Nationalist Party in South Africa Secures Majority of Assembly

No Longer Dependent On Labor Group to Keep Them in Power, So Movements Being Watched With Interest

CAPETOWN, June 14-The Nationalist Party, having emerged victorious from the general election Wednesday, the predominating question now is whether Premier Hertzog will form a purely Nationalist Government or continue to co-operate with the five Cresswell Labor members in another Nationalist-Labor government.

The Nationalists have a majority of two over all parties and are pretty sure to win twelve of the seats yet to be heard from. The present standing is:

Nationalists, 69.

South African Party, 59. Creswell Laborites, 5. National Council Laborites, 3.

The Labor groups sustained a severe defeat. The South African Party is deeply disappointed at the result of the election, as they expected to win.

"Tide of Empire" Is Dramatic Screen Recital of Days When Romance and Fine Deeds Rode the West Together

Peter B. Kyne's romance, "Tide of Empire" at the Capitol tonight, has the huge scope of the epic-it tells of the Spanish dons, relics of an old civilization, swept from their tranquil grandeur by the goldseeking hordes that ushered in a modern civilization.
