might be. (Laughter.) Threats would do no good. The Liberal idea was to be friendly, not provocative. "But if they do make a tariff which affects us adversely, we will make changes to protect ourselves. We have told them that. Nothing has been done offensively but in the straight-forward British way." As a matter of fact, England would be more affected by a change in United States tariff than Canada and it had not even been mentioned in the British general election.

What would have been said, if he (Mr. King) had gone to the United States to see Mr. Hoover with a view to bringing about better relations as Premier Macdonald had done Mr. King wondered. "Is it not time that we, too, were reasonable and sensible?"

"I stand by Canada all the time but I am also ready to stand by policies which will keep down enmity between the English-speaking peoples. The peace and happiness of mankind depends much upon that. Ex-Premier Baldwin said he would have gone to the United States just as Premier Macdonald had done."

"I for one always want to see this country a part of the British Empire. It is best for its good, strength and unity that it should be so."

Trade and Peace

At the same time, the Premier declared, world trade could not be separated from world peace. There was always the human as well as the commercial equation.

Premier King dealt with the complete autonomy that had been attained for Canada as a member of the British Empire. "We love Britain none the less because we take on the station and the duties of a self-governing nation," he said.

Dealing with the Fraser River salmon treaty Premier King said the government was ready to put the bill through as soon as the Conservative members from British Columbia, the province vitally affected, were ready. When it had come up at the last session, those Conservatives had raised another American scare. They could not miss a chance to stir up a little more enmity towards the United States. "But, if they (the B.C. Conservative members) do not want it, then it will stay where it is—unpassed," the Premier flatly declared.

"I would always fight against annexation with the United States as being bad for Canada and the British Empire. I would also oppose Canada being completely independent. There is everything to be gained by a strong Canadian nation under the British flag. But in the interests of the British Empire, it is better that we would realize United States is our neighbor and try to live with the Americans in a neighborly way. To understand our neighbors we must have them understand us. Our security lies in the goodwill of the countries around us."

Regarding fish traps, the Premier said that the present policy would continue until public opinion called for its being changed. Requested aids to navigation would be taken up with the minister of marine and fisheries in the hope that there would be success in getting the right thing done speedily.

Referring to Herbert Marler the Canadian minister to Japan whom Mr. Bennett had dubbed a "glorified commercial traveler," Mr. King said he only wished there were more like him. As he had stood and watched the sun set that evening over the waters of the Pacific Ocean and realized that, in Prince Rupert, he was closer to Japan than he could be anywhere else on this coast, he had been prompted to send a message of greeting to Mr. Marler. The people of Japan would hear of that message and would think of Prince Rupert.

In conclusion the Prime Minister expressed his conviction that Prince Rupert was destined to become one of the future great cities of this country and the world. He believed the time was not far distant when this railway line would fulfill the prophecies that had been made westward and, for that reason, the western nations are bound to obtain a large part of the inheritance of the world."

Another ovation was given the Prime Minister as he took his seat after a two hour address.

Olof Hanson, Liberal candidate for Skeena River, who was the first speaker of the evening, said he had no intention of taking up any of the audience's time. He said that it was a business government Canada had today and Mr. King had proven himself a great businessman. He was proud to be a supporter of the best government Canada had ever had. He would be glad to do all he could even if it took his entire time, to further the interests of this city and riding.

Mr. Baldwin, the Premier's secretary, spoke humorously of his duties. It had been with considerable trepidation that he had assumed his office but he was glad to say for Premier King and his ministers that he had found them a hard working and honest lot of men, all of whom were trying to do a good day's work decently. It had proved itself a magnificent administration, whose fine work had surprised the world.

At the conclusion of the meeting, three hearty cheers for His Majesty the King were given on proposal of Premier King. Mr. Pattullo proposed three cheers to Premier King which were also given with gusto. It was no reflection on His Majesty and the Prime Minister, it three cheers for the Prince Rupert - Peace River outlet, proposed by Ald. Theo. Coltart, were even a mite more enthusiastic. For, after all, that was what a lot of people had turned out to hear about.
