Demonstration Planned To Meet Premier Mackenzie King to Impress Him Regard To Peace Outlet

Premier Mackenzie Kir Legislative Libration Saturation of the Libration of et on Saturday by an immense crowd of make a demonstration in favor of Parlie outlet at Prince Rupert. That is ven, the Peace Outlet Committee. The Beggin be there at 3:30 and the whole population of is invited to be present. It is hoped to have the buttons ready by that time and banners will also be prepared to make a noble showing.

The suggestion was made by Alderman Collart at the dinner last night and met with general approval. It must be an impressive demonstration so that it may be effective. It is suggested that at least two thousand people should be present so that the premier would really understand that Prince Rupert people are in earnest in the matter.

"If Adam had walked about the Garden of Eden with his hands in his pockets we should never have heard of him, similarly if we wish to be heard we must take our hands out of our pockets and go to work to gather the fruits that rightly belong to us and which have been forbidden us by the railway managements and by unsympathetic governments. It is a source of great satisfaction throughout the Peace River country to note that Prince Rupert is going about this work so splendidly through the formation of Prince Rupert-Peace River Outlet Association. This portion of Canada heartily appreciates your efforts and will do everything possible to co-operate to the end that the north country, both coast and prairie, may be linked at an early date by rails to provide our most direct outlet to tidewater. M. P. McCaffery Tells of Visit to Site on Ecstal! and Information Received

At the dinner last night to set in motion the campaign for the Peace River outlet. M. P. McCaffery spoke optimistically of the work being done hy said he had just visited Big Falls on the Ecstall River and he found a little village already there and he was told they were about to start cutting a right of way 100 feet wide for the power line to connect with Prince Rupert. On this job 250 men would be employed. Mr. McCaffery also said that he was told there that next year it was planned to spend a million and a half dollars and, they planned to have the work completed by the end of next summer. He knew that the present ponulation of Prince Rupert could not pay the interest on that million and a half dollars so he felt sure something was going to be done to increase it.

Speeches Delivered Preaching Gospel of Co-operation to Secure Just Rights For Prince Rupert in Matter of Railway Connection

One of the most representative and enthusiastic gatherings ever held in Prince Rupert was that which after the banquet last night at the Commodore Cafe heard a number of brief addresses dealing with the question of the connection with the Peace River country by rail. The room was packed, close to 150 people sitting down to a fine repast, and numbers being turned away owing to lack of accommodation. The occasion was a great one and the people of the city responded splendidly.

PEACE RIVER OUTLET CAM-PAIGN IS OPENED WITH MON-STER BANQUET AT WHICH ALL CITY LEADERS PRESENT.

S. D. Macdonald spoke of the former attitude of Labor and capital toward each other. This was all changed. He paid a compliment to the committee that had gone to the Peace River and said he thought they had done better work than any previous delegations that had gone from Prince Rupert. They had preached the gospel that Prince Rupert wanted

Mr. Macdonald said the city was what the people liked to make it. Georgraphically and otherwise they had right on their side in this campaign. The committee should get undivided support. This was one of the best movements yet inaugurated and it was up to the people to get behind it.

Retail Merchants

P. H. Linzey said the aim of the gathering was to arouse interest and general enthusiasm. He trusted that the smoldering embers would be fanned to a flaming fire. The key word was "enthusiasm." It was the greatest asset in life. The enthusiast was able to convince and dominate. Prejudice was trampled under foot and opposition was inundated and swamped. If Prince Rupert had faith in the justice of their demands they should put that faith into action. He had met knockers of whom there were too many in the city. If there was one of them there that night h esuggested he be thrown out. If they failed it would be because of lack of enthusiasm.

Mr. Linzey spoke of the visits of Sir Henry Thornton and of his saying the Canadian National here was their baby. They were sick and tired of this and it was time they got through cutting their teeth. They wanted no more Thornton soothing powders but they wanted the Peace outlet. "If we let Vancouver rob us of our

George Bushby said he knew the people of Vancouver were very keen for this and if they set out for anything they were a hard of to beat. He knew because he had worked with them. Mayor Malkin had given the keynote. He suggested that efforts should be made to educate the people of Vancouver for they were not all unfair. He urged that the justice of Prince Rupert's cause be placed before them. Publicity was a great thing. Corporations were cowards when it came to "vox populi"

Backs to the Wall M. P. McCaffery spoke optimisof the work and influence Power Corporation. He said stances where they should unite as was the case today. They had expected great things from the elevator but had been disappointed. hope with their backs to the wall. If the Peace River connection did not come, Prince Rupert would remain a fishing village. He had been in the city 21 years and he felt this was his last hope. There was no logic in building the railway to Vancouver as only the Vancouver people wanted it and the newspapers of Vancouver. He was ready to go all the way in support of the movement.

J. C. Brady congratulated the chairman on the wonderful response to their call. He did not recall such a representation in Prince Rupert before. Common endeavor could do so much more than individual effort.

Mr. Brady then outlined the steps leading up to the present situation in the Peace River, which led to the Canadian National and the C.P.R. taking the road over jointly. There had been a number of preliminary surveys made and two extensions of branch lines were to be made next year. This he considered a farce. The Canadian National was being made the pawn in the game. The wealth of the Peace River was enormous.

Mr. Brady then went over the grounds on which Prince Rupert claimed the right to have the railway outlet. Strategically and geographically their claims were superior to those of Vancouver. It was a case where they should speak as one voice. It was a grave danger to the country when the great centres obtained control. The 38 per cent of the population in the northern country should unite to secure what they demanded.

The voice of Prince Rupert reached farther than was thought. They had something to fight for and the whole north, including the Peace River itself, would join them in the fight. The people of the Peace demanded an outlet and it was to decide if they were to have the most economic outlet or not. He urged all to join the association

Philip Ray suggested that the committee should use the mails in their advertising campaign. This it was explained had already been under advisement and would be carried out.
